Conundrums.

A late number of the Galaxy contains an exhaustive article on the subject of conundrums. It might be called a digest of the art. The following will show it to be a very simple art:

We will use the dictionary once more. Turn to s and discover which words there are which will furnish a pun by omitting the s: for instance, school; take off s and you have cool. Now proceed thus; Why is a man who does not lose his temper like a schoolmaster? Because he (keeps school). When does a man entertain his horse and guest alike? When they both feed at his table (his stable). Why is a man who goes up town after beer like the goods in an auctioneer's store? Because he is up for 's ale (up for sale). Why is spermaceti like a busybody? Because it makes scandals. There are others made on the same principle, but for which the dictionary affords but little help, as when we say that an old dog is like an inclined plane, because he's a slow pup (slope up); or that hens cannot see immortality, because they get their necks twirled (next world) in this. One of the worst of this kind was Dr. Holmes'; Why is an onion like a piano? Because it smell odious. A pun can also be made sometimes, by drawing or lengthening out the pronunciation of a word, as when we say that the kind of monkeys that grow on grape-vines are gra-apes.

A style of conundrum has become very frequent and popular which is founded on a transposition of letters or words, giving a new and surprising sense. I have opened one package of this class. The first one is as follows: What is the difference between stabbing a man and killing a swine? One is assault with intent to kill, the other is killing with intent to salt. So it is discovered of a cat and a document that one has claws at the end of its paws and the other has pauses at the end of its clause; of a wife and an editor, that one sets articles to right and the other writes articles to set; of the eagle and a certain kind of dog, that one is a tarrier in the sky and the other is a Sky terrier; of the permission to speak and the command not to speak, that in one case you are allowed to talk and in the other you are not to talk aloud; of a pound of meat and a drummer boy, that one weighs a pound and the other pounds away; of an utterer of spurious coin and a false heir, that one issues a counterfeit and the other counterfeits an issue; of a church organist and the influenza, that one knows the stops and the other stops the nose; of a successful lover and his rival, that one kisses his miss and the other misses his kiss; of an unsuccessful swain and a father of a family, that one is a sighing lover and the other a loving sire; on a mischievous mouse and a beautiful young lady, that one harms the cheese and she charms the he's; of seventeen and seventy, that one is careless and happy and the other hairless and cappy; of the effect of catching cold and one of the isles of Greece, that in one case it is you cough and in the other Corfu; of an emperor and a beggar, that one issues manifestoes and the other manifests toes without his shoes; of a man boiling beets and a man flogging him, that one cooks the beets and the other beats the cook; of a tailor and a siege gun, that one works the breeches and the other breaches the work; of the Prince of Wales and a bombshell, that one is heir to the throne and the other thrown to the air; of "Old Uncle Ned" and Louis Napoleon in the event of another French revolution, that the one had no hair on the top of his crown, the place where the hair ought to grow, and the other would have no crown on the top of his heir, the place where the crown ought to go. It is also mentioned that the difference between a baby and a great coat is, that the one you was and that the other the wear; that perseverance is a strong will and obstinacy a strong won't; that Noah's ark was a high ark, but that an archbishop is a hierach; of a gauze dress and a drawn tooth, that one is too thin and the other is tooth out; that the Prince of Wales is an heir apparent, an orphan has ne'er a parent, a bald head has ne'er a hair apparent and a gorilla has a hairy parent.

As a relief from the ingenuity of the specimens which I have given, it is well to introduce occasionally a question which ought to be obvious to every one, but is not. For instance what makes more noise than a pig under a gate? two pigs; why does a traveler who has been on a long journey, and comes to a board fence in the midst of a forest, try to get over it? because he wants to get over; what is the best thing to do in a hurry? nothing; why does a miller wear a white hat? to keep his head warm; Lord Dundreary gives one of this kind which, though obvious, is notwithstanding exceeding logical:

"Why doeth a dog waggle hith tail? Give it up? I think moth feliath will give that up! You thee the dog waggeth hith tail becauth the dog'th thtwonger than the tail. If he wathn't, the tail would waggle the dog."

It is so easy to make conundrums that most intelligent men will prefer to put their faculties to some harder and useful task. A dancer once said to a Spartan, "I can stand on one leg longer than you." "Perhaps so," said the Spartan, "and so can my goose." A few conundrums are very well after dinner with raisens and nuts, and I have no doubt my friend, the editor, will be willing to furnish them at reasonable rates in lots to suit purchasers.

The Age of Chivalry.

It is not unfrequently that we hear the mournful declaration that the age of chivalry has passed, nevermore to return. Grievous, indeed, is this thought to high-born knaves and low-bred assassins. In this matter extremes can meet and shed bitter tears together over the degeneracy of the times, and look back with wistful longings to the good old days gone by. But are we quite sure that these halcyon days are quite done with? The revival of the ancient and chivalrous tournament is certainly a hopeful sign. Whites and blacks alike have entered the list with great zeal within the past year. The costumes and customs of the middle ages have dazzled before us, and Don Quixotte himself, when poising his lance in rest to attack a wind-mill, could hardly have presented a more gallant appearance than these modern knights in the saddle. Another chivalrous sign of these modern times is seen in such valorous attacks as these made on many loyal men in the country. These have usually been in the dark, or from behind trees in the woods, or when known to be unarmed and entirely unsuspecting of danger. That chivalry and honor which believes that "discretion is the better part of valor," is evidently in the ascendant. The nice couplet,

"He who fights and runs away,
May live to fight another day."

has manifestly become one of "the wise saws and modern instances." Sancho Panza well expressed it when he said that "he was afraid of nothing except in cases of danger."

Another chivalrous manifestation of our day is to send round to the editor's sanctum and ask if he is responsible for a certain article. Fourteen out of eighteen editors of Vicksburg, within the last twenty years, are said to have "gone under" in that way, and if report be true, the same chivalrous game is about to be played over again there, with some assistance from our own city. Now this may be called "chivalrous," "honorable," &c., but it only appears to us as extremely foolish and utterly unworthy of all true manhood.—Memphis Post.

GENERAL NEWS.

—Three hundred thousand pictures of Thiers are circulating among the Parisians. His big speech did it.

—A man near Rochester is successfully growing a plantation of the famous California giant trees from seed procured in that State about fourteen years ago. It is gratifying to know that they will be fully grown in about 2,500 years.

—A new Masonic temple is to be built on the corner of Ninth and F streets, Washington. The building will be four stories high, with a front on Ninth street of fifty-one feet by one hundred and fifty feet on F street. The ancient order in Washington is in good condition, but needs a first class hall.

—On the 15th of March the troops in Bogota attacked the Congress while at their deliberations, by order of General Mosquera. The immediate dissolution of Congress was the consequence. Afterwards Mosquera seized and imprisoned sixty-eight Senators and Representatives, among them Murillo, the late President.

—A Convention of French citizens of the Western States and Canada is to be held at Detroit on the 25th inst. The call says the object is to promote the general interests of the French citizens of the Western District, while matters of great importance to the French residing in Canada will be brought before the Convention.

—The Skowhegan Clarion, on which Artemus Ward learned or commenced the art of type-setting, is a slatternly little weekly sheet, printed in the interior of Maine. Its editor, one Moses Littlefield, the biggest in size and smallest in intellect of all down East editors, in noticing Artemus, said he "remained only three weeks, and not getting on much, borrowed money enough to pay his fare home, since which time—nearly fifteen years ago—he had heard nothing of Artemus or his money."

—Edward Blaque, the new Turkish Minister to this country, is a son of M. Blaque, an able and talented Frenchman who for many years edited the Moniteur Ottoman at Constantinople, the official organ of the Sultan. Young Blaque was connected with the Turkish Government at an early age and sent to Paris as an attache of the embassy. While there he married a daughter of the late Dr. Valentine Mott, of New York, but she died two years afterward. M. Blaque has lately been Turkish Consul-General at Naples.

—Mr. Charles Dickens writes to acknowledge the receipt of 200 pounds from a Boston publishing house, from the profits of one of his works reprinted by them. From his language it might be supposed he had never before received a penny from an American publisher, while the fact is that he has received thousands of pounds from Harper & Brothers, of New York, and T. B. Peterson & Brothers, of Philadelphia. These two houses gave 1,000 pounds in gold for "A Tale of Two Cities," 1,250 pounds for "Great Expectations," and 1,250 pounds for "Our Mutual Friend," and he has probably received from them altogether what is equal to fifty or sixty thousand dollars in greenbacks. This was all done without an international copyright law.

—Burleigh, the delegate in Congress from Dakotah, has invited and organized a large party of members of Congress for a buffalo hunt on the Plains next summer. They intend to be in Yankton about the 1st of June, and being there, will proceed to the prairies and spend several months in chasing the buffalo over the Plains. The gentlemen named below will constitute the party: Hons. Benjamin Wade, Richard Yates, Z. Chandler, Jacob Howard, James W. Patterson, L. M. Morrill, James A. Nye, Simon Cameron, L. P. Poland, A. B. Laflin, John Covode, John A. Bingham, Thomas Williams, G. S. Orth, G. W. Julien, J. H. Ketcham, Samuel Hooper, J. D. Baldwin, Wm. Lawrence, E. M'Pherson, W. E. Chapler, A. W. Hubbard, D. A. Carter, Gilman Marston, Alexander Stauzzman, and W. R. Robertson.

The Heartlessness of the Prince of Wales.

The present Prince of Wales is but following in the footsteps of his illustrious predecessors, and he offers a very striking illustration of the homely but truthful asservation that "blood will tell." The Guelph family have been consistently brutal in the treatment of their own families ever since the first George left his loved Duchy to assume the crown of Britain. That worthy German gentleman began his domestic tyranny by imprisioning his wife Sophia, upon a trumped up charge of infidelity, after completely alienating whatever affection she might have had for him, by his brutality and open unfaithlessness. Once rid of her, he filled her place with the hideous and degraded Duchess of Kendal, with whom he lived, unmarried, for years.

George the Second, hated by his father, possessed the same brutal instincts, and although he dared not treat Caroline, who was his intellectual superior, as his father had done his wife, he was guilty of the grossest infidelity, and of cold-blooded brutality, even while his wife lay gasping for breath upon her deathbed. George the Third, the best of the four, was the bitter enemy of his own son, as his predecessors had been of theirs. George the Fourth was married to Mrs. Fitzherbert, before he became nominally the husband of Caroline of Brunswick. In addition to the other crimes which blackened the character of this infamous "gentleman," he committed that of bigamy, and then, following the example of the first George, he accused Caroline of infidelity, separated from her, persecuted her in the most heartless and relentless manner, and then crowned his villainy by charging her with adultery in the House of Lords. She was tried and acquitted, after three weeks of agonizing suspense, but she was so overcome by shame and chagrin that she died within a year.

Such were the predecessors of the young man who is now amusing himself in London while his wife is dying. And while every honest man must despise him as a heartless wretch, something must be pardoned to his hereditary taint of brutality and insanity. It is very certain, however, that his conduct upon the present occasion will serve to render him more unpopular with the English people than he has been, and in the advanced state of liberal sentiment, he may find his throne uncomfortable and insecure when he succeeds to it.

Which so disfigure the appearance, PURGING the evil effects of mercury and removing all taints, the remnants of DISEASES, hereditary or otherwise, and is taken by ADULTS and CHILDREN with perfect safety.

TWO TABLE SPOONFULS of the Extract of Sarsaparilla, added to a pint of water, is equal to the Lisbon Diet Drink, and one bottle is equal to a gallon of the Syrup of Sarsaparilla, or the decoctions as usually made.

AN INTERESTING LETTER is published in the Medico-Chirurgical Review, on the subject of the Extract of Sarsaparilla in certain affections, by Benjamin Travers, F. R. S., &c. Speaking of those diseases, and diseases arising from the excess of mercury, he states that no remedy is equal to the Extract of Sarsaparilla: its power is extraordinary, more so than any other drug I am acquainted with. It is, in the strictest sense, a tonic with this invaluable attribute, that it is applicable to a state of the system so sunken, and yet so irritable as renders other substances of the tonic class unavailable or injurious.
