PLANTS IN ROOMS.

In the crowded city, amid its dust, turmoil and troubles, it is pleasant to find a memento of the country in the opening rose and the modest daisy. When we see a pot of flowers adorning the window of the room, however humble in appearance the domicile may be, the feeling arises spontaneously in the mind, that they are fostered by the gentle hand of some one whose tastes are true and tender, says the Scientific American. A few words on the culture of plants in rooms may be beneficial to many persons at this particular season of the year. They should be placed in a situation where they can receive an abundance of light and air; otherwise they will become sickly.

Plants are frequently injured by injudicious watering. Some persons seem to suppose that deluges of water afford a remedy for all the evils to which plants are subject. This is a mistake. True, they require a considerable amount of moisture, but not one half the quantity which is oftentimes applied. Evening is the best time to water them, and in every case cold water from a cistern pump should be avoided. The water should be warmed up to the temperature of the atmosphere before applying it. Many plants are greatly retarded in their growth by cold water being poured upon them. The quantity to be applied varies with the size and habits of the plant; the ground should be thoroughly moistened, but not soaked. If the leaves should become infested with insects, some tobacco juice, mixed with water and sprinkled over them, will soon destroy these. The great feature in cultivating plants, to promote their health, is that which is equally efficacious with human being—cleanliness.

A Great Invention in Bee Culture—How to Empty Combs.

The bee papers of Europe and this country are filled with accounts of a German apiarian, of a method of emptying combs of honey without injuring them. The process is exceedingly simple, and consists only in slicing off the caps of the cells, and then causing the combs to revolve on the periphery of a wheel or cylinder, which empties one side of honey—then the other side is turned and emptied.—Liquids upon bodies which are whirled or revolved tend to fly off by what is called centrifugal force. In this case the revolution is so graduated that only the honey flies off, and dead bees, bee-bread, &c., remain behind, so that not only is the comb saved, but the honey is purer and better than that strained. The temperature requisite to success is about 80 Fahrenheit, which is gained in a warm room, or on a summer day.

The value of this invention may be the better appreciated, when it is known that it requires the consumption by the bees of fifteen to twenty pounds of honey (estimates vary,) to make one pound of wax, consequently, that the comb requires for its construction the use of just about as much honey as it will contain when filled. It may be found that in the economy of bee life, it is essential for bees to make or excrete a certain amount of wax in order to remain in good health, but this is hardly probable, for it has long been the practice of bee-keepers to save empty or partly filled combs with scrupulous care, and give them to the bees. And no bad results have ever been noticed.

A Word for Mules

We are glad to see that the use of mules for all kinds of hard, rough work is steadily gaining ground. These animals are not beautiful or musical, but they are useful and economical. They are fit for work younger than the horse, since they are put to service at three years old, though they do not reach their maturity until seven years of age. Their temper, health, and usefulness depend very much on the manner of breaking them. The so-called stubbornness and obstinacy of this animal arises chiefly from the abuse he is wont to receive when young. He seldom if ever kicks or bites those who treat him kindly. But the fact is, that the club and whip and whip-handle and boot-toe are applied to him without mercy, and yet he is expected to be always as patient and gentle as a cow!

The mule will do more work, and require less grain than a horse; he is less liable to disease, and recovers from sickness and injury quicker than a horse. He works better when old, and holds out longer. He seldom takes fright, or runs away. He does not like overdrudging when drawing heavy loads, and he should never be driven very fast. In making up spans (those of 15 to 15½ hands high make most serviceable teams), those of similarly dispositions should be chosen and put together, so that they will work together pleasantly and with a will. The mule seems made for work—he thrives under it, and is better in spirits and temper than when idle.

Corn and Hogs.

From carefully conducted experiments, by different persons, it has been ascertained, that one bushel of corn will make a little over 10½ pounds of pork—gross. Taking the result as a basis, the following deductions are made, which all our farmers would do well to lay by for a convenient reference—That:

When corn sells for 12½ cents per bushel, pork costs 1½ cents per pound.

When corn costs 17 cents per bushel, pork costs 2 cents per pound.

When corn costs 25 cents per bushel, pork costs 3 cents per pound.

When corn costs 33 cents per bushel, pork costs 4 cents per pound.

When corn costs 50 cents per bushel, pork costs 5 cents per pound.

The following statements shows what the farmer realizes in his corn when sold in the terms of pork:

When pork sells for 3 cents a pound it brings 25 cents per bushel in corn.

When pork sells for 4 cents per pound it brings 32 cents per bushel in corn.

When pork sells for 5 cents per pound it brings 45 cents per bushel in corn.

HENS AND THEIR LAYING.—In a late number of the Country Gentleman a poultry-raiser said from thirty-five to forty eggs a year was the best average he had been able to get from about a dozen hens. This brought several champions to their feet. One gentleman in Ohio has thirty hens, which, in seven months from January last, had averaged seventy-one eggs. Another correspondent had picked up 1510 eggs from ten pullets of the white Leghorn variety, from the 1st of last September to the 1st of July last year, or 151 each in ten months. Still another, from ten Brahmas, has had 730 eggs, or nearly seventy from March 1st to July 31st, besides raising sixty chickens.

FOWLS usually roost as high as possible to avoid uncomfortable draughts of air. If indulged in this, they often become asphixiated and drop dead from their perches, from breathing foul air arising from the fermentation of their droppings, or being suffocated by the carbonic acid gas from the breaths of many fowls, all close to the top of the house, or from both causes. In warm quarters and well fed, they will begin to lay before the close of the month.

PIGS SHOULD BE KEPT CLEAN.—The pig certainly in hot weather will search out and enjoy any dirty and wet hole, but he is nevertheless a very cleanly animal, and always thrives fastest on clean straw in a clean sty; he seldom, except by accident, leaves any dropping of his excrement in his sleeping apartment, and his sense of smell is so acute that he has actually been trained to scent game.

IN Germany, it is as common to blanket cows in winter and in wet weather, as it is to blanket horses in this country.—This care is well repaid by a greater flow of milk and a less consumption of fodder.

SEEDING TO TIMOTHY GRASS.—The experience of B. of Royalton, N. Y., agrees with mine, except that the heaviest crop of Timothy I ever raised was on low bottom land seeded the previous August before a heavy storm, without dragging.

DAHLIA ROOTS.—Keep your Dahlia roots just as they come out of the ground, until spring. Do not pull the roots from the stem, unless you wish to destroy them.

A MAN OF A THOUSAND—A Consumptive Cured.—Dr. R. JAMES, a returned physician of great eminence, discovered, while in the East Indies, a certain cure for Consumption, Asthma, Bronchitis, Coughs, Colds, and General Debility. The remedy was discovered by him when his only child, a daughter, was given up to die. His child was cured, and is now alive and well. Desirous of benefitting his fellow mortals, he will send to those who wish it the recipe, containing full directions for making and successfully using this remedy, free, on receipt of their names, with two stamps to pay expenses. There is not a single symptom of Consumption that it does not at once take hold of and dissipate. Night sweats, peevishness, irritation of the nerves, failure of memory, difficult expectoration, sharp pains in the lungs, sore throat, chilly sensations, nausea at the Stomach, inaction of the bowels, wasting away of the muscles.
