From the Newark Sentinel.

The Drunkard's Funeral.

A SCENE IN NEWARK.

"Can you attend a funeral this afternoon at 2 o'clock?" inquired a man beyond the meridian of life, who stood at my door, with an expression of sympathy upon his countenance—"Can you attend a funeral at the corner of —— and —— street?—There is a man dead there, sir; and although he is poor, yet we do not like to bury him without some kind of religious services. We should be very glad, sir, if you could attend."

"I am sorry to say that it is out of my power to comply with your request," I replied, "inasmuch as I am previously engaged to attend a funeral at that hour, in another direction."

"I am very sorry, sir," he replied; but after a moment's reflection, again inquired; "could you not come a little later, if we were to defer it an hour? Could you not come at 3 o'clock?"

"I think I can," I replied. "At all events I will come as near that hour as possible."

He left me, and at the appointed time I went to fulfil my first engagement. A man of four score years was sleeping his last long sleep. Relatives and friends were occupying the comfortable and well furnished apartments, absorbed in grief.—The services being over, the lengthy procession moved slowly outward to the peaceful mansions of the dead. It was not a costly burial but such as we should desire for ourselves—plain, solemn, appropriate—nothing extravagant, yet nothing wanting; and while we felt that the burial was such as we could desire, there was a congeniality also in the place selected for the last sleep of death, even our own beautiful and quiet cemetery.

I hastened from these solemn, orderly, and appropriate obsequies, to obey my second summons. An open wagon, with one horse attached, and four or five individuals were standing near the door. I felt a chill run through my veins. Part of a fearful truth was now revealed. The keen November wind was blowing, and the sky wore its gloomy autumnal aspect but, I feared there was keener anguish and deeper gloom within. I entered, and at one glance at the table all was told. It was THE FUNERAL OF A DRUNKARD! A small, cold and desolate chamber was appropriated for the solemn services. Indeed, it was all they had. Here for a season had lived, and here had died, and now from here was to be buried, a husband and a father, who had lived and died a drunkard. It was a dreary place.

There, in one corner, upon a rough old rickety table, from which they had often eaten their cold and cheerless fare, was placed the coffin, made of rough pine boards, slighly stained with red, in which was placed the corpse. He was a man perhaps of fifty, coarsely clad with grave clothes. His countenance, if an index to his state of mind, bespoke nothing but gloom. Around, and underneath his head where, in other places, I had often seen the downy pillow and the rich satin linings, were stuffed a few of the shavings roughly taken from the boards which composed his coffin.

I looked with a spirit almost crushed within me, first at this new trophy of the reign of death, and then at the living scene around me. Both were expressive of the deepest wretchedness. In an opposite corner, upon a pile of old clothes, rudely thrown together, sat the unhappy widow, a tall spare woman, pale as the corpse before me. Her eyes were large and sunken, and she was thinly and poorly clad; and as she sat, she wrung her hands as if to relieve the agony she felt within, while with almost every breath she gave a low, hollow, consumptive cough, which told me too plainly that death had marked her for his victim also. Several little children were standing around and beside the table where the coffin rested, shivering with cold, and weeping from some cause; whether they understood the meaning of a father's death or not—and the tears rolled down their pale and hollow cheeks, upon the uncarpeted floor, in large and briny drops. A few of the neighbors had gathered to attend the solemn services connected with the funeral. They were seated, some on boxes, others upon an old worn out trunk, while others stood. It was a gloomy scene, gloomier than the day without, and the anguish keener than the biting blast.

I stood there, in the midst of that group, a minister of Christ. The Bible was before me—the Bible so full of denunciations against sin. But as I looked around me, it seemed as if sin had denounced itself. There were the visible, tangible, heart-rending fruits of a godless life, and if possible the more revolting spectacle of a godless death, upon all which seemed written forsaken, hopeless, miserable. I strove to direct attention to the necessity of religion to preserve us from the vices and miseries of life, and to its holy consolations to support us under the trials of our earthly pilgrimage. But I feared then and still fear, that it was too late for such advice. There were hearts there which had been so long accustomed to the treachery of man, so steeped in sorrow and accustomed to sin, that they could hardly be led to repose confidence in God. Having commended them to the care of Heaven, and especially to the God of the poor; the coffin was carried down the narrow stairway, and the drunkard's family, half clad, and shivering in the keen November wind, was placed in that one horse open wagon at the door, and following the hearse, driven lonely and sad through the streets of our Christian city, to the Potter's Field, the last resting place of the friendless poor where the drunkard sleeps to-day unhonored and unknown.

"Oh dear!" exclaimed a young urchin who had been chewing green apples, "I've swallowed an odd fellow." "An odd fellow?" "Yes, he is giving me the grip."

Another Scientific Wonder!

PEPSIN!

AN ARTIFICIAL

DIGESTIVE FLUID,

OR

GASTRIC JUICE!

A GREAT DYSPEPSIA CURER.

Prepared from RENNET, or the fourth Stomach of the Ox, after Directions of BARON LIEBIG, The great Physiological Chemist, by J. S. HOUGHTON, M. D., No. 11, North Eighth Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

This is a truly wonderful remedy for INDIGESTION, DYSPEPSIA, JAUNDICE, LIVER COMPLAINT, CONSTIPATION, and DEBILITY, Curing after Nature's own method, by Nature's own agent, the Gastric Juice.

Half a teaspoonful of this Fluid, infused in water, will digest or dissolve, FIVE POUNDS OF ROAST BEEF IN ABOUT TWO HOURS, out of the Stomach.

DIGESTION.

DIGESTION is chiefly performed in the stomach by the aid of a fluid which freely exudes from the inner coat of that organ, when in a state of health, called the Gastric Juice. This Fluid is the Great Solvent of the Food, the Purifying, Preserving, and Stimulating Agent of the Stomach and intestines. Without it there will be no digestion,—no conversion of Food into Blood and no nutrition of the body; but rather a foul, torpid, painful, and destructive condition of the whole digestive apparatus. A weak, half dead, or injured stomach produces no good Gastric Juice, and hence the disease, distress and debility which ensue.

PEPSIN AND RENNET.

PEPSIN is the chief element, or Great Digesting Principle of the Gastric Juice. It is found in great abundance in the solid parts of the human stomach after death, and sometimes causes the stomach to digest itself, or eat itself up. It is also found in the stomach of animals, as the ox, calf, &c. It is the material used by farmers in making cheese, called Rennet, the effect of which has long been the wonder of the dairy.—The curdling of the milk is the first process of digestion. Rennet possesses astonishing power. The stomach of a calf will curdle nearly one thousand times its own weight of milk.—Baron Liebig states that "One part of Pepsin dissolved in sixty thousand parts of water, will digest meat and other food."—Diseased stomachs produce no good Gastric Juice, Rennet, or Pepsin. To show that this want may be perfectly supplied, we quote the following

SCIENTIFIC EVIDENCE.

BARON LIEBIG, in his celebrated work on Animal Chemistry, says: "An Artificial Digestive Fluid may be readily obtained from the mucous membrane of the stomach of a Calf, in which various articles of food, as meat and eggs, will be Softened, Changed, and Digested, precisely in the same manner as they would be in the human stomach."

DR. PEREIRA, in his famous treatise on "Food and Diet," published by Wilson & Co., New York, page 35, states the same great fact, and describes the method of preparation.—There are few higher authorities than Dr. Pereira.

Dr. JOHN W. DRAPER, Professor of Chemistry in the Medical College of the University of New York, in his "Text Book of Chemistry," page 386 says, "It has been a question whether artificial digestion could be performed—but it is now universally admitted that it may be."

Professor DUNGLISON of Philadelphia, in his great work on Human Physiology, devotes more than fifty pages to an examination of this subject. His experiments with Dr. Beaumont, on the Gastric Juice, obtained from the living human stomach and from animals are well known. "In all cases," he says "digestion occurred as perfectly in the Artificial as in the Natural digestions."

AS A DYSPEPSIA CURER.

DR. HOUGHTON'S preparation of PEPSIN has produced the most marvellous effects, curing cases of Debility, Emaciation, Nervous Decline, and Dyspeptic Consumption, supposed to be on the very verge of the grave. It is impossible to give the details of cases in the limits of this advertisement—but authenticated certificates have been received of more than

200 REMARKABLE CURES

In Philadelphia, New York, and Boston alone. These were nearly all desperate cases, and the cures were not only rapid and wonderful, but permanent.

It is a great NERVOUS ANTIDOTE, and from the astonishingly small quantity necessary to produce healthy digestion, is believed to act upon ELECTRO-MAGNETIC PRINCIPLES.

There is no form of OLD STOMACH COMPLAINTS which it does not seem to reach and remove at once. No matter how bad they may be, it GIVES INSTANT RELIEF. A single dose removes all the unpleasant symptoms, and it only needs to be repeated, for a short time to make these good effects permanent. PURITY OF BLOOD and VIGOR OF BODY follow at once. It is particularly excellent in case of Nausea, Vomiting, Cramps, Soreness of the pit of the Stomach, distress after eating, low, cold, state of the Blood, Heaviness, Lowness of Spirits, Despondency, Emaciation, Weakness, tendency to Insanity, Suicide, &c.

Price, ONE DOLLAR per bottle. One bottle will often effect a lasting cure.

PEPSIN IN POWDERS,

SENT BY MAIL, FREE OF POSTAGE.

For convenience of sending to all parts of the country, the DIGESTIVE MATTER OF THE PEPSIN is put up in the form of Powders, with directions to be dissolved in diluted alcohol, water, or syrup, by the patient. These powders contain precisely the same matter as the bottles, but twice the quantity for the same price, and will be sent by mail, FREE OF POSTAGE, for ONE DOLLAR sent (post paid) to Dr. J. S. HOUGHTON, No. 11, North Eighth street, Phila., Pa.

Six packages for five dollars. Every package and bottle bears the written signature of J. S. HOUGHTON, M. D., Sole Proprietor.
