MR. CLYMER AT HOME. The Reading Journal states some facts worth remembering. In 1850 Mr. CLYMER was a candidate for the Legislature. General Keim was on the same ticket for Congress. Clymer ran 1,500 behind Keim. In 1860, when Mr. Foster was the democratic candidate for Governor, Mr. Clymer ran on the same ticket for Senator, and came out 654 behind Foster. In 1861, Mr. Clymer was again a candidate for Senator, Mr. Schoch being on the same ticket for Judge. Mr. Clymer ran out 16 behind. In 1863 Mr. Clymer was once more a candidate for Senator, and received fewer votes than any other candidate on the democratic ticket.

OUR RELATIONS WITH JAPAN.

Convention of Japan, American and European Powers.

WASHINGTON, April 28.—The President has officially proclaimed the Convention between the Empire of Japan and the Governments of the United States, Great Britain, France and Holland providing for the payment to these Governments the sum of $3,000,000 for indemnities and expenses. This Convention was made in view of the hostile acts of Mo[illegible] Daeen, Prince of Nagato and Smoo, which were assuming such formidable proportions as to make it difficult for the Tycoon to observe the treaties, the Governments above named having been obliged to send their combined forces to the straits of Simanoski in order to destroy the batteries erected by that Daimo, for the destruction of foreign vessels and the stoppage of trade, and the Government of the Tycoon, upon whom devolved the duty of chastising this rebellious prince, being held responsible for any damage resulting to the interests of the treaty powers, as well as the expenses occasioned by the expedition. The governments of the United States, Great Britain, France and Holland declare in this convention that inasmuch as the receipt of money has never been the object of said powers, but the establishment of better relations with Japan, and the desire to place them on a more satisfactory and mutually advantageous footing is still the leading object; in view, therefore, if His Majesty, the Tycoon, wishes to offer in lieu of the payment of the sum claimed, and as material compensation for the loss and injuries sustained by the opening of Simanoski or other ports in the inland sea, it shall be at the option of said governments to accept the same or insist on the payment of the indemnity in money under the conditions above stipulated.

CONGRESSIONAL PROCEEDINGS.

WASHINGTON, April 28.

HOUSE.

The House met to-day for general debate on the President's Amnesty Message.

Mr. Schofield, of Pa., addressed the House on reconstruction. The premises which he assumed were that the disloyal population of the South would not exceed five millions, and that this population was so distributed that if the late seceded states were admitted with [illegible] Senators and eighty-four Representatives, thus permitting one-seventh of the whole population of the United States to control more than one-third of the legislative power, and that this control would be used for the destruction of the Government. He urged that the seceded states came back to the Union only by coercion, that it was a forced bridal, that the original cause of secession was hatred of the North, and its anti-slavery majority; were [illegible] stronger now than before. They did not profess themselves to be in favor of the Union, though untruthful men from the North professed it for them; and they would rouse the Confederacy at once if they could, and they would use their former power to provoke a war with England or France, hoping to secure their own independence. For this state of things, three remedies have been proposed. First, to disfranchise the leading rebels; second, to neutralize their votes by enfranchising the blacks; and third, to make the population of [illegible] disfranchised classes, or the number of voters the basis of representation. He advocated the third proposition, claiming that it was the Republican plan of reconstruction. The delay in reconstruction he attributed to the steadfast opposition of the Democrats. They fought against all reconstruction that did not allow the return of their long-[illegible] [illegible] than before, but there was no need of great haste, the rebels had been for full four years out upon plague infected seas, and [illegible] they can now tarry at quarantine for a [illegible] season.

The President's policy as expressed in his correspondence with his Provisional Governors, was not inconsistent with this plan. His [illegible] breath was ever now the law of the land in these states. The Democrats were pursuing him with unrelenting friendship, and if they finally seduced him, his friends could rejoice that the past is at least secure. The President's patriotic thoughts of the last five years would still live, although only to reprove him. The proposition to admit loyal Representatives from the South, he (Schofield) regarded as a snare, just as Sumner had hung [illegible] out the Union flag as a snare to unarmed merchant vessels, placing it with the pirate emblem when he had secured his victim.

Mr. Schofield replied at length to the leading objection made to the Republican plan of reconstruction, comparing it with the policy advocated by the opposition. If the latter were carried out, the Confederates would have eighty votes in the next electoral college, and would need only seventy-seven more to elect a President. Of these they counted thirty-one from semi-confederate States and expected [illegible] Democrats of New York and New Jersey [illegible] to make up the remaining [illegible] [illegible]

Mr. Moorehead next addressed the House on the financial condition of the country. Ample guarantees for the future should be required. The South should abandon the principle of slavery, should secure the rights of the freedmen, should repudiate the rebel debt, renounce the claimed right of secession, should cultivate a spirit of loyalty and prove it by their works and should accept as the true theory of the constitution that which the war had settled in conformity with the purposes of its framers. Passing from this he proceeded to discuss the question of the National Debt and the duty of Congress to protect its sacredness, and, at the same time, so to distribute the burdens of the nation as to develop the resources of the country, the encouragement of its labor and the improvement of the condition of the people. He closed by an appeal on behalf of labor, from which the country had its strength and in which was its hope. As labor sinks so the nation sinks, as labor rises, the nation rises in all the elements of greatness and power.

Mr. Finck addressed the House on the question of reconstruction. He insisted that Congress could exercise no powers not delegated under the Constitution, except such as were necessary to carry out express grants.

Mr. Banks then addressed the House on behalf of the New England capitalists, who had been somewhat severely reflected upon the other day by Mr. Wentworth, in the debate on the Northern Pacific Railroad bill.

At halfpast five the House adjourned.

The County Superintendency.

EDITORS GAZETTE:—In reading the various articles relating to the County Superintendency, that have for the past few weeks been claiming the attention of our citizens, we find personal and invidious attacks upon one of the prominent publishing houses of our city, and highly disparaging remarks upon certain text books in our public schools.

The books referred to are the productions of a few talented minds native to the city, and are at present used in the majority of the public schools of the County and in various parts of this and other States.

Now, why these books or this publishing house should be dragged into the controversy, it is hard to say, unless it be that the present is judged to be a good opportunity to pave the way for electioneering for the introduction of school books from a publishing house in Cincinnati who have their agent on the grounds strenuously working for that firm, and who stands behind, directing the attacks, which are to throw out of our schools the productions of Pittsburgh, and replace them with others from a distance.

The only ground for these attacks that can possibly be assumed by the party in question, is that the publishing house of our city has used influence against the present Superintendent, in order to defeat him in the coming election. But this is a pretext, too flimsy to be regarded for an instant, for it is open and notorious that the moment it was found that an agent of their house, a man of talent and of the greatest value to the firm, was making efforts to defeat the Superintendent, he was instantly dismissed from his office, the firm being desirous of escaping from all entanglements with school government, or influence in the affairs of any of the candidates.

Justice demands that this matter be noticed, and without further remark, we may safely assume that so long as these works are of equal value with those published elsewhere, a preference will be given them.

The Sunday Beer Sellers.

On Saturday, Alderman Humbert, of the First Ward, held a hearing in the cases of the parties arrested in Allegheny, Reserve township, and Duquesne borough, some days since upon information made against them for selling beer on Sunday. The cases were all disposed of by the parties being held to bail to answer at court, with the exception of M. Zier, Bart and Jacob Lettenie, which have not yet been heard. The following are the names of the parties who gave bail: Jacob Deerstein, Peter Reschuer, Wm. Leistein, Joseph Loffink, Conrad Eberhart and John Lettenie, of Reserve township; Jno. Walker, John L. Rittner and Jacob Long, of Fourth Ward, Allegheny, and Sebastian Hood, of Duquesne borough. Deerstein, Einstein and Loffink were each held to bail on two charges.

It would seem that this wholesale prosecution would have a salutary effect in restricting this infamous Sunday traffic, and putting an effectual stop to the bacchanalian scenes which characterize the Sunday beer drinking resorts located at and in the neighborhood of Troy Hill, but we learn that on last Sabbath the majority of the beer stands of the parties above named were again open, and crowded equally as much as on previous Sabbaths. We understand that these additional infractions of the Sunday law will be promptly met by additional information.

The Case of John Horner.—We were desired by one of the witnesses in the case of John Horner, of the Third ward, Allegheny, who was brought before Alderman Hummert, of the First ward, a few days since, on a charge of selling beer on Sunday, and discharged for want of sufficient evidence, to retract our statement that the witnesses were drunk. We have only to say that we do not know of our own knowledge, but were so informed. Moreover, in another case, for the same offense, which was discharged for the same reason, it is also alleged that the witnesses were taken out of the Alderman's office and made drunk, for the purpose of preventing them from giving intelligent testimony.
