BERLIN PROVIDES SAFETY AT SEA IN FRYE CASE NOTE

Germany Grants U. S. Demands in Regard to Lifeboats and Passengers

WILL SAFEGUARD LIVES

Arranges for Arbitration of Indemnities and Appoints Teutonic Delegate

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.

"The German Government quite shares the view of the American Government that all possible care must be taken for the security of the crew and passengers of a vessel to be sunk. Consequently the persons found on board of a vessel may not be ordered into lifeboats except when the general conditions—that is to say, the weather, the condition of the sea and the neighborhood of the coast—afford absolute certainty that the boat will reach the nearest port.

"In this manner Germany subscribes to the position of the United States—that a lifeboat in an open sea is a 'place of safety' only under certain conditions—in its last note to this Government on the Frye case, made public at the State Department today. Germany states in this note that hereafter persons aboard a merchant vessel about to be sunk will not be forced to take to lifeboats except when the general conditions are such that they are certain to reach land.

The text of the note follows:

"With regard first to the ascertainment of indemnity for the vessel sunk, the German Government is in agreement with the American Government in principle that the amount of damages be fixed by two experts, one each to be nominated by the German and the American Governments. The German Government regrets that it cannot comply with the wish of the American Government to have the experts meet in Washington, since, the expert nominated by it, Doctor Greve, of Bremen, director of the North German Lloyd, is unable to get away from here, and furthermore would be exposed to the danger of capture during a voyage to America in consequence of the conduct of maritime war by England contrary to international law. Should the American expert likewise be unable to get away, the two experts might perhaps get in touch with each other by correspondence.

DON'T WANT AN UMPIRE.

"The German Government likewise regrets that it cannot assent at this time to the nomination of an umpire as desired by the American Government, for, apart from the fact that in all probability the experts will reach an agreement in the case of the William P. Frye with the same facility as was the case with similar negotiations with other neutral governments, the assent of the German Government to the consultation of an umpire would depend materially upon whether the differences of opinion between the two experts pertained to questions of principle or merely to the appraisement of certain articles. The consultation of an umpire could only be considered at all in the case of appraisements of this nature.

"Should the American Government insist on its demands for the meeting of the experts at Washington or the early choice of an umpire, the only alternative would be to arrange the fixing of damages by diplomatic negotiations. In such an event the German Government begs to await the transmission of a statement of particulars of the various claims for damages accompanied by the necessary proofs.

"With regard to the arbitral treatment of the difference of opinion relative to the interpretation of certain stipulations of the Prussian-American commercial treaties, the German Government has drawn up the inclosed draft of a compromise, which would have to be worded in the German and English languages and drawn up with due considerations of the two alternating texts. It is true that the draft does not accommodate the suggestions of the American Government so far as it is not in accordance with the rules of summary procedure provided by chapter 4 of The Hague arbitration convention, but with the rules of regular procedure.

TREATIES IMPORTANT.

"The summary procedure is naturally intended only for differences of opinion of inferior importance, whereas the German Government attaches very particular importance to the interpretation of the Prussian-American treaties which have existed for over 100 years. Pursuant to the agreement made, any proposed amendments would have to be discussed between the Foreign Office and the American Embassy, and oral discussion would appear to be advisable.

"Until the decision of the permanent court of arbitration the German naval forces will sink only such American vessels as are loaded with absolute contraband when the preconditions provided by the Declaration of London are present. In this the German Government quite shares the view of the American Government that all possible care must be taken for the security of the crew and passengers of a vessel to be sunk. Consequently the persons found on board a vessel may not be ordered into her lifeboats except when the general conditions—that is to say, the weather, the condition of the sea and the neighborhood of the coasts—afford absolute certainty that the boats will reach the nearest port.

"For the rest, the German Government begs to point out that in cases where German naval forces have sunk neutral vessels for carrying contraband no loss of life has yet occurred.

"The undersigned begs to give expression to the hope that it will be possible for the two Governments to reach a complete understanding regarding the case of the William P. Frye on the above basis, and avails himself of this opportunity to renew to his Excellency the Ambassador the assurance of his highest consideration. VON JAGOW."

The arbitration "compromise" then outlined is to the following effect:

A court of arbitration would decide this legal question, "Whether, according to the treaties existing between the parties, in particular Article xiii of the Prussian-American Treaty of Amity and Commerce of July 11, 1799, the belligerent contracting party is prevented from sinking merchant vessels of the neutral contracting party for carrying contraband when such sinking is permissible according to general principles of international law."

The court would be composed of five men chosen from the permanent tribunal of The Hague, two to be named by each Government and the fifth, to act as umpire, by those four. In case of failure to name the umpire the president of the Swiss Federal Council would be requested to name him.

March 1, 1916, each government should transmit 15 copies of its argument with all documents and correspondence on which it bases its case. May 1, the parties would deposit their counter-cases, with evidence and concluding statements.

By March 1 each must deposit 300 Holland guilden toward the cost of the proceedings.

June 15, 1916, the arbitrators would meet at The Hague and examine the dispute.

Despair of Saving Would-be Suicide

Physicians at St. Agnes' Hospital despair of saving the life of James Fahey, Jr., 23 years old, 2162 South Fifth street, who attempted to end his life last night at his home. The young man shot himself in the breast. Despondency over ill health and, it is said, the fact that he was separated from his wife and child, caused the young man's desire to die.

RAINBOW CLUB FOR THE BOYS AND GIRLS GAINS MANY MEMBERS DAILY

Are you one of the little ones who are following the golden way? Are you "bumping elbows" with the girls and boys of Philadelphia who are pledged 5000 strong to spread brightness and cheer throughout the "everyday."

Are you one of the 5000 who are going to help us make that number 10,000 by Washington's Birthday? If not, make up your mind right this minute. Turn to page 9 of tonight's EVENING LEDGER. Read the Farmer Smith Rainbow Club news! Sign the pledge and be a member of an institution that you, the children of Philadelphia, are going to make travel down in history!

The following is a list of those who have joined the Rainbow Club this week up to Friday night.
