SCIENTIFIC NOTES.

—A transparent leather, said to possess great strength, is now made in Germany by a new process.

—A careful examination has convinced a French chemist that wheat normally contains copper to the extent of eight to ten parts per million.

—The dazzling effect of the electric arc is a source of objection to its use as a locomotive head-light by the French engineers who have been trying it.

—A remarkable cloud, observed in Guatemala during eight consecutive days of last February, was found to consist of seeds floating in the air. The stream of particles resembled snow-flakes in appearance, and was only visible when between the observer and the sun.

—Prof. Fairchild thinks there are reasons for believing that the common house fly, with its numerous lenses, capable of change of focus like the human eye, can avoid the difficulties we encounter in microscopes, and may distinctly recognize objects only a twenty-millionth of an inch in diameter.

—The path of destruction of American tornadoes has averaged 1,085 feet in width, according to Sergeant Finley. The storm cloud moves at the rate of twelve to sixty miles an hour, while the wind within the vortex sometimes reaches the tremendous velocity of 800 miles an hour—392 miles being the average.

—The appropriations of the British Government for scientific purposes this year include $4,000 to the Meteorological Council for furnishing weather forecasts to newspapers without cost. The same liberal patron of science will be called upon to contribute $75 000 to defray the expenses of observing the transit of Venus in December.

—A London medical officer, Dr. Gibbon, is authority for the statement that the Jews of London average twice as long a period of life as the Christians. Pulmonary consumption and scrofula are almost unknown among the Jews of the metropolis. Their children seem to suffer less from diseases than do those of the English and Irish Gentiles in neighboring localities.

—Prof. Nordenskjold during his Arctic voyages was perplexed by the question, what becomes of the bodies of animals which die a natural death? He very seldom found such remains, and declared that on Spitzenbergen it was easier to find vertebræ of monster extinct reptiles than the bones of the seal, walrus or bird of the present day. The problem is yet unsolved.

—The micro-telephone has been applied by Count von Eugenberg, in the Tyrol, to the discovery of underground streams of water. He buries several micro-phones in the soil, connecting each with a telephone. With this arrangement he is enabled, in the quiet of night, to distinguish the gurgle of flowing water at a considerable depth in the earth.

—The havoc wrought by lightning is often frightful. A few weeks ago a thunderbolt struck a chimney 150 feet high—located in a town in the north of France—and cut a deep fissure in its entire length. Among other examples of like powerful effects, Arago states that in 1762 lightning destroyed the turret of a church at Cormonailles, and threw a stone weighing not less than 225 pounds to a distance of 150 feet; and, in 1809, a wall near Manchester, weighing more than 25 tons, was lifted from its foundation and removed nine feet at one end by a very violent thunderbolt.

—An oriental writer has recently given an interesting description of an ancient burial in the Chinese empire. It was the custom for the wealthy man to procure his coffin when he had reached the age of forty. He would then have it painted three times a year with a composition resembling silicate paint or enamel which formed an exceedingly hard coating. The process of making this paint is now one of the lost arts of China. If the owner of the coffin lived long enough, the frequent painting—each coat being of considerable thickness—caused it to assume the appearance of a sarcophagus, with a foot or more of this hard, stone-like shell. After death the veins and cavities of the stomach were filled with quicksilver for the purpose of preserving the body. A piece of jade would then be placed in each nostril and ear, and in one hand, while a piece of bar silver would be placed in the other hand. The body thus prepared was placed on a layer of quicksilver within the coffin; the latter was sealed, and the whole deposited in its final resting-place. When some of these sarcophagi were opened after a lapse of centuries, the bodies were found to be perfectly preserved, but they quickly crumbled to dust on being exposed to the air.

—Colladon long ago noticed incidentally that obstructions in the path of a sound decidedly lessens the intensity of the vibrations. These "sound shadows" are known to be much more distinct in a dense medium like water than in air. Prof. John Le Conte has recently given results of some further experiments on the subject, in which he took advantage of some dynamite blasts being made under water. He immersed a vertical pile, about a foot in diameter, at a distance of about forty feet from the explosive cartridge. Bottles and glass tubes were shivered by the concussion of the explosions when placed outside the geometrical shadow of the pile, but protected when within it. The sharp definition of these sound shadows has led Prof. Le Conte into an exposition of the theory of the effects. Like shadows of light, the distinctness of the sound shadow should depend on shortness of wave-length, and the sudden detonation of dynamite must generate a very short and intense wave, making a very sharply-defined shadow whenever an obstacle is met. It follows that less sudden sounds like the explosion of gunpowder, must produce less definite shadows.

ATTACHMENT TO NEWSPAPERS.

Some one who seems to know about the relation of a good newspaper to the family writes as follows:

"The strong attachment of subscribers to a well-conducted newspaper is fully confirmed by publishers. "Stop my paper!" words of dread to beginners in business, lose their terror after a paper has been established a term of years. So long as a paper pursues a just, honorable and judicious course, meeting the wants of its customers in all respects, the ties of friendship between the subscribers and the paper are as hard to break by an outside third party as the link which binds old friends in business or social life. Occasional defects and
