Reese's Patent Coupling and Foreplate,
FOR NAIL-PLATE AND SHEET-ROLLS,
CAN NOW BE SEEN IN OPERATION at Messrs Baily, Brown & Co's Rolling Mill, Pittsburgh, or the "Sharon Works," Mercer county, Pa. The advantages of my improvement are—that it obviates the necessity of stopping the engine or throwing off the crab to change the top roll in scouring, as the top roll is connected and disconnected in an instant without reference to the engine, crab or anything else. The FOREPLATE is also constructed so simple and complete that it is placed or displaced in half a minute, without removing a wedge, screw, bolt, or nut. The last, though not least advantage of my improvement is, that by it you are enabled to secure the Rolls better adapted for polish on Nail-plate and Sheet-iron than any ever been got out before. Further information, or a right to use the same, can be obtained of the inventor.

Manager of "Clinton Mills," Pittsburgh.

Beeson, I take pleasure in calling the attention of its former patrons, my friends and the public, that I am prepared to issue Policies or renewals of them; at fair rates of premium, on risks of the various descriptions of buildings, merchandize, mills, machinery, and all risks needing the security of Insurance from loss or damage by fire. The Ætna Company is one that recommends itself to the community from its proverbial fairness and promptitude, not only in taking of risks, but in the adjustment and payment of its losses. It does not profess so much to give cheap insurance as it does promise valuable indemnity.

PITTSBURGH GAZETTE.

TUESDAY MORNING, OCTOBER 25, 1853.

DISCOVERY OF A NORTHWEST PASSAGE.—A passage by the Arctic ocean, around the northwestern continent of America, has at last been discovered. Commander McClure of the British Navy, has accomplished what the maritime enterprises of nearly two hundred years has failed to accomplish. He has sailed from Davis's Straits on the east through the great Arctic ocean to near Behring's Straits on the west, and has shown the existence of an uninterrupted water communication from the North Atlantic to the North Pacific. His course, as near as we can gather it from the brief announcement of the fact made by the English Admiralty, was through the Prince of Wales' Straits, connecting with Barrow's Straits, to a cliff south of Melville Island, called Bank's Land, and thence through floes and hummocks of almost impenetrable ice to a place called Baring's Island, in the Bay of Mercy. The precise position of this Island we are unable to ascertain, but it seems to be sufficiently far east, and near to the outlet of Behring's Straits, on the coast of Asia, to settle the question of the practicability of the passage.

What Commander McClure has thus done has been the dream of geographers and pilots ever since Cabot discovered the northern continent of America, as a short cut to India

"To Agra and Lahore of Great Mogul,
Down to the golden Chersonese."

Among the first adventurers who attempted this hyperborean way were two Portuguese brothers, named Cortereal, who, in the early part of the sixteenth century, sailed towards the pole and were heard of no more. An Englishman, Sir Hugh Willoughby, some fifty years later, sought to find China beyond the coast of Labrador, both he and his crew left their bodies on the frozen plains, where they were found by the Esquimaux Indians. Sir Humphrey Gilbert, at a subsequent period, went down, off the coast of Newfoundland, in making a similar experiment. In 1610, Hudson, the famous navigator, from whom our North river was named, after discovering Hudson's Bay, was set adrift, with eight of his sailors, by a mutinous portion of his crew, and was supposed to have been destroyed by the icebergs. In 1623 Baffin added the knowledge of the vast inlet of the sea, since called by his name, to our arctic geography. In 1741 Behring, a Russian, explored the straits on the eastern side of the continent, and in 1772 Capt. Phippes made many explorations in the north; but the arctic discovery of modern times may be said to have begun in 1818 with Sir John Ross, who passed through Davis's Straits and Baffin's Bay to Lancaster Sound. The next year Franklin, about whose supposed loss so much has been said, undertook to trace the looked for passage, from the mouth of the Coppermine river, eastward, by the shore, to Hudson's Bay. He was accompanied by Mr. Back and Dr. Richardson, and they made one of the dreariest journeys on record, without meeting with much success.

The same year, Lieutenant Parry had gone to Lancaster Sound, and, passing through the Straits named by him Barrow's Straits, had discovered Wellington's Channel, Regent's Inlet, Bathurst's, Byam, Martin's, Melville, and other islands, now called the Parry Islands. These places have ever since been the ultimate land mark of Arctic research, for no navigators have succeeded in going beyond them, and all the discoveries since made have had only more or less reference to them. Parry saw, too, and defined Bank's Land, to the southwest of Melville Island, one of the points of departure in McClure's more recent expedition.

Parry, Ross, and Captain Franklin made subsequent voyages, all of which added something to our information, and in 1830 and 1836 Captain Back went eastward beyond Franklin's Point; but these explorations were nearly all carried on within and below the delineations of Parry. No one, says a late writer, had ventured beyond Cape Walker, in the direction of Bank's Land, to the west and south of North Somerset; or gone beyond Parry Islands to the northwest, or to the north through Wellington channel. Neither had any attempt been made from Baffin's Bay above Lancaster Sound to enter the remote waters supposed to flow around the Pole. It will be seen, therefore, that if Commander McClure had gone sufficiently far beyond Bank's Land to enter the regions of Captain Beechy's discoveries, in 1826, to the north of Behring's Straits, he has solved the problem of a north west passage.

And now that it is solved, of what use will it be? As a means of transit to China it can never afford the least facility, and in no other commercial aspect does it hold out any promises to enterprise. "The treacherous and hummocky labyrinths of the Polar sea," as somebody describes them, "are wholly unfit for ordinary navigation, so that the geographical and scientific results of the discovery are those alone which are likely to be of any permanent interest."—New York Post.

THE MONEY PRESSURE.—The N. Y. Journal of Commerce publishes the annexed remarks, which it says are from the pen of "one of our most intelligent bankers."

"They who imagine, from the action of local and temporary influences, that the present stringency is the precursor of a financial revulsion, can hardly have studied comprehensively the condition of affairs. Never, from its beginning, was the country so rich and strong in all the elements of prosperity, as at the present hour. Some look at the magnitude of our imports, and predict ruin from this source. 'We are rolling up an immense debt to Europe,' they say, 'to be followed by a drain of specie, and general bankruptcy.' Now let us look at the facts.

The Treasury Tables showed a balance against the country for the six years preceding 1837, of $165,000,000:—an amount which would require at that time, the total exports of about two years to liquidate, even if the imports had ceased entirely. In other words, the country was two years behind its debts in the balance of trade.—Here were the elements of a revulsion, and we had one.

Referring to the same tables, we find a very different record for the last six years, up to June 30, 1852. The account stands as follows:

	Imports.	Exports.
1847,	$146,545,638	$158,648,622
1848,	154,998,928	154,032,131
1849,	147,857,439	145,755,820
1850,	178,138,318	151,898,720
1851,	215,725,995	217,517,130
1852,	212,945,442	209,578,222
	$1,056,211,750	$1,038,323,845
	1,038,323,845
Excess of Imports	$17,887,905

"Showing a nominal balance of less than eighteen millions against the country in the trade of six years, an amount quite insignificant, compared with the aggregate commerce. This difference would be much more than provided for by profits on exports and by freights.

"The imports of 1853, not yet published by the Treasury Department, are estimated at about $258,000,000, being some $45,000,000 in excess of the two previous years; but as an offset to this increase, it is well known that we had a cotton crop alone which was about $40,000,000 in excess of last year.

"If then, the report of the Treasury Department, which, previous to the revulsion in 1837, had steadily and truly indicated, from year to year, the accumulating balances against the country, may be relied on now, there is but a trifling, if any, balance against us, and our commerce is in a condition of general soundness and prosperity. The imports of the last quarter may have turned the balance temporarily against us, as it is the heaviest quarter of the whole year,—while in our exports it is the lightest, being the period between the old and the new cotton crops. But the progress of the fall and winter is directly reverse. Imports decline, as they are now doing at a rapid rate, and exports increase, and the equilibrium is restored. So it will be this year, and if it were not like sending cotton to the South, or 'coals to Newcastle,' we should import specie from Europe in payment for breadstuffs, as we did in 1847."

THE YELLOW FEVER AT PORT GIBSON AND GRAND GULF.—Mr. J. O. Pierson who took up a delegation from the Howard Association in aid of the sick at Port Gibson and Grand Gulf, and who arrived at this city last evening, has favored us with a statement of the condition of affairs in those places; and we are glad to have so good an opportunity of exposing the exaggerations and correcting the errors which have been circulated on the subject.

Mr. Pierson left New Orleans about four weeks ago. In each of the places above named, he says there was a population of somewhat over four hundred and fifty, and scarcely one of them has escaped an attack of greater or less severity. From Port Gibson, Mr. Pierson brings returns showing the precise number of deaths, which amounted to 46. From Grand Gulf returns could not be obtained up to the time he left; but he says they may be estimated at about 50. All the nurses except four have been brought away from Port Gibson, where there were fifteen cases still remaining. From Grand Gulf all the nurses except one have been brought away, there being only four cases remaining on hand there. None of the cases in either place were dangerous, and the disease had ceased to be epidemic. The weather continued warm, however, and in all probability cases will continue to occur until a frost is experienced.—N. O. Picayune.

Important to Travelers Going East.
THE early hour, three o'clock in the morning, at which the EXPRESS TRAIN starts for the East, from Pittsburgh, had made it very inconvenient for travelers going by that train, compelling them to be aroused at a most uncomfortable time, (say 2 o'clock A. M.) or else to remain up all night. This inconvenience is now obviated by a late arrangement. That Express Train now breakfasts regularly at LATROBE, instead of Hollidaysburgh,—so that travelers can leave Pittsburgh at 5 o'clock P. M., by the Accommodation, which arrives at Latrobe at 7½ o'clock P. M., remain there over night at the large and elegant Hotel of Mr. ELDER, breakfast comfortably with the other passengers in the morning, and pass on East by the Express, having DAY TRAVEL ALL THE WAY from Pittsburgh to Philadelphia or Baltimore. Every provision is made at the Hotel, for the accommodation of guests and visitors by those trains. fel1:tf
