HOW THE MONEY GOES.

How goes the Money?—Well,
I'm sure it isn't hard to tell:
It goes for rent and salaries,
For bread and butter, coal and grates,
Hats, caps, and carpets, hoops and hoes—
And that's the way the Money goes!

How goes the Money?—Nay,
Don't everybody know the way?
It goes for bonnets, coats, and capes,
Silks, satins, muslins, velvets, crapes,
Shawls, ribbons, furs, and furbelows,
And that's the way the Money goes!

How goes the Money?—Sure,
I wish the ways were something fewer.
It goes for wines, taxes, debts,
It goes for presents, goes for bats,
For paint, pomnade and eau de rose,
And that's the way the Money goes!

How goes the Money?—Now,
I've scarce began to mention how.
It goes for lace, feathers, rings,
Toys, dolls, and other baby-things,
Whips, whistles, candies, belts, and bows,
And that's the way the Money goes!

How goes the Money?—O-me,
I know it doesn't go for rent!
It goes for schools and Sabbath chimes,
It goes for charity—sometimes!
For missions, and such things as those—
And that's the way the money goes!

How goes the Money?—There!
I'm out of patience, I declare;
It goes for plays, and diamond pins,
For public sins, and private sins,
For hollow shams, and silly shows—
And that's the way the Money goes!

BLINDFOLD BILLIARD PLAYING EXTRAORDINARY.

Since Murphy has beaten the best player in the old world, and laid out in despair all the others at blindfold chess playing, one of our Milwaukee billiard players has been practicing in private, the unheard of feat of playing billiards blindfold, and so successful has he become that on Saturday night he played a match game on four tables at the Newhall House, with eight of our best players, against odds, the wager being a free seat in our fashionable church. If he lost he was to furnish balls for his adversaries, and if he won they were to do the same by him—one seat against eight.—At eight o'clock a large crowd had assembled and the tables were prepared. Mr. Angle was led into the room blindfolded, and after shaking hands with his opponents, drinking a glass of N. O. Pomey brandy, picked out his cue, chalked it carefully, and commenced. On the first table from the "play off" he made four "nine spots," and as he went to make the fifth one, was taken with a cramp in the stomach and missed.

He went to the next table, and although the black ball was greased, made the handsome run of seventy three, then shot his ball into the left hand side pocket on the corner, placed his finger to his nose, wheeled gracefully on one heel, and began at the third table. Here he was less fortunate, and scored but twenty points, owing to the return of the "cramp." Frequent bursts of applause greeted his skill, and after taking a julip all around he went to the fourth, and made a run of eighty-nine without but three balls on the table. He then returned to the first table, and although he had made some beautiful plays before, fairly outdid himself, and run the game out, making the last shot with an umbrella merely to show his skill. At the second table he was equally fortunate, and closed the game there, making even "thirteen shots," from backward and left handed shots at that. At the third table he made a run of twenty-four from carroms, and then, leaving but three to go, undertook the feat of jumping the white and light red, and pocketing the dark. Standing on a chair he bowed gracefully to the crowd present, chalked his cue, and showing his great memory, walked five times around the table, mounted the chair, turned his back to the table, and shot between his legs, clearing the first two balls, pocketing the dark red, and shooting his cue into the bread basket of one of our corpulent property holders, (accidentally of course,) and from there striking an eye glass a young dandy was using, breaking it in to pieces, and injuring the person's face.

At this stage of the match the other parties gave up, and felt satisfied that Mr. Angle was the best player in the world. To prove this he tightened the bandage over his eyes, and approaching the fourth table, prepared for his final exhibition of skill. He chalked up, sat down in two chairs, and adjusted his belt. He then arose, and from spot balls run the game within two points of being out, a brilliant world his shots, that sparks absolutely flew from the balls. On his last shot, owing to having chalked his cue with a piece of an apple, which had been placed in the cup by mistake, he missed the first ball, jumped the second, kissed on the third, cushioned on the back rail absolutely made thirteen, and sat down amid deafening cheers.

Each of the persons present contributed five cents to get a ten cent drink, and the glasses being placed on the first table, he walked to it, and pledged out his long "toad" from at least two hundred others! He was then taken up on a chair made of cues, and was then carried to the bar, where each of the guests shook hands with him, one man giving him five hundred dollars to have the first shake! Mr. Angle is without doubt the greatest blindfold player in the world, and will leave for the East in a few days. His likeness will be seen in the New York Leggin of February 30.—Milwaukee News.

THE DEACON AND THE IRISHMAN.

Under this head we find the following amusing story going the rounds:

A few months ago, Mr. Ingalls, of Swamp Scott, R. I., was traveling through the western part of the State of New York, he fell in with an Irishman who had lately arrived in this country and was in quest of a brother who came before him, and settled in some of the diggings in that vicinity.

Pat was a strong, athletic man, a true Catholic, and had never seen the interior of a Protestant church. He was a pious Sunday morning that brother Ingalls met Pat, who inquired the road to the nearest church. Ingalls was a good and pious man. He told Pat he was going to church himself, and invited his new made acquaintance to keep him company, thither, (his place of destination being a small Methodist meeting house near by.) There was a great revival there at the time, and one of the Deacons, (who by the way was very small in stature,) invited brother Ingalls to take a seat in his pew. He accepted the invitation and walked in, followed by Pat, who looked in vain to find the Altar, &c. After he was seated, he turned to brother Ingal's and in a whisper which could be heard all round, inquired:

"Sure, an' isn't this a hirricks church?"

"Hush," said Ingalls, "if you speak a loud word, they will put you out."

"And faith, not a word will I spake at all," replied Pat.

The meeting was opened with prayer by the pastor. Pat was eyeing him very closely, when an old gentleman who was standing in the pew directly in front of Pat, shouted "Glory!"

"Holy clear damon," replied Pat, with his loud whisper, which was plainly heard by the minister, the deacon, and all. "Sure, and the man is the latest convertion ever entered the church, for the support of himself!"

The person grew more and more fervent in his devotions. Presently the Deacon uttered an audible groan. "Hist-st, ye blackguard, have you no decency at all, at all?" said Pat, at the same moment giving the Deacon a punch in the rib, which caused him nearly to lose his equilibrium. The minister stopped, and extending his hand in a supplicating manner, said—

"Brethren, we cannot be disturbed in this way. Will some one put that man out?"

"Yis, your riverence," shouted Pat, "I will!" and seizing the word, he collared the Deacon, and the horror and astonishment of the Pastor, brother Ingalls, and the whole congregation, he dragged him through the aisle, and with a tremendous kick he landed him in the vestibule of the church.

No Trust to Governors.—We clip the following from the legislative correspondence of the Leavenworth Times:

"But here I must tell you the anecdote which the Governor relished as much as you will. "His Excellency" went into a barber shop at Lecompton to get shaved. The barber is a black man, and belongs to Judge Elmore, formerly, as Bushanan says, in a slave state.

As soon as seated, the following dialogue occurred:

Gov. M. "I'll shave by the month."

Barber. "Don't know massa, about that."

Gov. "Why not, Tom?"

Barber. "Cause, massa, you Gubunors stay mighty short time in Kansas. Can't trust you to four weeks. Too long a time for people of your color."

Of course Gov. Medary paid up. There was no help for it. Mr. Darkey had the argument with him.

Jones married a handsome but not taciturn woman, and now reads a celebrated line from Keats as follows:

"A thing of beauty is a joy forever."
