IMPORTANT OPINION.

An important opinion has just been delivered by Judge Woodward of the Supreme Bench, relating to partnership property. The following portion of the opinion will give an idea of the principle. The Judge says:

"That a sheriff acting under an execution at the suit of a judgment creditor of one partner can sell and deliver no part of the partnership goods, but only the contingent interest of the debtor partner in the stock and profits after settlement of partnership accounts and payment of partnership creditors, is a conclusion that results necessarily out of the principles of the partnership relation, and is sanctioned by a great number of modern decisions, both in England and the United States.—What are some of the principles of this relation? It is a contract relation, and therefore no partner can be introduced into it except upon consent. A purchaser at a sheriff's sale of a partner's interest becomes a tenant in common with the other partners, so far as to entitle him to an account, but he does not become a partner. On the contrary the sale works a dissolution of the partnership, as completely as the death, insanity or bankruptcy of a partnership.

Partners are joint-tenants of all the stock and effects employed in their business. No partner can have a separate interest in any part of the property belonging to the partnership, though each has an entire as well as joint interest in the whole of the joint property. A levy, then, to effect the interest of a partner, cannot touch a specific proportion of the goods, nor the whole, because others have property in every part as well as the whole, coupled with a right, arising in contract, to use them for the purposes for which the partnership was instituted. The only levy that can be made, consistently with the relation the partners sustain to the goods, is of the debtor's interest in the whole, and that is to be measured by final account.

SPIRITUALISM.—The following paragraph is extracted from an editorial article in Dr. Rees's Medical Gazzette for February, published in New York:—

"Hence they have gone on from one imposture to another, from rapping and alphabets when these become stale to bell ringing, table moving, singing, dancing, writing, descerning spirits, healing diseases, revealing truths and denouncing errors in religion, morals, science and philosophy, and all professedly from the ghosts of the departed. And the public press has done, and is still doing, much to perpetuate the iniquity by recording as facts of the most absurd of these stories. In several of these presses, the movement of tables have been alledged as capable of being affected by a circle sitting around it, and touching it with their hands; thus giving color to the wildest of the ghostly stories, while disclaiming these and alleging electricity as the cause. But they forget to tell, that the tables only move in the dark, and there will be found under each moving table a stout negro, white or black, whose muscles furnish the locomotion. If any body alleges the contrary, we have a small table in our office on which we write, and we offer one hundred dollars to any ghost or medium, in this world or the other, who will move it an inch in daylight by any supernatural, spiritual, magnetic, or electric influence, which shall be invisible and intangible to our own optics; and they may sit in a circle around it for a month and "call spirits from the vasty deep, but will they come?"
