The Currency Issue.

Every effort ought to be made that is consistent with the safety of the business interests of the country to postpone the consideration of the currency question until after the revision of the tariff. Secretary Carlisle is convinced that the monetary conditions are daily becoming more satisfactory. Gold is coming in in adequate amounts and although there have been occasional renewals of the former demand for it there seems to have come an end to anything approaching lack of confidence in the Treasury.

The financial authorities at Washington, agreeing with Mr. Carlisle, are hopeful that the problem can be solved without drawing the question into the arena of immediate political debate. The main issue on which Mr. Cleveland was elected was that of the tariff. That is the issue upon which there is most harmony among Democratic Congressman, and that is the one also in which the people of the country are most deeply concerned.

The money question is no longer confined to silver coinage. It now embraces the whole subject of our incongruous paper currency and involves the entire system of banking. Moreover, it cannot be determined without a solution of the difficulties of those communities that have not proper banking facilities; in other words, that are not possessed of proper credit tokens for the transaction of their business.

The settlement of such problems will require very many months of deep study and thorough discussion. And in the mean time it would not be fair to the people who have demanded by an enormous majority that they shall be relieved from the burdens of tariff taxation imposed upon them by the McKinley act that the reform of that act should be postponed.

It is probable that the Administration will be able to take such steps as will convince the country and the financial world that a proper solution of the monetary question will be eventually reached, and that in the mean time American securities will remain safe investments. This being done, the attention of those who will be intrusted with the task of reforming the tariff will not be distracted, and the promises made by the Democracy can be fulfilled.—World.

I am an old man and have been a constant sufferer with catarrh for the last ten years. I am entirely cured by the use of Ely's Cream Balm. It is strange that so simple a remedy will cure so stubborn disease.—Henry Billings, U. S. Pension Att'y, Washington, D. C.

I suffered for more than ten years with that dreadful disease, catarrh, and used every available medicine that was recommended to me. I cannot thank you enough for the relief which Ely's Cream Balm has afforded me.—Emanuel Meyers, Winfield, L. I., N. Y.

Resolutions.

Resolved by Pomona Grange No. 5 in session at Bloomsburg April 14, 1893. That we are in favor of exempting Woodland from taxation as provided for in Bill entitled, An Act to exempt Woodland from taxation now before the Legislature.

Resolved, That we respectfully ask our Senators and Representatives in the Legislature, to use their influence and votes to pass the amendment to the bill to amend the act creating the State Board of Agriculture.

WHEREAS, The representatives in our State and National law making bodies should be in accord with the constituency they represent. Therefore,

Resolved, That we demand for this district a representative in congress next term whose interests are with the agricultural laboring and producing classes.
