THURSDAY EVENING, JULY 29, 1880.

A Mountain Fruit Farm.

Mining Land Put to a New Use.

Solon Robinson in N. Y. Tribune.

I am spending a few weeks in the beautiful valley of the Juniata, and making frequent rides over the hills and among the old-fashioned Dutch farmers of this (Perry) and the adjoining county of Juniata; solid, wealthy, unprogressive as they were an hundred years ago. Many of them still live in their hewed log-houses, not half as large, handsome, airy or comfortable as their barns, which I have named "agricultural cottages."

Nearly all the orchards upon these old farms are of the most unimproved sorts of apples and seedling peaches of late ripening kinds. Only now and then a man seems to have thought of trying experiments in growing better sorts, or more than was wanted for family use. The people are farmers in strictest sense. Gardening and fruit culture are occult sciences. But, a new light is dawning in this valley; an experiment is in progress which proves that these rough mountain sides are nature's chosen spots for orchards; that here the cultivators of peaches in Jersey, Delaware and Maryland may renew their work when it fails in those states, for here is an abundance of cheap land, of little value for grain cultivation, yet excellent for orchards. This has been lately proved in several instances and different localities, but most extensively on the south bank of the Juniata river, in Juniata county, about one hundred and forty-four miles from Philadelphia, near a station called Thompsontown. There, if the traveler going west on the Pennsylvania railway will look out south and up the steep hill side, he will see the main part of an orchard of 15,500 peach trees, and 9,000 Siberian crab apple trees. And if he should stop and "walk or ride" through the orchard, as I did to-day, and find one dead or diseased tree, he will find more than I could; although I was told by Mr. Taylor the foreman, that he did lose one tree in the section where we were then.

"And how many trees are in this section?"

"Six thousand."

If a like result can be found anywhere else on earth I should like to be informed, that I might make another pilgrimage of a thousand miles to see it, as I have seen this, the most healthy, thrifty, most promising young orchard I have ever seen in all my extensive journeys through the United States and Canada. Yet most of the land is unfit for any other cultivation, and a considerable portion of the ground has never been ploughed, because so steep and so full of stones and roots. In this respect it reminded me of some of the vineyards of Pleasant Valley, N. Y., it being often difficult to get dirt enough to make a good loose bed for the roots.

There is another remarkable feature about this extensive orchard which is indicative of the character of the owner. Notwithstanding all the natural obstacles every tree has been so exactly set in right angled lines that the transverse rows appear as straight as those on the horizontal and vertical lines. Thus, when furrows can be ploughed at all, they can be run six ways among the trees, which are set 15 feet apart for peaches and quinces and 20 feet for apples. To accomplish this remarkable result of straight rows and exact distances required many a hard day's work removing stumps and stones and filling up holes. Now the beauty of the work fully repays the extra cost. It is, however, costly work to prepare the steep hillsides by hand labor, for the largest part of the timber trees had been cut off years ago, leaving a thicket of brushwood. An attempt is being made to utilize the brush by cutting it in a machine like a straw cutter and sending the product to market for kindling coal fires. As the roots in the ground continue to send up sprouts, which must be repeatedly mowed, the proprietor wants to know how to get them out without too much expense of hand labor. Who can tell him the best way? Can he fix a stout capstan at suitable points at the bottom of the slope and carry a wire rope and grappling iron up the hill to the roots and pull them out by mule or ox-power? I have so advised.

The first section of peach trees was planted in 1875, and first full crop was being gathered to-day, the varieties—Crawford's Early (white), of fair size and good flavor; and Beatrice, a small, red blush, early peach, very delicious. The Philadelphia market being overstocked, it does not pay to ship; so a drying house has been hastily erected, and a hot-air dryer, capable of passing sixty bushels a day, put in operation. The peaches are peeled by hand machines of a recently improved pattern, which do good work rapidly. By drying the fruit the seeds are saved for the nursery, for there are many acres of orchards yet to be planted. The trees which come into bearing next year will produce fruit from early in July till late frost. It is probable that all of the improved methods of putting up the ripe fruit will be adopted, instead of marketing it fresh; owing to the long transportation and risk. There are 444 acres in the tract, and with the exception of a narrow strip along the river, part of which is already occupied by wagon road and railway, the whole is the northern slope of a high hill, and is undoubtedly a most favorable location for an orchard; and fortunately it is owned by a gentleman who is not only able but willing to devote the immense energy and money necessary to prove to a thousand other owners of similar mountain land that it is not worthless for cultivation, as has been often declared, so that it has often sold only for its value for mining or timber.

Now I think I hear some impatient person who has read thus far about the operations of the owner of this mammoth enterprise crying out, "Who is he? You haven't told us his name!" I know it; and it required considerable argument to get his consent that I might give it; for he did not wish to have it appear as though he were boasting of what he had done, and he feared an avalanche of letters if his name was given. But to force so good an example, I persuaded him to allow me to give his name, and then no one will doubt what I have said, who happens to remember during the past half century a busy New York and Philadelphia business man, who usually writes his name "H. Bradford," who was born upon the banks of the Connecticut river, ten miles below Middletown. If you are curious to know when, you will find "Hezekiah Bradford" upon the baptismal register somewhere in that vicinity. I shall not tell exactly when or where the entry was made. But I will say that many men of his age prefer rest rather than such untiring labor as he puts into this enterprise, while at the same time he conducts his city business. Let us all wish eminent success to the Bradford fruit farm, and that the success of this experiment may be the incentive to many men to improve the waste lands of Pennsylvania mountain counties.

A word as to the incentive of Mr. Bradford's great work. A few years ago this tract came into his hands upon the false representation that it contained valuable veins of iron ore. He bought it unseen. When seen, it was found to yield no workable ore, and only a small tract of farm land, with a few common farm buildings. The question now was: "What shall I do with it?" That question has been answered. Mr. Bradford must take rank as a public benefactor.

A Fool Once More.

"For ten years my wife was confined to her bed with such a complication of ailments that no doctor could tell what was the matter or cure her, and I used up a small fortune in humbug stuff. Six months ago I saw U. S. flag with Hop Bitters on it, and I thought I would be a fool once more. I tried it, but my folly proved to be wisdom. Two bottles cured her, she is now as well and strong as any man's wife, and it cost me only two dollars. Such folly pays.—H. W., Detroit, Mich.

CURE.

The greatest of Modern Medical Discoveries. A Vegetable Preparation and the ONLY SURE REMEDY in the world for Bright's Disease, Diabetes and all Kidney, Liver and Urinary Diseases. There are a large number of testimonials of the highest character in support of these statements. Prof. Green, a distinguished allopathic physician of the South, in an article in the Medical Record, gives an account of the cure of two cases of Chronic Bright's Disease by this remedy, and advises all his brother physicians to use it in practice. R. Caulkins, M. D., of Rochester, N. Y., writes that he would prescribe the remedy to all afflicted with serious Kidney and Liver Diseases. Rev. J. E. Rankin, D. D., of Washington, D. C., tells of permanent cures effected by it, and says: "I do not doubt that it has great virtue." D. W. Bartine, M. D., D. D., of East Orange, N. J., certifies that it cured him of chronic Bright's Disease in two weeks. Rev. C. A. Harvey, D. D., Secretary of Howard University, certifies; "I am convinced that no remedy heretofore used or described can be held for one moment in comparison with this." These are sample testimonials.

Two compounds: For the cure of Diabetes call for Warner's Safe Diabetes Cure. For cure of Bright's and the other diseases call for Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure.

Warner's Safe Bitters, Safe Tonic, Safe Pills and Safe Nervine are also superior remedies, unequalled in their respective fields of disease.
