Important to Travelers Going East. THE early hour, three o'clock in the morning, at which the EXPRESS TRAIN starts for the East, from Pittsburgh, had made it very inconvenient for travelers going by that train, compelling them to be aroused at a most uncomfortable time, (say 2 o'clock A. M.) or else to remain up all night. This inconvenience is now obviated by a late arrangement. That Express Train now breakfasts regularly at LATROBE, instead of the outer depot at Pittsburgh—so that travelers can leave Pittsburgh at 5 o'clock P. M., by the Accommodation, which arrives at Latrobe at 7½ o'clock P. M., pass pleasant quarters there over night at the large and elegant Hotel of Mr. ELDER, breakfast comfortably with the other passengers in the morning, and pass on East by the Express, having DAY TRAVEL ALL THE WAY from Pittsburgh to Philadelphia or Baltimore. Every provision is made at the Hotel, for the accommodation of guests and visitors by those trains. fe17:tf

THE GAVAZZI EXCITEMENT IN QUEBEC.

QUEBEC, June 8th, 1853.

A circumstance which has given rise to some talk and not a little excitement is the 'rowdyism' displayed on the evening of the 6th inst., upon the occasion of one of Father Gavazzi's Lectures, delivered in the new Free Church (Presbyterian) in this city. The subject was "The Inquisition, Ancient and Modern." There is a quarter of the town known as Champlain street, remarkable chiefly and somewhat extensively as the place where those unselfish and energetic men called Crimps "most do congregate." It would hardly be consistent with veracity to say that they are a liberal, frank, or 'fair-play' class of men, or that they are not narrow-minded, vindictive, cunning, and unscrupulous with respect to means to an end. The Lecture alluded to was advertised, and drew an audience composed of the most respectable and intelligent of the citizens of Quebec, accompanied by their families. No danger was apprehended, although a Roman Catholic Journal (French,) the evening before, had expressed its wonder that its Irish fellow citizens suffered an adventurer like Gavazzi to make a jest of their religion, &c, &c. The police were in attendance. At a given signal, (great numbers of the Champlainers being posted outside, and many within the building,) which was "It's a lie," shouted at some affirmation or proposition stated by the Padre, stones began to fly from all quarters (inside) in the direction of his head, and at the same moment a crushing volley of the same projectiles was poured in at every window. Gavazzi fronted the storm proudly and scornfully, with folded arms, merely saying 'I am accustomed to this; do not be alarmed my friends;' and to those who were now raging and pouring into the building with brandished clubs, up to the very pulpit, he said, "I despise you, miscreants." Seeing that their howlings and threats, "let us have his blood," "kill the d——d scoundrel outright," "burn down the bloody place," had no effect upon him, they proceeded to scale the pulpit.

The Padre saw that the time for action had come. Coolly he cast off his cloak and laid it aside, took up his watch and put it in his pocket and, without moving a muscle, waited till they had clambered up to a level with him, when, quick as thought, his clenched fists dropped them one after the other to the floor below. Some, who held on, he grasped by the collar, and, raising them up bodily, hurled them down on the heads of the yelling pack. Their numbers thickening, the Padre found that more than the molliter manus was necessary, and accordingly seized and wielded with terrible effect a heavy chair. The foe, 'bore his blushing honors thick upon him,' and was evidently staggered by the pluck displayed by a priest, and so little expected. A rush was made and two or three of them made their way up the stair in rear of the pulpit, while the Padre was engaged in front, seized him behind and precipitated him headlong on the mass below.—During all this time the confusion was indescribable. Those gentlemen who had not ladies to attend to fought their way to his aid, and the body of the church was closely packed with the combatants, whose cries of rage and indignation joined to the screams of women and children, the rattling of clubs, and the crushing of lamps and window panes, made up a scene and uproar seldom witnessed or heard within the precincts of a sacred edifice. The police, three-fourths of them being Roman Catholics, refused to act, and it is said that some of them were heard cheering the mob. The Superintendent of Police was detected fleeing away up the glacis next to which the church is situated, with his hands on his sides, asking in piteous accents if there was not a hole in the fence somewhere by which he could get out and go home. The rioters were finally driven out. Some of the audience escaped by jumping from the windows, ladies and children were dragged out by their husbands and fathers through the basement windows.

Gavazzi now lost his self-possession for a moment. He was armed with a stiletto, but would not use it, though his life was in imminent danger. During the affray, his secretary was mistaken for him, and a most furious and murderous attack was made upon the secretary, whose wounds were, at one time deemed mortal. The broken heads, disfigured faces and dislocated limbs are not a few. The excitement and indignation of the Protestant community are on the increase. The Padre was to have lectured again to-day, but the Mayor, (R. C.) gave notice that he cannot answer for the peace of the city.—Many wish that the meeting should take place at all hazards, without reference to, or reliance upon, the police or the military, but it has been settled by the Padre's friends that he shall leave Quebec this afternoon. Fifty Orangemen, armed to the teeth, constitute his body-guard as far as Montreal. So great was the apprehension of an outbreak last evening, that the troops were kept under arms all night. The 71st Regiment (Scotch,) would have been called out. The building attacked was Chalmers' Church. A monster meeting of the Protestants of the city is to be held immediately; Parliament is to be petitioned, and Orange lodges are being formed. Gavazzi is indifferent to danger himself, and will lecture whenever and wherever his hearers are ready to stand by him. It is anticipated that there will be a "tremendous row" upon his going on board the steamer for Montreal. He has been desired to go on board an hour or two before the usual time, but declines. You will, without doubt, hear something interesting concerning his movements in Montreal, where, it is said, five hundred Orangemen are to be on the wharf to receive him. PRESS.

FATHER GAVAZZI'S ACCOUNT OF THE RIOT.

On the 8th instant Father Gavazzi wrote the following letter from Quebec to his friend C. F. Secchi de Casali, of this city, giving an interesting account of the assaults made upon him:

DEAR FRIEND:—I only write a few particulars of the shocking case which happened the day before yesterday; you will perceive it more amply described in the papers I send you. I will begin by saying that the appearance of the assailants was most despicable, for they came dirty, torn, and in their shirt sleeves, the better to show their origin. It was their aim to secure me alive, in order to murder me without the church. Many were led to believe it, when they had by repeated blows felled Paoli to the ground; for believing him to be me; they said one to another, "this is the very man." Another scheme of theirs was to blow out the lights by turning the gas keys, for by so doing, from their concerted plan, they would have more easily succeeded in getting possession of me, seizing at the same time, every one present, mostly ladies and children! But man proposes and God disposes.— It was not possible to turn the gas key, nor easily to capture me. Having rid myself of my first assailant by throwing him over the pulpit, I took off my cloak, and brandishing the chair which had served me as orator, I defended my post, as a true Italian crusader. I think that many of this gang will remember for some time this passage of the Italian missionary's lecture. Having a pulpit about twelve feet wide, with the stairs exposed, facing the church, and compelled to defend it against more than sixty savages, was rather a difficult task. An artillery sergeant—he now enjoys the sympathy of all parties—to the great shame of the policemen, (who were standing by as idle spectators,) leaped from these stairs, and succeeded in defending with me my citadel. After the first attack, Paoli, who was at the church door, was enabled to reach the stairs; and, having snatched a stick from one of the assailant's hands, used it in every direction, and we were enabled to retain the liberty of our platform for more than twenty-five minutes.

But again, a gang of the outward assailants, to the number of more than seven hundred, rushed into the Church. This is owing to another unpardonable mistake of the police; the stairs and parapet were assaulted with renewed violence. The artillery sergeant, feeling his equilibrium fail, clung to Paoli, who, amid the great throng of assailants, could no longer manoeuvre his stick; meanwhile, two of the savages had seized Paoli to overthrow him from the stairs; he cried out to me, "Gavazzi, help me." I abandoned the front of the pulpit, and with a desperate blow of the bench which I held in my hand, fell upon the head of one of the two assassins, which caused him to bound from the stairs. I was returning to the front while some other assassins, having gained the ground I had abandoned to save my friend, lifted me from my feet and precipitated me headlong out of the pulpit, from a height of more than fifteen feet.

This was to have been the hour of my death, and could have been. The falling with such violence might have sufficed to crush my skull; but God was there to protect his poor but confident servant. I fell on a floor of enemies' heads and shoulders, and it was afterwards said that as I was of iron disposition, I weighed also as iron itself; but I sustained no wound from my fall. The crowd then dispersing, I found myself stretched out on the ground, with a legion of savages over me, overjoyed at having been able to slay me. I then received a kick on my chin which has produced a slight wound, and a contusion of the jaw, as the great crowd prevented the use of sticks, they endeavored to supply it with their feet. I perceived that nothing but a gigantic effort could save me, and I employed it accordingly. I rose in spite of them, and by blows opened a passage to the staircase which leads to a subterranean place where the Sunday Schools are, and having met assassins on the stairs, I overcame them; the last, who, from his size, impeded my passage, as if it were a barricade, and threatened me with his stick, calling me by the vilest names, I very coolly rolled down stairs, and jumped over him, and reached the entry of the Sunday School.

Fortunately the school was dark; having examined it in the morning I became acquainted with its structure. I took the left path, among an innumerable quantity of benches, while the savages, who were still pursuing me, were obliged to delay before they could reach the door.— It was then I heard the cry of Paoli, "God help me," which led me to believe that he was assaulted and beaten again by the assassins.— Being left half dead, he would have been killed by the people had not an unforseen hand conveyed him to the subterraneous school, where he found himself, as it were, miraculously saved from a certain death. After five or six minutes of fatal suspense, some one of the police came. The lights were again lit, but this did not prevent the assailants from breaking all the windows of the school, by throwing large stones, one of which hit Paoli on the breast while Dr. Douglas was examining his wounds. But fortunately the military arrived, and the assassins were dispersed. Paoli was the first to be led home. I followed him in a coach, with the Mayor of the city, and all the street was protected by strong patrols. On examining our bodies it was discovered that poor Paoli had received eight wounds from sticks, one of which is six inches long. I was found to have a wound on my head from a stone, another on the occiput, from the blow of a club. They, however, gave me no pain, as I contrived to let them bleed, as much as possible. However, I have suffered nothing, and am as well now as on setting out for New York.

But the sensation experienced from this brutal assault results now contrary to what the assailants had expected. There is no Catholic Canadian but what does not disapprove of this outrage. It is to be observed that the assault had been organized; consequently a premeditated murder. The most aggravating circumstances are of having attacked a church, in which women and children were assembled, and to which the men had hastened unarmed. But who, then, could have conceived, organized and led so infamous a scheme?

* * * * * * * *

Sunday, please God, we will gather together at our Italian service in New York, and I shall feel overjoyed in seeing anew my brethren, after having escaped the death of my assailants.

Meanwhile remember me to them all, and believe me to be your very affectionate friend,

ALESSANDRO GAVAZZI.

THE MONTREAL RIOT.

The following is from the Montreal Herald of yesterday morning. The loss of life on Thursday last is greater than we had reason to suppose from the accounts that reached us by telegraph. Zion's Church, in which Gavazzi lectured, is in the upper part of the city, and may more readily be known as the one over which the Rev. Mr. Wilkes is pastor; and situated but a short distance from the American Presbyterian church:

As advertised, Signor Gavazzi met a numerous audience in Zion's Church, at 6½ o'clock P. M., yesterday. Many of our most respectable citizens, with their families, were present.

About 7½ o'clock we went to the door of the church, where we found Capt. Ermatinger with a strong posse of police, some 20 or 30 men. At this time and for about half an hour after, groups of wild, ragged looking men were assembled around the door of the church, and at different points between the church and McGill street. We mixed freely with these people, and conversed with more than one of those who are considered the leaders of the Irish Catholic party. We were assured by them that they had only come to the ground to use their influence to prevent a disturbance, and that we might rest satisfied that the lecture would pass off quietly. We were not, however, satisfied with the aspect of affairs, and remained on the ground.

At about 7¾ o'clock a band of ruffians, we learn, (for although in sight, we were at too great a distance to see more than that a general melee had taken place,) attacked and overpowered the police—Capt. Ermatinger receiving a severe wound on the head—and proceeded to force their way into the church, from which a body of fifteen or twenty repulsed them, several shots from guns and pistols being fired from both sides.

The assaulting party were effectually routed—two or three of their number were left dead or severely wounded on the ground, but were shortly afterward removed in cars by their friends.

Soon after this occurrence, a company of the twenty-sixth Cameronians marched from Craig street and were drawn up between the engine house and that street. All seemed perfectly quiet, and remained so until about 8½ o'clock, at about which time the lecture was concluded, and the audience inside the church had begun to leave for home.

At this time the troops were marched across Craig street, and took their position in two lines across Radegonde street—one line nearly opposite Zion's Church, and the other some hundred paces nearer Craig street. A good deal of hooting and noise prevailed at the time, and on the McGill street side of Craig street some disturbance with the lowest line of troops occurred, and two or three shots were fired; in other respects, all seemed peaceable.

We were at this time at the corner of St. James's and M'Gill streets, and had a clear and distinct view of the troops, and of the people in their immediate vicinity. There we saw no violence on the part of the mob—nothing, indeed, but the people hurrying from the church—when, to our utter astonishment, we heard and saw the troops fire two distinct, running volleys, among the apparently, to us, peaceable citizens. Thinking it high time to attend to our own safety, we beat a rapid retreat from this apparent scene of wanton and uncalled for slaughter.

This, we feel, is not the time to express the indignation with which we saw British troops deliberately shoot down our peaceful and unoffending fellow-citizens. We were too far off to speak personally of the conduct of the Mayor and of his officers by whose orders they fired; but if we are correctly informed by those who were on the spot, there was nothing whatever to justify so rash and cowardly a proceeding. We must not, however, prejudge their conduct on this occasion, but the blood of those who fell calls loudly for a prompt investigation into every circumstance connected with the melancholy affair, and, apparently, at least, wanton massacre.

The following, so far as we have been able to ascertain, is a complete list of the killed and wounded:

Peter Gillespie, clerk in Mr. Johnson's store, shot through the head with a musket ball, and mortally wounded, although alive when we left; (since reported dead.)

E. Crosby, clerk, a relative of Mr. Tyre, of Tyre, Calquehon & Co., shot through the heart and died instantly.

James Hutchinson, cousin of Mr. Hutchinson the builder, killed.

Mr. Adams, son of the city counsellor, shot through the lungs and mortally wounded.

Mr. J. O'Neil, shot through the body and not expected to recover.

Master Wallace, a lad of 14 years of age, severely wounded.

Mr. Clark, book keeper at W. Lyman & Co.'s, shot through the foot with a musket ball.

Mr. Hibbert, of Long Point, also shot through the foot with a musket ball.

A lad, nephew of Mr. Joseph McKay, of St. Paul's, shot through the leg.

Mr. Patrick Guy, shot through the heel with a musket ball.

Mr. Chipman, of the National Loan Fund, wounded in the side.

Mr. McGrath, son of Thomas McGrath, shot through the body and killed.

A Mr. Hudson, stone cutter, was killed.

A beautiful little boy five years old, was shot through the leg and broke the bone.

Mr. Stevenson, formerly of the post office, was severely wounded in the shoulder.

An unknown man was killed: died in the house of Dr. McDonnell.

Mr. Sydney Jones, of Brockville, was slightly injured by a musket ball in the hand.

A lad, whose name we could not learn, was so wounded as to necessitate the amputation of one of his legs in the Montreal general hospital, and is not expected to recover.

Many others, whose cases we could not learn, were more or less injured. At the time we write, all is quiet in the city. There is a strong guard of the 26th regiment at the St. Lawrence, and at the Mayor's residence, and the streets are all patrolled by mounted artillerymen.

LATEST DESPATCH.

MONTREAL, Friday, June 10—Noon.

All is now quiet, but another disturbance is expected to-night. Seven persons were killed last evening, and six mortally wounded; ten were otherwise injured. There is much excitement here. The Mayor is universally condemned for ordering the troops to fire without sufficient cause.
