Hot Lakes in New Zealand.

After a substantial colonial breakfast, consisting of mutton in various forms, we went down a winding path to the lake, and found that the chief to whom we had applied had provided us with a substantial English-built boat and a crew of six men, who did no injustice to the Maori fame for stature and strength. We at once embarked, but it was a good half-hour before we could prevail on our escort to do the same. Whenever Maori meets Maori they must have a talk; and for the next twenty minutes these fellows kept up such a furious jabber that we expected to see knives and tomahawks out at every instant. At last they all took their seats at the oars, and away we started at a great pace, and in less than two hours we landed on the other side. The warm stream that flowed from the hot lake above was too rapid to contend against in anything but light canoes; and having laden two of the crew with our luncheon and rugs we proceeded to walk the remaining mile to the white terraces. The scenery already was pretty enough, but we were quite unprepared for the wonderfully beautiful sight which suddenly burst upon us as we turned the last corner. A vast marble staircase rose above us streaming with water. At the summit a cloud of steam came rolling slowly up from some gigantic boiling pool and floated away among the hills. We were soon at the foot of the hill, and a nearer inspection only enhanced its beauty. The broad, flat steps were worn by the action of sulphureted water into an exact imitation of white coral, and on every platform rested a basin of the finest, clearest water. As each of these was filled from the basin above it overflowed into the basin below; and from being at boiling point at the top the water became almost cold at the bottom. As we ascended the steam became more and more dense; we stood on the brink of the topmost boiling pool wet to the skin, and unable to see a yard in front of us until some friendly gust of wind carried the vapor away. And these occasional glimpses revealed the most curious sight of all. The pool was almost regularly circular and hollow by nature; so exactly that its sides might compare favorably with the best paved bath in London. A mass of blue clear water writhed and tumbled within, now rising with a burst to the height of some twenty feet, now sinking into a furious whirlpool. The sight was beautiful and terrible, and one could no longer doubt that the Maories had here chosen a fitting habitation for their gods; indeed, who but gods could dwell in a spot so unnatural, so unearthly?—Good Words.

AMMONIA.—A very useful article. We quote the following from competent authority:

"Put a tesspoonful of ammonia into a quart of warm soapsuds, dip a cloth in it and go over your soiled clothing, and see how rapidly the dirt will disappear; no scrubbing will be necessary. To a pint of hot soapsuds add a teaspoonful of the spirits, dip in your fork or spoon (or whatever you wish to clean), rub with a soft brush, and then finish with chamois skin. For washing windows and mirrors it has no equal. It will remove grease spots from every fabric without injuring the garment. Put on the ammonia nearly clear; lay on blotting paper, and set a hot iron on it for a moment. Also a few drops in water will cleanse and whiten laces and muslin beautifully. A few drops in a bowl of water, if the skin be oily, will remove all uncleanliness and disagreeable odors. Added to a hot bath it entirely absorbs all noxious smell and nothing is better to remove dandruff from the hair. For cleaning nail and hair brushes it is equally good. For heartburn and dyspepsia, the atomatic spirit of ammonia is especially prepared; ten drops taken in a wineglass of water once a week will make them flourish. It is also good to clean plant jars. So be sure and keep a bottle of it in the house, and have a glass stopper, as it eats away cork."

THE two Italian methods of treating diphtheria—with chlorate of potash and hydrate of chloral—have been combined by Dr. Cæsar Cattaglia, of Rome, and, as he claims, with remarkable success. He dissolves a drachm of hydrate of chloral in five drachms of glycerine, and applies it to the false membranes three or four times a day, by means of a camel's hair brush. Of the chlorate of potash he gives from two and a half to four drachms a day, dissolved in four and a half ounces of water, to children of from three to six years, and an ounce to adults. With these medicines he always combines a tonic and restorative diet.

TO CURE RHEUMATISM OR GOUT.—A writer of the London Truth says a friend of his, terribly afflicted with the gout, consulted the most eminent physicians of Europe without avail, and was then advised by an old lady to eat a clove of garlic on going to bed and another in the morning. He took the medicine and was cured.—Onions probably would do as well, and would be as effective for rheumatism as for gout.

A TABLESPOONFUL of alum and a tablespoonful of salt dissolved in a gallon of water is said to be effectual in retaining the color of a lawn or calico dress. Soak the dress, and wash as usual; then rinse in the salt-and-alum water.

Cut This Out and Preserve It.

THE INFORMATION MAY BE VALUABLE SOME DAY.

1. Child, two years old, has an attack of croup at night. Doctor at a distance. What is to be done?

The child should be immediately undressed, and put in a warm bath. Then give an emetic, composed of one part of antimony wine to two of epecac. The dose is a teaspoonful. If the antimony is not handy, give warm water, mustard and water, or any other simple emetic. Dry the child, and wrap it carefully in a warm blanket.

2. Some one's nose bleeds, and cannot be stopped.

Take a plug of lint, moisten, dip in equal parts of powdered alum and gum arabic, and insert in the nose. Bathe the forehead in cold water.

3. Child eats a piece of bread, on which arsenic has been spread for killing rats.

Give plenty of warm water, new milk in large quantities, gruel, linseed tea; foment the bowels. Scrape iron rust off anything, mix with warm water, and give in large draughts frequently. Never give large draughts of fluid until those given before have been vomited, because the stomach will not contract properly if filled, and the object is to get rid of the poison as quickly as possible.

4. Young lady sits in a draught, and comes home with a bad sore throat.

Wrap flannel around the throat, keeping out of draughts and sudden changes of atmosphere, and every half hour take a pinch of chloride of potash, place it on the tongue and allow it to dissolve in the mouth.

5. Child falls backward in a tub of water and is much scalded.

Carefully undress the child, lay it on a bed, on its breast if the back is scalded; then dust over the parts scalded bi-carbonate of soda; lay muslin over it; then make a tent by placing two boxes with a board over them, in the bed, to prevent the covering from pressing on the scald; cover up warmly.

6. Mower cuts driver's legs as he is thrown from his seat. Put a tight bandage around the limb, above the cut, slip a cork under it in the direction of a line drawn from the inner part of the knee to a little outside of the groin. Draw the edges of the cut together with sticking plaster.

7. Child has a bad ear-ache. Dip a plug of cotton wool in olive oil, warm it and place it in the ear. Wrap up the head and keep it out of draughts.

HOW TO UTILIZE OLD FRUIT CANS.—Perhaps one of the most appropriate uses of an old fruit can that can be devised is to make it contribute to the growth of new fruit to fill new cans. This is done in the following manner:

The can is pierced with one or more pin holes, and then sunk in the earth near the roots of the strawberry or tomato, or other plants. The pin holes are to be of such size that when the can is filled with water the fluid can only escape into the ground very slowly. Thus a quart can, properly arranged, will extend its irrigation to the plant through a period of several days; the can is then refilled. Practical trials of this method of irrigation leave no doubt of its success. Plants thus watered flourish and yield the most bounteous returns throughout the longest droughts. In all warm localities, where water is scarce, the planting of old fruit cans, as a here indicated, will be found profitable as a regular operation.—Scientific American.

SALTPETRE FOR COWS THAT GIVE BLOODY MILK.—I lately had a fine cow that after calving gave bloody milk. I had the calf suck the cow. As it did not take all her milk, we had to put it in the swill tub. She continued to give bloody milk for over three weeks. I thought we should have to lose the use of her. I asked a neighboring farmer if he knew of any cure. He said he had heard that saltpetre was good. I thought I would try it. I dissolved perhaps one third of a teaspoonful, and mixed it in a warm bran mash. Three or four days after I asked my man if the milk looked any better. "Oh," said he (being a Frenchman), "it is all white now." At all events, we had no more bloody milk from her. I would not say that the saltpetre cured her, but the case is just as I state.—Weekly Globe.

A COW-HIDE HORSESHOE has been introduced, which promises to prove very useful. It is composed of three thicknesses of cow-hide, compressed into a steel mould, and then subjected to a chemical preparation. It is claimed for it that it lasts much longer and weighs only one-fourth as much as the common iron shoes; that it never causes the hoof to split, nor does it have the least injurious influence on the foot. It requires no calks; even on asphalt the horse never slips. The shoe is so elastic that the horse's step is surer and lighter. It adheres so closely to the foot that neithe. dust nor water can penetrate between the shoe and the hoof.

IF THOSE INTERESTED in blacking stoves will try greasing them with fresh grease before blacking, they will find that it prevents them from rusting. Add a pinch of brown sugar to blacking just before applying. This causes it to stick, and it polishes much easier and with half the usual rubbing.

HOW THIMBLES ARE MADE.—The manufacture of thimbles is very simple, but singularly interesting. Coin silver is mostly used, and is obtained by purchasing coin dollars. Hence it happens that the profits of the business are affected instantaneously by all the variations in the nation's greenback promise to pay. The first operation striking a novice as almost wicked, for it is nothing else than putting a lot of bright silver dollars, fresh from the mint, into dirty crucibles, and melting them up into solid ingots. These are rolled out into the required thickness, and cut by a stamp into circular pieces of the required size. A solid metal bar of the size of the inside of the intended thimbel, moved by powerful machinery up and down in a bottomless mould of the out side of the thimbles bends the circular disks in to the thimble shape as fast as they can be placed under the descendinr bar. Once in shape, the work of brightening, polishing and decorating is done upon a lathe. First, the blank form is fitted with a rapidly revolving rod. A slight touch of a sharp chisel takes a thin shaving from the end, another does the same on the side, and the third rounds off the rim. A round steel rod, dipped in oil, and pressed upon the surface, gives it a lustrous polish. Then a little revolving steel wheel, whose edge is a raised ornament, held against the revolving blank, prints that ornament, just outside the rim. A second wheel prints a different ornament around the center, while a third wheel, with sharp points, makes the indentations on the lower half and end of the thimble. The inside is brightened and polished in a similar way, the thimble being held on a revolving mold. All that remains to be done is to boil the completed thimbles in soapsuds, to remove the oil, brush them up, and pack them for the trade.
