LATER FROM THE SANDWICH ISLANDS—THE KING KILLING HIS PRIVATE SECRETARY—THE REMORSE—EXCITEMENT IN HONOLULU.

[From the San Francisco Bulletin correspondent.]

HONOLULU, October 3, 1859.

The great item of news since the sailing of the last steamer is the Lahaina tragedy, in which his Majesty Kamehameha IV was the principal actor. The King and Queen, accompanied by their suite, among which were three foreigners, viz: G. G. Hopkins, editor of the Pacific Herald, Dr. R. McKibben, surgeon, and H. A. Neilson, private secretary, left here in the latter part of August, on a tour of the Windward Islands, touching first at Lahaina. On the 7th of September, the King, accompanied only by his private secretary, returned to Honolulu on business, and left for Lahaina again on the 8th, where he arrived on the morning of the 10th.

For some reason, unknown at the time to any of his suite, the King, on Saturday, the 10th, appeared unusually morose, acted strangely, and it is said drank freely. On Sunday morning, September 11, about three o'clock, he mustered his boat's crew and went on board the schooner Maria alone, and ordered the captain to get under way for Hawaii. During the day he was very much excited, and drank more than usual. After dark he ordered the captain to return again to Lahaina. When within a few miles of the anchorage, he took his boat's crew, and, giving his servant his pistols, which it is said he had loaded while on board, he started for the shore.

But little is known of the subsequent events, except what is derived from rumor. No one was present, save those attached to his Majesty's suite, and as neither they nor the public journals here have made any statement of the circumstances, the particulars are derived only from vague report. All that is positively ascertained is, that the King shot A. H. Neilson, his private secretary, about 11 o'clock on Sunday night, September 11. It is reported that he arrived on shore about 10 o'clock, and that he ordered his servant to call Hopkins, McKibben, and Neilson; that when they came out he was waiting on the piazza; seemed moody and excited; ordered his servant to bring him his pistols; whipped him and sent him to prison because he did not get them quick enough; that when he received his pistols, he, without assigning any reason, told Neilson that he must die; that Neilson retreated into his house, and that the King followed him up and shot him.

It is also rumored that immediately after the occurrence, the King refused to Mr. McKibben, his surgeon, the privilege of attending Neilson, threatening to shoot him if he went near the house to which Neilson had removed. The next morning, however, he sent for McKibben, and requested him to render Neilson all the assistance in his power. It is said that the King beat the Queen, and that after shooting Neilson, he stood over the Queen, and threatened to shoot both her and his child.

Rumor assigns the cause of the act to jealousy of the Queen—a feeling believed by the entire community to be without a shadow of foundation.

The King, although impetuous, has hitherto conducted himself in such a manner as to win the respect and esteem of the native foreign community; consequently, they were thunderstruck on receiving the news of the tragedy. For days it was the great topic of conversation. Many were indignant that the King, being above the law, should so openly transgress it; but the prevailing feeling was that of regret. Mr. Neilson, immediately after being shot, was removed to a house outside the palace grounds, and Dr. H. B. White was called to dress the wound. The wound, although dangerous, is not considered fatal.

September 27th, the community was thrown into a great excitement by news from Lahaina that the King had resolved to abdicate his throne. It is said he has been overwhelmed with grief ever since this unfortunate occurrence; that he has offered to make Mr. Neilson all amends in his power; that he entirely exonerates the Queen, and insists upon abdicating and submitting himself to trial. The effect of this news was a meeting of the Privy Council, and a petition, numerously signed, praying his Majesty to reconsider his resolution, and not to abdicate.

On Saturday, October 1st, the Polynesian, the Government organ, published the following "By Authority:"

PROCLAMATION.

We hereby proclaim Our pleasure that Our House of Nobles assemble on Monday, the 3d of October, at 11 o'clock A. M., in Our Palace, on important business of Our Kingdom, which We will then submit to them.

Kaahumanu Palace, 1st of October, 1859.

By the King and Kuhina Nui.

J. Kamehameha, Minister of Interior.

The Government organ says:

"We are authorized to state, for the purpose of allaying any anxiety that may exist in the public mind, that the rumors in regard to his Majesty's abdication are, we are happy to say, without foundation."

BURNING OF THE MASTIFF—A THRILLING OCEAN SCENE.

On the 12th September last the ship Achilles left San Francisco, bound for Sydney, New South Wales, and soon caught up with the Mastiff, which had left San Francisco eighteen hours before her. They kept in company till the 15th, when, at 4.15 P. M., the Mastiff was observed to have signals of distress flying, and to be on fire. We sailed for the burning vessel, and lay to close to windward; sent the quarter boat, second officer, and four men to assist in saving life. At about 4.30 P. M. the gig belonging to the Mastiff came alongside with the captain's lady, five gentlemen cabin passengers, and three Chinamen. It was only after coming on board that the position of all on board began to be realized. To witness the prostrate and bleeding forms of the three Chinamen told the means that had to be resorted to to keep them from swamping the boats. By this time they succeeded in launching three boats (they having failed to get their long boat over the side,) which, together with our being so close to the burning ship, seemed to restore some degree of quiet amongst the Chinese, who could be seen in the sea hanging by ropes to the ship's sides. The five gentlemen, cabin passengers, who were saved were: R. H. Dana, Esq., C. C. Harris, George Clifford, J. H. C. Richmond, M. Schonburn.

As soon as all the Chinese, one hundred and seventy-four in number, were got on board, Capt. Hart sent instructions to save provisions, but so rapidly did the flames spread that it was found impossible to save a particle. We then received the crew, twenty-seven in number, seven boxes of treasure, valued at about $100,000, one iron chest, two chronometers, and a small quantity of clothing, a mahogany chest marked "ship Mastiff," in gilt letters, and a few fowls and pigs. At 5.30 P. M. the ship was in flames, and at 7 P. M. the mainmast had fallen over the side. We then hoisted on board two boats and let two go adrift, having so little room on deck and the ship being full of cargo. By this time the ship was in flames fore and aft, and only now, indeed, could be realized the awful doom that awaited all on board that ill-fated ship, had not an all-wise and merciful Providence made us the instruments of their preservation. After consultation with Captain Johnson, as to which way it was best to proceed, it was agreed that we should sail for the Sandwich Islands, and land them at Honolulu. We then made sail with a light breeze from the northeast. Mr. Dana, one of the cabin passengers, read prayers, and all joined in returning thanks for the miraculous deliverance of so many human beings. The following morning muster was made, and the Chinaman counted, when one was found missing. On inquiry among them it was ascertained that after the general rush at the first alarm of fire, one of their number, the head of a company among them, returned between decks to save a large amount of money, and was instantly suffocated. It is understood that the Chinese lost a large amount of treasure. We then took account of stores and water on board, put every one on five pints, and served out to the Chinese one biscuit per day, and some rice and boiled wheat, and continued on with a steady breeze from the eastward, until we arrived at Honolulu, on the 27th, all well.

Signed by Captain Hart and all the officers of the Achilles.

Departure of the Steamer America.

HALIFAX, Nov. 18.—The royal mail steamer America, from Boston for Liverpool, arrived at this port at 2 o'clock this morning, and sailed again this forenoon with New Orleans telegrams of the 17th.

ASTONISHING INCREASE.—In the fall of the year 1857, a single grain of Australian wheat was planted in Noriega Valley, situated in the hills, ten miles south of Oakland, opposite San Francisco. It was carefully cared for, and, in 1858, thirteen ounces of wheat were reaped from the one grain. In 1858, these thirteen ounces of seed were planted in drills, and, the past summer, there were reaped from them one hundred and seventy-five pounds of clean wheat—an increase in the last year of two hundred and thirty fold.
