PITTSBURGH GAZETTE.

THURSDAY MORNING, NOV. 18, 1852.

The Hon. David Henshaw, of Mass. whose death is announced, once filled a large place in the public eye. He was the leading Democrat, for many years, in Massachusetts, and he exercised a large influence over Maine, New Hampshire and Rhode Island, as well as his own State, because all the New England politicians were accustomed to look up to his opinions with respect, if not with reverence. When Gen. Jackson became President, he made him Collector of Boston, and he had for many years the confidence of that eminent man. He was subsequently made Secretary of the Navy during Mr. Tyler's administration, we think. He was largely engaged at one time in the railroad that extends from Norfolk (Va) to North Carolina, but whether, or interested in it or not, at the time of his death, we cannot say.

AN ECCENTRIC CHARACTER.—The Boston Chronicle gives the following, in addition to the particulars already published, relative to John Crofts Coffield, who died in that city on the 28th ult., supposed to be worth $200,000.

For the last thirty years, this eccentric man has not laid in bed, except when travelling, he being too miserly to indulge in such "extravagance," as he termed it. He has made his lodgings on trunks and boards, and finally died, lying upon a large trunk. Three days preceding his death, he purchased a burial lot in Mount Auburn. He lived, if living it could be called, in a small shop off from the street. He lived a bachelor, not being willing to marry on account of the expenses incident upon a married life, and dragged out his existence as solitary as an oyster. His meals cost him on an a erage six and a quarter cents, and in payment he generally tendered a crossed four-pence. He had not probably taken off his clothes for a year.—Avarice shone from his cold, glassy eye; he loved no one, and no one probably loved him. The late Dr. Parkman was his friend, and was selected as his executor.

Every body is having a vacation except editors.—Exchange.

I should like to have the editor who wrote that look me in the face and answer the following 'catechise,' and then dare to 'whine' after that fashion. Who gets the tickets to the Siamese boys, fat girls, white negroes, learned pigs, whistling canaries, concerts and theatres? Who has a free pass to railroad celebrations, water excursions, balloon ascensions, anti-slavery fights Kossuth suppers, and great "rejection" meetings? Who has the first great squash of the season? Who feeds on anonymous pears and nectarines, strawberries, grapes, peaches and melons? Who gets a slice of wedding cake every time a couple make fools of themselves? and who has 'pi' in his office year in and year out? Who has all the big and lesser literary lights, male and female, constantly revolving around him? Who amasses a larger and magnificent library, free gratis for nothing? [save a puff or two.] Who gets pretty boquets when he's sick from his lady contributors? 'Vacation' forsooth! don't talk to me! I know all about it. The first gentleman I ever saw, was an editor. I've been acquainted with 'em ever since I was knee high to a huckleberry.—Fanny Fern.

RAILROADING.—As the Lafayette train was pitching along at a most terrible rate, it was hailed from a farm house with loud shouts of "stop, stop."

The bell was rung, the whistle screamed, the train was stopped.

"What's wanted?" asked the conductor.

"Why," said the man, "me and my old woman want to go with you."

"Well," said the conductor, "get aboard—get aboard."

"But we ain't near ready yet. My old woman has just begun to dress, and wants you to wait."

There was a perfect explosion. The ladies tittered, the men screamed, the conductor looked blank and shouted "Go ahead!"

The passengers all begged him to wait until the woman dressed, and one gentleman shouted "some along with your wife, I'll hook her dress," and the train vamosed.

Who will dare say that women don't claim their rights in this country, where a whole train is stopped to give a woman a chance to put on her "becomings?" Western women against the world! If she had got hold of that conductor, she would have made him wait.

PLEASURES OF TRAVEL IN AMERICA.—The philosophical patience with which Americans take those moving accidents by flood and field, reminds one of the Stoic of olden time. For instance, when the roads are bad it is usual for the passengers to get out and walk until the travel becomes better, and in case of the coach getting fixed, (i. e. stuck up to the hub in a stiff mud-rut, or heeled over,) the common expedient is to get a fence rail, or two or three, and by a judicious application of the lever power, and a vigorous use of the thong, the passengers and horses commonly get all right again; but frequently the wheels require to be pried out so often, that when the stake-fence is not at hand, a passenger carries a rail along on his shoulder, as a portable avail against an emergency.

An instance, however, is mentioned of an over sensitive hoosier, who had to walk ten or twelve miles with the mud half way up his cowhide boots, and who had done good service with his rail, but who felt a little "riled," and kind of disposed to talk right out about the darned thing," and on coming into the village, and proceeding to the coach agent's office, threw down his pole indignantly, and addressing the functionary, said—

"You're agent, I guess!"

"Yes, sir."

"Well, look here; I'm passenger by that stage, stranger, and I want to go back again to-morrow—but though I don't object to pay my fare and walk through, I'm concerned if I believe in having to carry the rail.—Casca's Two Years in the U. S.

There is a sheriff now residing in the State of Illinois, who was rather "taken in and done for" on one occasion. He made it a prominent part of his business to ferret out and punish peddlers for travelling through the State without a license; but one morning "he met his match,"—a genuine Yankee peddler.

"What have you got to sell—anything?" asked the sheriff.

"Yaas, sartin', what would you like to hev? Got razors—fust rate; that's an article that you want, tew, Squire, I should say, by the look of your beard. Got good blackin'; 'll make them cow-hide boots o' yourn shine so't you can shave into 'em o' cosmos. Balm o' Klumby tew, only a dollar a bottle; good for the ha'r, and assistin' poor human natur', as the poet says."

And so he rattled on, at length the sheriff bought a bottle of the Balm of Columbia; and in reply to the question whether he wanted any thing else, that functionary replied that he did,—he wanted to see the Yankee's license for peddling in Illinois, that being his duty as high sheriff of the State.

The peddler showed him a document, "fixed up good and strong," in black and white.

The sheriff looked at it, and pronounced it all right. Then handing back the bottle to the peddler, he said,

"I don't know, now that I've bought this stuff that I shall ever want it. I reckon I may as well sell it to you again. What will you give me for it?"

"Oh, I don't know that the darned stuff is any use to me, but seein' it's you, Sheriff, I'll give you twenty-five cents for it, ef you raly don't want it."

The sheriff handed over the bottle, at the six shillings discount from his own purchase, and received his change.

"Now," said the peddler, "I got a question or two to ask you now. Hev you got a peddler's license about your trowsers anywhar?"

"No, I haven't any use for the article myself," replied the sheriff.

"Halot, eh! Wal, I guess we'll see about that pooty darned soon. Ef I understand the law, it's a clear case that you've been tradin' with me—hawkin' and pedlin' Balm o' Klumby on the highway, and I shall inform on you—darn'd if I don't now."

The Yankee was as good as his word. When he reached the next village, he made his complaint, and the sheriff was fined eight dollars for selling without a license.

He was heard afterward to say, "that you might as well try to hold a greased eel as a live Yankee."—Harpers' Magazine.

FATAL ACCIDENT.—James R. Lee, Esq., of Carrollton, Miss., a lawyer of fine talent, and universally beloved and respected, was accidentally killed by his brother-in-law, Mr. A. O. Hammons, while hunting a few days since in Carroll county. The two were in the woods together and on horseback. Mr. Hammon's horse stumbled and fell. The fall discharged the gun, two balls from which entered Mr. Lee's neck and passed through his chest.

An educated Brahmin of the old school has published in Mahratta a work entitled "Principles of Hindooism," for the exposition and defence of his religion. As a defense it is pronounced a failure, and is severely criticised by the native press. Its tone is desponding. "Hindooism," the author declares, "is sick unto death. I am fully persuaded that it must perish. Still, while life remains, let us minister to it as we best can."

James Sheridan Knowles, the author of Virginius and other dramatic works, some twelve or fifteen years ago carried on a spirited controversy with three Baptist ministers on the morality of the drama. He has since abandoned the stage and is now a member of a Baptist Church, and is engaged as a Lecturer on Elocution in Stepney College, near London.

In April last, three Misses Hunt, of Ripley county, Ind., accompanied by eight male relatives, started for California, across the plains. By the time they arrived at Salt Lake, every male member of the family had fallen a victim to the cholera, and the ladies, being thus left without their natural protectors, determined to return home, which they did, arriving at St. Louis a few days since.

DESPERATE FIGHT.—The butchers of New Orleans, to the number of one hundred, attempted to treat a couple of their newly married friends to a tin-pan and sheet-iron serenade on the night of the 30th ult., which the police prevented. A fight ensued, in which one of the butchers was killed and another had his skull cracked. Two of the watchmen were so terribly beaten that but little hope is entertained of their recovery.

The coming winter will, we learn, be quite a brisk matrimonial season. Cupid having been extremely busy with his love tipped shafts for the last three months. We often wonder his quiver is not exhausted, and, no doubt it would be, did not Plutus frequently furnish a supply. Long flourish the reign of Hymen, since, to use the language of Benedict, "the world must be peopled."

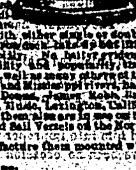
Powerful Patent Iron Capstans, MANUFACTURED BY TALCOTT & CANFIELD,



PROPRIETORS of the Lake Ontario Foundry, Steam Engine and Machine Works, Oswego, New York. These Capstans are superior to any thing of the kind in use, and commend themselves to the notice of Steam Boat Owners and Builders, from their simplicity of construction, their extraordinary strength and the immense power they are capable of exerting. One man on these Capstans is equal to ten men, on an ordinary Capstan, with a single purchase. They can be used with either single or double purchase, are easily shipped upon deck, take up but little room, and work easily and rapidly. No better evidence need be produced of their utility and popularity, than the fact, that the following, as well as many others of the splendid steamers on the Ohio and Mississippi rivers, have them in use:—Eclipse, Stella, Doems, James Robb, Brilliant, Magnolia, W. B. Clifton, Bride, Lexington, California, Chancellor. Hundreds of them also are in use on the finest Steamers, Propellers and Sail Vessels on the Northern chain of great lakes. The proprietors also manufacture them mounted with brass, in an elegant manner. AGENTS: John B. Canfield, Pittsburgh. Boggs & Russell, Louisville, Kentucky. Campbell, Russell & Co., Cincinnati, Ohio.
