A BLAMED SIGHT WORSE.

A bachelor, old and cranky,
Was sitting alone in his room,
His toes with gout were aching,
And his face was o'erspread with gloom.

No little ones' shouts disturbed him,
From noises the house was free—
In fact, from the attic to cellar
Was quiet as quiet could be.

No medical aid was lacking.
The servants answered his ring,
Respectfully heard his orders
And supplied him with everything.

But still there was something wanting,
Something he couldn't command—
The kindly words of compassion,
The touch of a gentle hand.

And he said as his brow grew darker,
And he rang for the hireling nurse,
"Well, marriage may be a failure,
But this is a blamed sight worse!"

The California Midwinter Exhibition.

The rapid creation of the White City at Chicago was a remarkable achievement, but even this wonderful feat of the skill of the architect and the engineer is transcended by the rapidity of transformation that took place at the San Francisco Midwinter Fair. Last August the western portion of Golden Gate Park was almost a wilderness made up of sand dunes and scattered trees. Under the hand of the landscape gardener, the park has been transformed into a veritable Garden of Eden and a dream city was created in five months. A city has grown up in the midst of many palms and broad-leaved tropical plants and almost within sound of the breakers which dash against the cliffs that guard the Golden Gate.

Following so closely upon the great Columbian Exposition, the Midwinter Fair has not attracted the attention that its merit deserved or that it would have received had it been held at any other time. The financial depression has also prevented great numbers from visiting it, who, at a more propitious season, would have made a pilgrimage to San Francisco. Many of the exhibitors at Chicago sent their wares directly to the California Fair, and a visitor there would easly recognize many familiar scenes from the Midway Plaisance. He could attend, if he pleased, the fantastic nuptial ceremonies that took place each noontide in the Cairo Street. He could, if it gave him pleasure, watch the contortions and so-called dances of the Oriental houris from the civilized East or the barbarous but less offensive war dances and songs of the Samoan warriors. Then there are many scenes of interest illustrative of early California life, the camp of the Forty-niners, with full equipment of stage coach, "road agents," keno lay out, etc. All these could be found and many more, but of these diversions we have no concern.

In the middle of the Great Court of Honor of the Midwinter Fair stands the Bonet electric tower. Owing to its height of 272 feet and its central position, it will readily be seen that the tower is one of the main features of the Exposition. The tower is built throughout of steel and was erected by Leo Bonet & Company, architects. To make the foundations, piles were driven in 17 feet and over 30 tons of cement were used. The Belvista Cafe is situated on the first platform, of an elevation of 80 feet above the level of the ground, It forms a delightful feature of the Fair for visitors to be able to lunch and dine at such a height apparently suspended in mid-air, and a delightful view of the grounds and surrounding country may be obtained from it. The second platform is 146 feet high, and the third is 220 feet high. On the fourth platform is placed one of the largest searchlights ever constructed.

Access to the various platforms is gained by the use of an electric elevator constructed by the Otis Company. This elevator was removed from the Manufactures building at the Chicago Fair, and was illustrated in the issue of the Scientific American for October 28, 1893. The elevator runs up to the third platform which is ten feet wide, and affords an excellent opportunity to study the arrangement of the Fair grounds. At night the Exposition is superb, and some idea of the brilliancy of the scene may be obtained when it is stated that on the tower there are 3,213 incandescent lamps, which by an interrupter are constantly "blinking" or forming patterns of various colors. The grounds are brilliantly illuminated and the outlines of the buildings are picked out in lines of incandescent lamps. It is somewhat difficult to appreciate the height of the cafe, owing to the structure that appears in front of it. This represents an elevated path ending in a spiral inclined plane. The wonderful extent to which the sense of equilibrium can be developed is demonstrated by the performance which is represented in progress. The performer causes the ball to travel along the path, ascend and descend the spiral and finally brings it and himself in safety to the platform below by the mere effort of balance.

The bizarre style of architecture which has been used in Japan from time immorial always suggests something mysterious, and hints at heathen rites even when the buildings are transplanted to our more rigorous country. Although Japanese villages have been from time to time exhibited in the United States, still the true Oriental effect was lost on account of incongruous surroundings. At the Columbian Exposition, the Tea Garden and the Hoo-den or the Japanese phœnix palace were objects of great interest, and were enjoyed by many visitors, but when the Midwinter Fair was proposed, it was soon seen that many Oriental effects could be obtained without the necessity of a miracle of the landscape or gardner's art. The surroundings of the Tea Garden at the Midwinter Fair are most appropriate. Georous flowers, fine trees and shrubs, and a miniature lake furnished unbounded possibilities to the promoters of the enterprise. In this ideal garden were erected a number of grasss thatched buildings. In the foreground will be noticed the dwarf trees, the raising of which is quite an industry in Japan, and one in which the Japanese excel. The storks are tame, and they have acquired bad habits in America, as they are very prone to loot the pocket of the visitor. The Japanese regard the birds as sacred, and hold them in veneration. * * * * * * * * Looking at this dainty little creature, it is no wonder that Pierre Loti says: "The mysterious little cabinet curiosity, the Japanese woman." The minute scale on which everything is constructed makes the visitor feel truly Brobdingnagian. The household utensils are like children's toys. Even the pipes which the animated figurines are perpetually smoking are infantile, being no larger than an acorn cup. They look with surprise at a foreigner with his large-bowled pipe, and they have a saying, "At the bottom of a pipe there lives poison.

Some of the mysterious little cupboards and closets which form such a distinctive feature in Japanese houses are shown in our engraving. It is strange that some one has not reproduced a Japanese house for a summer villa, for the construction would not be costly, the furniture must be simple to harmonize and there are wonderful artistic possibilities. The tea is presented in the tiny cups with a politeness which casts a shade upon the Frenchman.

The Japanese Tea Garden is an interesting feature of the Midwinter Fair, and rarely have both nature and art been blended with such satisfactory results.—Scientific American.

Are There Too Many People ?

Rev. Dr. John R. Paxton, of New York, says. "There are too many people in the world—too many mouths to feed. Sweep 2,000,0000 of us off the face of the earth. War or pestilance, that is the only cure." The New York preacher represents a class of sentimentalists who are very careless in considering the present labor troubles. They never take the trouble to investigate before they give out a plan of solution.

The population of the world is estimated at about 1,500,000,000, or 271 inhabitants to the square mile of land surface. The removal of 2,000,000 would reduce this world's population by one-tenth of 1 per cent., and still leave us over 27 inhabitants to the square mile. If Dr. Paxton will glance at the distribution of the world's population he will find that Europe has 350,200,000. Asia 800,000,000, Africa 205,000,000 America little more than 100,000,000, and Polynesia nearly 5,000,000. The density of population is 90 inhabitants to the square for Europe, 48 for Asia 18 for Africa, 7 for all America, and 20 for the United States.

There is no State in this country that has the density of population that England, France and Holland have. Little Rhode Island has the highest average for this country—318 inhabitants to the square mile, according to the census of 1890—while according to Mulhall England has 505, Holland 350, and France 320 inhabitants to the square mile. Massachusetts sustains a population of 278 to the square mile, and Germany a population of 233 to the square mile. In the West Ohio sustains a population of 90; Indiana, 61; Illinois, 68; Michigan, 36; Wisconsin, 30; Minnesota, 16; Iowa, 34; Missouri, 38; Nebraska, 13; Kansas, 17 to the square mile.

The most numerous army of Coxeyites, that of "General" Kelly, was organized in California, where the population in 1890 was 1.87 to the square mile. The other most troublesome "armies" were organized in Montana, which has a population of .91, or less than an average of one inhabitant to the square mile. When we find England sustaining 505 inhabitants to the square mile; Ireland, 148; Scotland, 135; France 320; Germany, 233; Russia, 42; Austria, 166; Italy, 260; Spain, 86; Portugal, 136; Sweden, 28; Norway, 16; Denmark, 133; Holland, 350; Belgium, 530; and Greece, 88. It is rather extravagant for any one to talk about the United States being crowded, with only an average of 20 inhabitants to the square mile, or of Kelly's army having been crowded out of California while there are less than two individuals to the square mile of territory.

By the last census there were 1,947,-285 square miles of territory in the United States, where there were only 2 people to the square mile. There were 592,037 square miles which averaged from 2 to 6 individuals each; 393,943 square miles that averaged from 6 to 18 population; 701,845 square miles that averaged from 18 to 45 population; 235,-148 square miles that averaged from 45 to 90, and only 25,312 square miles where the population was above 90 to the square mile. We could take this greatest average of density of population and multiply it by five before we should reach the crowded condition of England or Belgium. There is plenty of room in America yet, for North Dakota has only 2 inhabitants to the square mile; South Dakota, 4; New Mexico, 1¼, and Montana, Wyoming, Arizona, Nevada, and Idaho less than 1. There is no occasion for either a war or a pestilence. Those who are crowded might safely follow Horace Greeley's advice and go West.

Precaution of Old-Time Doctors.

It was formerly the practice among physicians to carry a cane having a hollow head, the top of which was gold, pierced with holes like a pepper-box. The top contained a small amount of aromatic powder or of snuff, and on entering a house or room where a disease, supposed to be infectious, prevailed the doctor would strike his cane on the floor to agitate the powder and apply it to his nose. Hence all the old prints of physicians represent them with canes to their noses.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

——"Doesn't this sight make you feel the utter insignificance of humanity?" asked the thoughtful young woman of her companion as they gazed on the massive cliff rearing its high head above them. "Oh, I dont know answered the frivolous girl. "It is big and all that, but when I come to think that it cannot eat ice-cream, dance or go to matinees I rather think humanity has the best of it after all.—Indianapolis Journal.

BETTER AND BETTER.—
"Better than grandeur, better than gold,
"Better than rank a thousand fold,
Is a healthy body, a mind at ease,
And simple pleasures that always please."

To get and keep a healthy body, use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, a remedy designed to not only cure all diseases of the throat, lungs and chest, but keep the body in a thoroughly healthy condition. It eradicates all impurities from the blood, and overcomes Indigestion and Dyspepsia. Blotches, Pimples and eruptions disappear, under its use, and your mind can be "at ease" as to your health.

——Colorado City is a beautiful and fashionable place, but sojourners of sound lungs find its hotels oppressive. Consumptives are familiarly called "lungers" in Colorado, and to the man of sound health every one he meets seems to be a lunger. The hotel clerk has a hacking cough, so has the hotel hotel barber, so has the barber's boy that brushes coats and blacks boots, so has the news vender and the typewriting young woman. When at length the desperate stranger takes a trolley car to visit the beauties of the little city's suburbs, a consumptive takes his fare and another holds the brake.

——It is good. The more Chamberlain's cough remedy is used the better it is liked. We know of no other remedy that always gives satisfaction. It is good when your cough is seated and your lungs are sore. It is good in any kind of a cough. We have sold twenty-five dozen of it and every bottle has given satisfaction. Stedman & Friedman, druggists, Minnesota Lake, Minn. 50 cent bottles for sale by F. Potts Green.

——Chauncey F. Black, ex-lieutenant governor of Pennsylvania, will spend much of his time hereafter in Baltimore in connection with southern business interests with which he is identified. Mr. Black is actively interested in southern developments and is impressed with the opportunities offered by the South to immigrants.

——At the first indication of disorder, the deranged or enfeebled condition of the stomach, liver, or bowels, should be promptly rectified by Ayer's Cathartic Pills. These Pills do not gripe, are perfectly safe to take, and remove all tendency to liver and bowel complaints.

——Before some preachers will throw a stone at sin they want to know who is hiding under it.—Ram's Horn.
