THE SECRET OF SUCCESS.

BY JOHN G. SAXE.

"Look aloft" the ancient proverb preaches,
But though it looks so very grave and wise,
Trust not the lazy lesson that it teaches,
Forget it, and the [illegible] maxim "Rise!"

[illegible]

How to Get Sick.—R. H. M. writes: I slept in a room one night which had been washed out during the day, and was not quite dry. I awoke next morning with a sore throat, which has continued ever since. The result is, he has had to abandon his theological studies, and place himself under treatment, after having lost two years time.

H. M. writes: "I went to sleep on a warm day on the top of an ice box, and have never been well since." He shortly after died of Consumption.

T. H. took a very severe cold, conversation was laborious, but he had an appointment to preach; and he felt that he must fulfil it. He made the attempt, but the utterance was attended with a pricking pain in the throat, and then a dull hurting came on in the throat, with subsequent "chemming" and fruitless "clearings." He was permanently disabled.

A modest man walked until quite fatigued, and perspiring freely, entered an omnibus, and sat next to a lady who opened a window to get some fresh air for herself. He soon became chilled and was ill for three weeks.

H. F. got up at night and hoisted the window to look at a burning house; the cold air darted in on the unprotected body, just from a warm bed. A twelve months illness resulted in dropsy.

A strong, hearty man came in on a hot summer day, immediately took off his coat and hat, and sat [illegible] window, looking out upon a beautiful garden [illegible] the ocean breeze came to fan him [illegible] was aware of it he was attacked with [illegible] of the lungs, and had within a week [illegible]

A delicate young lady, an invalid, a patient of ours, in an excursion with several others, was "overtaken" by nightfall, and by a young gentleman. They were in a boat, and the boat was in the mud, the tide having gone out on a visit to the sea, and "there they were," a mile from shore, and several miles from home: that mile was extraordinarily long and short. Only think of it! A whole mile over a Jersey flat—covered with water, mud and bulrushes—carrying in the arms a young lady of eighteen, with one of the sweetest voices, faces and forms to be seen in or out of Jersey. Bespattered with mud dripping with fog and dew and slush, steaming with perspiration, and wearied with hunger, thirst and fatigue, delighted and excited with the novelty of the thing, they reached home at midnight. The next day she didn't have anything the matter with her at all." Why? She had taken lessons of us. Instead of pulling off her bonnet and shawl, and sitting in a cool place, or instead of undressing at once, and thus letting the air check the perspiration, she went into a warm room, closed the doors and windows at the same moment, laid aside the garments one by one, at intervals, and when cooled off, in the course of half an hour, retired to sound sleep and a healthful awakening.

Another man rode three miles with a little child sleeping on his lap, which, pressing against his stomach, caused unusual warmth there. It was a chill, raw November evening. In walking a hundred yards to the house, the child moving slowly and the wind blowing, the whole abdomen was chilled in a moment. The next morning he awoke with the ominous pains of peritoneal inflammation, which is so often fatal in three or four days.

A man had some accounts to draw off in midwinter. It was a cold night. He was greatly interested, time went, and the fire too. He felt a little chilly, but thought he would soon be done; that it was not worth while to rebuild the fire. It was near one o'clock before he left for home, and he reached it most thoroughly chilled. Next morning he had pneumonia and never got well.

Remaining at rest for a few hours in a cold room, in raw, cold, damp weather, is enough to kill three men out of four by bringing on congestion of the lungs, lung fever, or inflammation of the lungs. Clergymen and lawyers often sacrifice their lives by speaking in warm rooms; the body debilitated by the effort; the skin in a state of perspiration; the lungs all heated up; and thus hungry, tired, and depressed in body and mind, go out into the cool air to ride or walk home—and to die in the very bloom of health and manhood. And yet, to know these little things there are hundreds who hesitate to give a dollar a year, when on the knowledge of them human life is daily hung, and for want of it daily lost.—Hall's Journal of Health.

ASTOUNDING DEVELOPMENT HOW A LAND GRANT WAS OBTAINED.—Mr. S. S. Jones, late President of the Iowa Central Air Line Railroad, in a letter to the Directory, resigning his office states that the cost to his Company, of getting the Iowa Land Grant through Congress during the session of 1854, was seven hundred thousand dollars! The original "pecuniary compliments" were bestowed in the shape of lands of which the Air Line Company got something near nine hundred thousand acres; but subsequently the lands were exchanged for the stock of the Company to the amount stated! Mr. Jones is by no means explicit about this matter; but as a good citizen he owes it to the public to designate the men who divided among themselves this magnificent sum. Let him tell us how much of this was promised to members of the House, how much to "free wool" men of the press, and how much to the greedy and hungry lobby. Let Mr. Jones, while at it, make a clean breast. He knows to a dollar how much the Dubuque and Pacific Company were assessed by the cormorants who fill all the passages to the National Legislature: how much was wrung from the Mississippi and Missouri Road; and how much from the Burlington and Missouri River Road. These were all included in the magnificent scheme. They were undoubtedly parties to the original contract, whatever that may have been, and were all made to "bleed." Let Mr. Jones tell us, Will two millions cover the amount of toll exacted before that Iowa grist was suffered to go through the mill? Will he tell us that, and tell us who has promised the money?

Seven hundred thousand dollars! Well, there is this consolation? The stock in the hands of these greedy millers is not worth a dollar. The company will undoubtedly be forced to dissolve; the lands will revert to the Government; and nobody but resident stockholders, who have paid percentages on their subscriptions, will suffer. But how about the roads which are yet struggling along? Can anybody show us the bottom of this now interesting piece of national legislation?—Chicago Press.

THE woman who was some time ago arrested at Constantinople, with four millions of counterfeit Turkish money in her trunk, has just been brought up for trial, but the prisoner demands time to obtain testimony from the United States, which has been granted.

TOUGHENING INFANTS.—A writer on physiological subjects, in Blackwood, gives the following advice to mothers on the above subject:

"Maternal instinct has in all ages and in all climates, taught women to keep their infants warm. Philosophers have at various times tried, by logic and rhetoric, to thwart this instinct. Philosophy has been eloquent on the virtue of making infants 'hardy,' and has declared that cold baths and slight clothing must be as 'strengthening' to the infant as to the adult. Listen to none of these philosophers, ye mothers! They are to be suspected when they are talking physiology, for under the circumstances they are the worst of guides, deceiving themselves and you by that fatal facility which intellectual power gives them of making ignorance look like knowledge, and of so speciously arraying absurdity that it looks like plain common sense. It is bad, very bad, to listen to grandmothers, mothers-in-law and nurses, for their heads are mostly mere lumber rooms of crotchets and absurdities; but it is better sometimes to listen to them than to philosophers who inspire more respect, and cannot irreverently be treated as old women.' Maternal instinct must not be perverted by such unphysiological teaching as that of 'hardening' infants. It is true that strong infants can endure this process, but it is certain that in all cases it is more or less injurious: for the universal law is that the younger the animal the feebler its power of resisting cold in spite of its possessing a higher temperature than the adult."

NOT long an album leaf, on which Byron had written a few lines of poetry, was sold at Venice, and a Russian gave $1,600 for it. There were but four lines—four hundred dollars a line.

ADAMS' CORN SHELLER.
THE proprietors of the "Pittsburgh Novelty Works" having, through Mr. Adams, (the principal mechanical genius of the firm,) obtained letters patent, dated 17th of August, 1858, for a new and simple instrument for Shelling Corn, truly neat, compact and portable, combining durability, utility and cleanness; a necessary appendage to every farmer's barn, is now offered to the people of the United States at a very low price. We have no "Patent Rights" for sale, but manufacture and sell the article at our works. Owing to its compact form it is destined soon to become an article of trade in every Hardware Merchants' shelf.
The Machines are of two sizes, weighing only about 35 and 50 pounds, and may be secured to a post, pillar, or door, as you would a coffee mill. We add no more, when seen it speaks for itself.
