DR. MORSE'S Invigorating Cordial A Phenomenon in Medicine. HEALTH RESTORED AND LIFE LENGTHENED, BY DR. MORSE'S INVIGORATING ELIXIR or CORDIAL.—At first the properties attributed to Prof. Morse's Invigorating Elixir or Cordial were deemed fabulous. The public, often deceived, could not believe the simple and sublime truths announced by the discoverer. But facts, undeniable facts, attested by witnesses of the highest class and character, are now triumphing over all doubts. Incredulity is overthrown by a mass of testimony which is perfectly irresistible.

The ELIXIR remedies, in all cases, the deplorable evils arising from a misuse or abuse of the various organs which make up the wonderful machine called man. It restores to full vigor every delicate function connected with that mysterious compound agency of matter and mind, necessary to the reproduction of human life. To persons of feeble muscular frame, or deficient in vital power, it is recommended as the only means of communicating that energy, which is necessary to the proper enjoyment of all the natural appetites, as well as the higher mental attributes. Its beneficial effects are not confined to either sex, or to any age. The feeble girl, the ailing wife, the listless, enervated youth, the over-worn man of business, the victim of nervous depression, the individual suffering from general debility, or from the weakness of a single organ, will all find immediate and permanent relief from the use of this incomparable renovator. To those who have predisposition to paralysis, it will prove a complete and unfailing safeguard against that terrible malady. There are many, perhaps, who have so trifled with their constitutions, that they think themselves beyond the reach of medicine. Let not even these despair. The Elixir deals with disease as it exists, without reference to causes, and will not only remove the disorder itself, but

REBUILD THE BROKEN CONSTITUTION.

The derangements of the system, leading to nervous diseases, and the forms of nervous disease itself, are so numerous that it would require a column to enumerate the maladies for which this preparation is a specific. A few, however, may be enumerated, viz: neuralgia, tic doloreaux, head-ache, incipient paralysis, hysteria, palpitation of the heart, spinal affections, muscular debility, tremors, flatulence, a pricking sensation in the flesh, numbness, mental depression, weakness of the will, indisposition to move, fainting after exercise, broken sleep and terrifying dreams, inability to remain in one place or position, weakness of the procreative organs, sexual incompetency, melancholy, monomania, fluor albus, sinking at the stomach, female irregularities, a chronic tendency to miscarriage, emaciation, and all complaints growing out of a free indulgence of the passions, and all barrenness that does not proceed from organic causes beyond the reach of medicine.

Whenever the organs to be acted upon are free from malformation or strictural diseases, it is averred that will replace weakness with strength, incapacity with efficiency, irregularity with uniform and natural activity, and this not only without hazard of re-action, but with a happy effect on the general organization. ☞ Bear in mind that all maladies, wherever they begin, finish with the nervous system, and that the paralyzation of the nerve of motion and sensation is physical death. Bear in mind also, that for every kind of nervous disease the Elixir Cordial is the only reliable preparation known.

CURE OF NERVOUS DISEASES.

No language can convey an adequate idea of the immediate and almost miraculous change which it occasions in the diseased, debilitated and shattered nervous system, whether broken down by excess, weak by nature, or impaired by sickness—the unstrung and relaxed organization is at once braced, revivified and built up. The mental and physical symptoms of nervous diseases vanish together under its influence. Nor is the effect temporary; on the contrary the relief is permanent—for the Cordial properties of the medicine reach the constitution itself, and restore it to its normal condition.

LOSS OF MEMORY,

Confusion, giddiness, rush of blood to the head, melancholy, debility, hysteria, wretchedness, thoughts of self-destruction—fear of insanity, dyspepsia, general prostration, irritability, nervousness, inability to sleep, diseases incident to females, decay of the propagating functions, hysteria, monomania, vague terrors, palpitation of the heart, impotency, constipation, etc., from whatever cause arising, it is, if there is any reliance to be placed on human testimony, absolutely infallible.

A GREAT MEDICINE FOR FEMALES.

The unparalleled effects of this great restorative, in all complaints incident to females, mark a new era in the annals of medicine. Thousands of stimulants have been invented—thousands of invigorants concocted—all purporting to be specifics in the various diseases and derangements to which the delicate formation of woman render her liable.

EVERY WOMAN OF SENSE, who suffers from weakness, derangement, nervousness, tremors, pains in the back, or any other disorder, whether peculiar to her sex, or common to both sexes—to give the Invigorating Cordial a trial.

MARRIED PERSONS,

Or others, will find this Cordial after they have used a bottle or two, a thorough regenerator of the system. In all directions are to be found the happy parents of healthy offspring, who would not have been so but for this extraordinary preparation. And it is equally potent for the many diseases for which it is recommended. Thousands of young men have been restored by using it, and not in a single instance has it failed to benefit them.

PERSONS OF PALE COMPLEXION, or consumptive habits, are restored by the use of a bottle or two to bloom and vigor, changing the skin from a pale, yellow, sickly color, to a beautiful florid complexion.

TO THE MISGUIDED.

These are some of the sad and melancholy effects produced by early habits of youth, viz: weakness of the back and limbs, pains in the head, dimness of sight, loss of muscular power, palpitation of the heart, dyspepsia, nervous irritability, derangement of the digestive functions, general debility, symptoms of consumption, etc.

Mentally, the fearful effects on the mind are much to be dreaded. Loss of memory, confusion of ideas, depression of spirits, evil forebodings, aversion to society, self-distrust, love of solitude, timidity, etc., are some of the evils produced. All thus afflicted should reflect that a sound mind and body are the most necessary requisites to promote connubial happiness; indeed, without these, the journey through life becomes a weary pilgrimage—the prospect hourly darkens the view; the mind becomes shadowed with despair, and filled with the melancholy reflection that the happiness of another becomes blighted with your own.

CAUTION.

Dr. Morse's Invigorating Cordial has been counterfeited by some unprincipled persons.

In future, all the genuine Cordial will have the proprietor's fac-simile pasted over the cork of each bottle, and the following words blown in the glass:

Dr. Morse's Invigorating Cordial, C. H. RING, Proprietor, N. Y.

The Cordial is put up, highly concentrated, in pint bottles—price three dollars per bottle, two for five dollars, six for twelve dollars. C. H. RING, Proprietor, 192 Broadway, N. Y.

Sold by Druggists throughout the United States, Canada and the West Indies.

Dr. J. Hostetter's Celebrated Stomach Bitters, ENTIRELY ANTI-DYSPEPTIC, and warranted to invigorate and strengthen the whole system of every one who uses them, are now kept for sale by

The expense is but a trifle, when compared with the incalculable good they effect.

Feeling satisfied that our Bitters possess merit sufficient to recommend them, we will not multiply words in their praise, but ask all to give them a trial; but be careful to ask for HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS, as there are other Bitters represented to be the same, which comparatively are worthless. Our Bitters are without a rival, either as to their medicinal qualities, or as a beverage. They are put up in square bottles, containing a full quart, with directions on, and Dr. J. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters blown on the glass. None other genuine. HOSTETTER, SMITH & CO., dec31 257 Penn street, Pittsburgh

Astonishing Results PRODUCED by using B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge, which can always be depended on, as it never fails to rid the system of worms.

MONTREAL, Canada, March 18, 1850.

Messrs. B. A. Fahnestock & Co.—Gentlemen: My little girl, eight years of age, was for a considerable time suffering from worms. I purchased one bottle of your Vermifuge, which I gave according to directions, and to my great astonishment she passed one hundred and twenty-one worms, varying from eight to sixteen inches in length, besides Pinworms. Having experienced the good effects of this medicine, I administered it again to my boy, five years old, with the same happy effect, passing forty-eight worms, of various sizes. I feel it a duty to recommend this Vermifuge, and to make the cases of my children known to the public.

The Longest Night in a Life,
A LADY'S ADVENTURE.

BY CHARLES DICKENS.

[CONCLUDED.]

The unseen thing dragged itself along until it reached the hearth-rug, where it slung itself down with violence. As it did so, she heard the clank of a chain. Her breath came less painfully as she heard it, for it occurred to her that the creature might be nothing worse than the house dog, who, having broken his chains, had sought shelter beneath the bed in the warm room. Even this notion was disagreeable enough, but it was as nothing to the vague terror which had hitherto oppressed her. She persuaded herself that if she lay quiet, no harm would happen her, and the night would soon pass over. Thus reasoning, she laid herself down again.

By-and-by the creature began to snore, and it struck her feverish fancy that the snoring was not like that of a dog. After a little time, she raised herself gently and with trembling hands drew back an inch or two of the curtain and peered out, thinking than any certainty was better than such terrible suspense. She looked at the fireplace, and there, sure enough, the huge creature lay—a brown hairy mass, but of what shape it was impossible to divine, so fitful was the light, and so strangely was it coiled up on the hearth rug. By-and-by it began to stretch itself out, to open its eyes, which shone in the flickering rays of the fire, and to raise its paws above its hairy head.

Good God! those are not paws! they are human hands!—and dangling from the wrists hang fragments of broken chains!

A chill of horror froze Ellen Stirling's veins as a flash of the expiring fire showed her this clearly—far too clearly—and the conviction seized upon her mind that she was shut up with an escaped convict.

An inward invocation to heaven for aid rose from her heart, as, with the whole force of her intellect, she endeavored to survey the danger of her position, and to think of the most persuasive words she could use to the man into whose power she had so strangely fallen. For the present, however, she must be still, very still; she must make no movement to betray herself, and perhaps he might overlook her presence until daylight came, and with it possibly help. The night must be far spent; she must wait and hope.

She had not to wait long. The creature moved again—stood upright—staggered toward the bed. For one moment—one dreadful moment—she saw his face, his pale, pinched features, his flashing eyes, his black, bristling hair; but, thank God! he did not see her. She shrunk behind the curtains. He advanced to the bed, slowly, hesitatingly, and the clanking sounds of the broken chains fell menacingly on her ear. He laid his hand upon the curtains, and, for a few moments, fumbled to find an opening. These moments were all in all to Ellen Stirling. Despair sharpened her senses; she found that the other side of the bed was not so close against the wall but that she could pass between. Into the narrow space between she contrived to slip noiselessly.

She had hardly accomplished the difficult feat, and sheltered herself behind the curtains, when the creature flung itself on the bed, and, drawing the bedclothes round him, uttered a sound more like the whinnying of a horse than the laugh of a human being.

For some little time Miss Stirling stood in her narrow hiding place, trembling with cold and terror, fearful least some unguarded movement should betray her, and bring down on her a fate she dared not contemplate. She lifted up her heart in prayer for courage; and when her composure had in some degree returned, it occurred to her that if she could but reach the window, she might, from that position, possibly attract the attention of some passer-by, and be released from her terrible durance.

Very cautiously she attempted the perilous experiment; her bare feet moved noiselessly across the floor, and a friendly ray of moonlight guided her safely towards the window. As she put her hands towards the curtains, her heart gave a fresh bound of terror, for it came in contact with something soft and warm. At length, however, she remembered that she had flung down her fur cloak in that spot, and it was a mercy to come upon it now, when she was chilled to the bone. She wrapped it around her and reached the window without further adventure, or any alarm from the occupant of the bed, whose heavy, regular breathing gave assurance that he was now sound asleep. This was some comfort, and she greatly needed it. The look-out from the window was anything but inspiriting. The stars still shone peacefully on the sleeping earth; the moon still showed her pallid visage; not a sight of sound presaged dawn; and after long listening in vain for any sign of life in the outer world, she heard the stable clock strike four.

Only four!

She felt as if it were impossible to survive even another hour of terror such as she had just passed through. Was there no hope?—None.

She tried to support herself against the window frame, but her first touch caused it to shake and creak in a manner that seemed to her startlingly loud; she fancied that the creature moved uneasily on its bed at the sound. Drops of agony fell from her brow, as minute after minute, wearily on. Ever and anon a rustle of the bed clothes, or a slight clank of the manacled hands, sent a renewed chill to her heart.

The clock struck five.

Still all without was silent. Suddenly a man's whistle was heard in the court, and the driver of the mail coach, lantern in hand, crossed the yard towards the pavilion. Would to God she could call to him, or in any way attract his attention! but she dared not make the slightest sound. He looked up at the window, against which he almost brushed in passing, and the light he held flashed on Miss Stirling's crouching figure. He paused, looking again, and seemed about to speak, but she hastily made signs that he should be silent, but seek assistance at the house. He gave her a sign of intelligence, and hastened away.

How long his absence seemed! Could he have understood her? The occupant of the bed was growing every instant more and more restless; he was rising from the bed—he was groping round the room. They would come too late, too late!

But no! steps in the courtyard—the key turns the lock—the door opens—then, with a yell that rang in Ellen Stirling's ear until her dying day, the creature rushed to her hiding-place, dashed the slight window-frame to pieces, and, finding himself baulked of his proposed escape by the strength of the iron bars outside, turned, like a wild beast, on his pursuers. She was the first on whom his glances fell. He clasped her throat—his face was close to her's—his glittering eyes were glaring at her in frenzy—when a blow from behind felled him.

She awoke from a long swoon to find herself safe in Mrs. Atherton's dressing-room, and to hear that no one was hurt but the poor maniac, and that he was again in the charge of his keepers, from whom he had escaped a few hours before.

"A few hours! a lifetime, Mary! But Heaven be thanked, it is past like a wild dream!"

It was not all passed. One enduring effect remained, ever after to imprint on Ellen Stirling's memory, and on the memories of all who knew her the event of that long night. Such had been her suffering, anxiety, and terror, that in those few hours her hair had turned as white as snow.

☞ A fellow named A. G. Burke, who was appointed Postmaster at Bellows Falls, has been removed, and writes a silly letter to the New York Herald about it, representing that he has been removed because he is a "hard." But the Vermont Patriot says he is removed for assuming to be a special agent of the Post Office Department, and thus sponging free rides over the railroads.

☞ It is stated by a Paris letter writer that porous stones, by being dipped in coal-tar for a few hours, acquire a great degree of hardness, and are thereby rendered much more useful for laying foundations, and for the construction of vaults.
