The Quiet Man Won.

A big, burly man, with the form of a heavy weight pugilist, was making himself exceedingly objectionable to the passengers on a Sixth avenue train about two o'clock yesterteday morning, says the New York Times. He sat with his long legs stretched clear across the aisle, his hat forward over his eyes, and a look on his face which seemed to declare :

"I'm a bad man, see ! I'm looking for trouble, and I dont care where it comes from."

Several passengers were unfortun ate enough to stumble over the man's feet and in return were profanely abused for doing so. There was not a man in the car who did not feel inclined to punch the fellow's head—but he looked too formidable. At Thirty-third street however, the bully met his match.

A quiet looking little man, with the appearance of a prosperous young clerk, but who, in reality, was a well known teacher in fencing and boxing, entered, and, as he made his way to one of the cross seats, encountered the outstretched legs of the objectionable person. Very politely the newcomer turned to him and said :

"Sir, will you kindly draw in your feet so that I can pass ?"

The bully looked up to see who had made such an impertinent request, and said to the inoffensive-looking man, after a string of oaths ;

"I'll do nawthing, see ! If yer wants ter get by you'll step over dose feet and if you's got good sense you'll be careful how you does it."

The little man's eyes flashed and he said, in a tone very different to that he had previously used :

"Sir, draw in your feet !"

An oath was the only response, and the little man, with a "then take that," gave the big man a magnificent kick in the shins. The big fellow jumped to his feet in an instant to annihilate the little one—but he didn't. Hardly was he out of his seat when a sledge-hammer blow under the chin knocked him flat on his back, and there he lay. The blow knocked him out.

The passengers fairly cheered, but the quiet littte man was not looking for glory. Going to the seat he had selected before the encounter, he sat down, unconcernedly pulled out a newspaper and began to read. The guard and one or two passengers roughly picked up the prostrate man and jammed him into a seat. His dazed senses soon began to return, but he said not a word, and at Fifty-ninth street he meekly left the train.

The Man with the Coonskin Cap.

One night a year ago there were half a dozen of us to go up to the village hotel in the rickety old 'bus, and among the crowd was a solemn looking old chap, dressed in very plain goods and wearing a coonskin cap. It was the typical village hotel landlord in the barroom, a very fresh young man behind the register, mighty little for supper, and that poorly cooked and there was more or less growling. The man with the coonskin cap was treated very brusquely by the clerk, and the frowsy headed waiter girl didn't seem to care whether he had anything to eat or not. He didn't say much, but it was evident that he was mad.

After supper the landlord and "Coonskin" had a private confab. When it was ended the old man came down stairs, opened the front door, and turned to the clerk and said :

"You git!"

"What do you mean!"

"I have rented this hotel. Skip!"

The clerk put on his coat and hat and walked out. Then "Coonskin" sent word to the cook and waiter girl to be out in half an hour, for the hostler to be gone by midnight, and for the barkeeper to vacate by noon the next day. He kindly allowed us to stop over night, but we had to get our breakfast at a bakery. By noon the doors of the hotel were nailed up, a sign of "Closed" posted, and as we footed it down to the depot the solemn old man thawed out sufficiently to observe :

"I'm after seven more of 'em along this line of railroad, and if I can shut 'em up the public will be in my debt. I have figured it out to my entire satisfaction, and I truly believe that three-fifths of the crime in this country is incited by poor hotel keeping."—New York Sun.

Light the Sick Room.

Dr. D. W. Richardson, in his lectures on "disease, and how to combat it," speaks of the custom, which in spite of modern sanitary teaching still prevails, of keeping the occupant of a sick room at all hours in a darkened room There is nothing, he says, so bad as a dark room ; it is as if the attendants were anticipating the death of the patient, and, if the reason is asked for, it is as inconsistent as the act. The reason usually offered is that the patient cannot bear the light ; as though the light could not be cut off from the patient by a curtain or screen, and as though to darken one part of the room it were necessary to darken the whole of it. The real reason is an old superstitious practice connected with small-pox and other terrible diseases, which involves the exclusion of light. A more injurious practice really could not be maintained than that of darkness in the sick room. It is not only that dirt and disorder are the results of darkness, but a great remedy is lost. Sunlight is the remedy lost, and the loss is momentous. Sunlight diffuses through the room and warms and clarifies the air. It has a direct influence on minute organic poisons, a distinctive influence which is most precious, and it has a cheerful effect upon the mind. The sick should never be gloomy, and in the presence of light the shadows of gloom fly away. Happily this fact is now recognised in hospital practice, and it should be equally so in private practice. The by-word of physician or surgeon should be the dying words of Gœthe, "More light, more light."

To Make Children Lovely.

There is just one way, and that is to surprise them by day and night with an atmosphere of love. Restraint and reproof may be mingled with the love, but love must be a constant element. "I found my little girl was growing unamiable and plain," said a mother to us the other day, "and reflecting on it sadly, I could only accuse myself of the cause thereof. So I changed my management and improved my opportunity to praise and encourage her, to assure her of my unbounded affection for her, an earnest desire that she should grow up to lovely and harmonious womanhood. As a rose opens to sunshine, so the child heart opened in the warmth of the constant affection and caresses showered upon her ; her peevishness passed away, her face grew beautiful, and now one look from me brings her to my side, obedient to my will, and happiest when she is nearest to me."—Women's News.

Wrongly Translated.

The story is an old one of the party of tired travelers who entered a house decorated by a peculiar sign and demanded oysters.

"This is not a restaurant," said the courteous gentleman who met them. "I am an aurist,"

"Isn't that an oyster hung outside the door?" asked one.

"No, gentlemen, it is an ear."

A body of sailors from an American vessel, stopping at Samoa, went to the German consulate and demanded dinner.

"This is not a hotel," said the offended domestic official who met them.

"Well, if it isn't a restaurant, what's that black fowl hung up for? Ain't it a sign?" inquired the spokesman.

The "sign" was the German eagle, the consular coat of arms.—Youth's Companion.

Dried Buffalo Tripe.

The other day a gentleman from Coldneck district was promenading down Whitehall street when he spied a string of sponges hanging up in front of a big grocery store.

"What is them 'ere?" he asked of Patrolman Brooks, who was passing.

"That is dried Buffalo tripe, my friend."

"The dickens you say! Is they good to eat?"

"Finest eating in the world if you cook it properly."

"How do you cook 'em?"

"Why, just slice it up thin, and after soaking it thoroughly, dip it in a batter and fry it. It's just splendid."

"Well, I'll be Junewoggled if I don't try 'em one bait," said he, and he walked into the store and purchased the whole string, while the clerks were much mystified as to what he wanted with so many sponges.

Yesterday he put in an appearance and meeting Patrolman Brooks again he remarked :

"Say, you know them 'ere tripes?"

"Yes."

"Well, they must a been the tripes o' the oldest bull on the range, for Becky Ann parbiled 'em, hashed 'em an' done every way with 'em, an' darned if she ever could get 'em fitten to eat ; an' I know they haint no better cook in Coldneck 'an Becky Ann, ef I do say it."—Atlanta Constitution.

A SPORTING PROPOSITION.—"Looky here, mister," said a tramp, ragged, unkempt and dirty, as he walked up to a couple of traveling men. "Looky here; is either of you two fellers anything much in the sportin' line ?" and he grasped his garments over his stomach as he made the inquiry.

"What do you want with a sporting man ?

"Well, is either of you sports ? That's what I wants to know first."

"My friend, here, sometimes takes a bet, if he can get a good one. But what do you want ?"

"I want somebody to get rich bettin' that I can eat thirty quail in thirty days. And it won't cost him a cent so far as I am concerned—nothin' but the birds—Merchant Traveler.

RICE BLANC MANGE WITH APPLE SAUCE.—Wash a pint of rice thoroughly; scald it with hot water, drain and cool ; add to the rice a quart of rich milk, a quarter of a pound of sugar, and a saltspoonful of salt ; simmer gently an hour. When done beat it with a wooden spoon. Wet an oval mold with water ; press the rice in it, and keep on ice until wanted. Peel, quarter and core five fine apples ; put them in a stew-pan with three half-pints of water, three cloves, two slices of lemon, and half a pound of sugar (dissolve the sugar in the water first) simmer until the apples are tender but will not break when removed from the pan. When done strain carefully and boil down the sirup until quite thick. Now turn out the rice on a glass dish, add the apples as a border, and pour the sirup over all.

OYSTERS FRITTERS.—Drain and chop fine twenty-five or thirty oysters. Beat well two eggs, add to them one cupful of sweet milk, two cupfuls flour, in which is sifted one-half teaspoonful baking powder, salt and pepper. Beat this batter until smooth, add the oysters, thoroughly drained of all liquor, mix well, and drop by spoonfuls into boiling fat, turn when brown, and when done remove with a skimmer.

A TERRIBLE ROW.—Petie—We had a howible wow at the club, don'tcher know.

Cholly.—What was it?

Petie—Why, Dickey tore Dolly's boutonniere out of his coat, and Dolly bwoke Dickey's eyeglaws. It was a scene of awful violence!

Cholly—Did—did either of them die? —Life.

When fragile woman sighs, deploring
The charms that quickly fade away,
What power, the bloom of health restoring,
Can check the progress of decay?
The only aid that's worth attention,
For pains and ills of such description,
Thousands of women gladly mention—
'Tis "Pierce's Favorite Prescription."

The price of this royal remedy, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, is but one dollar. Specific for all those chronic ailments and weaknesses peculiar to women. The only medicine for such maladies, sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee from the manufacturers, that it will give satisfaction or money refunded. See guarantee on bottle wrapper. Large bottles $1. Six for $5.

THIEF ARRESTED.—The news was received with the utmost satisfaction by the community that he had terrorized ; but the arrest of a disease that is stealing away a loved and valued life, is an achievement that should inspire heartfelt gratitude. Chilliness, cold extremities, depressed spirits, and extremely miserable sensations, with pale, wan features, are the results of disordered kidneys and liver. Arrest the cause at once by taking Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It is a purely vegetable detective, that will ferret out and capture the most subtle lung or blood disorder. Druggists.

STUMPED.—First Little Boy—My pop's a Methodist ; what's yours ?

Second Little Boy—Mine is a theosophist.

"Theosophist ? What's that ?"

"I don't know."

"Why don't you ask your pop ?"

"I did, but, from the way he looked, I guess he doesn't know, either."

——No wonder people have confidence when the best physicians are prescribing Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup.

A GOOD SUBSTITUTE.—"Ladies and gentlemen," said the Professor, "I find that I cannot perform the experiment of inflation, as the wind machine is out of order."

There was a great groan of disappointment. "However," added the Professor, suddenly, "I may be able to provide a substitute. Is there a gentleman from Chicago in the audience ?"—Dvake's Magazine.

PASTE FOR PIES.—Mix one quart of loose flour with two heaping teaspoonfuls of baking-powder ; rub in half a pound of butter, wet it with cold water ; work as little as possible after the water is in ; roll it out. Use less shortening if you choose.

SCALLOPED POTATOES.—Pare the potatoes, cover the bottom of a baking dish with bread crumbs, then add a layer of sliced potatoes, then bits of butter, salt and pepper ; fill the dish with alternate layers, wet the whole with milk, and bake the whole for an hour and a half.

HE WAITED TOO LONG.—Paterfamilias (from the head of the stairs at 2 a m.) —Fanny, will you ask that young man to step into the hall a moment ?

Young Man (timidly)—W-well, sir ?

Paterfamilias—I just wanted to ask you where you wanted your trunk put when it comes.—Lawrence American.

RISKY.—Irate Father—Young man ! I am enraged, sir, that you should seek to marry my daughter on so short an acquaintance. You are almost a stranger to her.

Stubbs (firmly)—Well, she doesn't take any more chances than I do. She's almost a stranger to me, too.—Columbia Spectator.
