AUCTION SALES.

COUNTRY HOUSES AND LOTS AT AUCTION. Will be sold, on the premises, on THURSDAY AFTERNOON, August 1st, at 3½ o'clock, 30 acres of land, situated on the Evergreen road, about four miles from Allegheny Market, adjoining the lands of Mr. Kilgore, being a part of the old Nelson Farm. Have a choice two new frame dwelling houses, each containing four rooms with good cellar, and a good supply of water at the kitchen door; in addition, adapted for gardening and raising grapes, having a fine southern exposure; about five acres in cultivation with coal; there is also a good vein of coal on the land. Will be sold in one, two, or four pieces, to suit purchasers. Conveyance will be given. A. Martin's store, No. 1 Diamond. A. L. EDGART, Auctioneer.

HOUSE AND LOT AT AUCTION—Sale on THURSDAY, August 1st, at 10 o'clock, the House and Lot on the corner of Beaver and Locust streets, Fifth Ward, Allegheny, (late Manchester). The lot fronts 60 ft. on Beaver and 120 ft. on Locust, both paved streets. The house is a large two-story frame, with six rooms, four parlors and a hall on each floor, and a kitchen attached; there is also another building on the lot, used for several years, as a public boarding house, for which it is well adapted. The location is excellent for business, being on the main thoroughfare. This property could be made exceedingly valuable by the erection of stores and dwellings. Especial attention is directed to the prospective advantages of this property. Possession given April 1st.

Terms—Two-thirds cash, balance in two years.

A. L. EDGART, Auctioneer.

The Pittsburgh Gazette

The Social Evil—Is Rape Sufficiently Punished?

MESSRS. EDITORS:—What adepts we, as a nation, are in self gratulation! With what consummate skill we parade our self assertions! We are the most moral, most religious, the cleanest, purest, wealthiest nation on the earth's surface! Our laws are better and more firmly executed than those of any country in the world! To the two latter propositions I demur. Take as illustrative examples a few recent occurrences in our own city. A miscreant, bearing the form of a boy of seventeen or eighteen years, enters the residence of a respectable family, and finding only a little girl under eleven years of age within, attempts to violate her, and it was only by what might be regarded as a providential occurrence that the consummation of the crime was prevented. Now had the crime been perpetrated, the tender age of the young child would scarcely have had weight against him. A clever lawyer would have frittered it away. Besides, for this offense, the blackest in the whole grim catalogue of crime, our laws provide no adequate punishment; a few months, or at the farthest, imprisonment being its utmost limit; and this being a minor offense, was treated as a misdemeanor by his conviction; taking at least as a criterion for future action this unanimity of sympathy which has of late past usurped the functions of Justice in our courts and entrusted her decisions.

It is quite probable, too, that an acquittal would have followed Market Constable, for our upon bail for a similar alleged attempt; as one of our city dailies has already hazarded the opinion of his innocence. He, who, according to his own showing, "only coaxed and joked with the girl, nothing more!" Immaculate guardian of public morals!

Take, as another example, the horrible fate of the young girl who was dragged by six ruffians from the Birmingham bridge; a fate, which, shrieks and shudder, and recoil from as she would, she was tortured to endure; a fate a million times more hideous than death in its most appalling form; a fate which the human mind in horror shrinks from contemplating. The unutterable loathing of the physical system, as willfully, cruelly, vilely, it struggles in futile efforts to escape the clutches of its unremorselessly cruel than fiendish tormentors. The fever of shocks of the nervous system; amid its tortures, writhings of terror and despair, no hope, no help, no succor; but to endure to the last, the foulest degradation of woman, the climax of all infamous brutalities, till merciful insensibility relieved the tortured frame from the consciousness of its revolting degradation. And let not the fastidious exclaim that this is a subject which should not be approached; that it is too indelicate to be submitted to the consideration of the cultured and refined; that the poor contaminated victim should bow her shamed head in the dust and uncomplainingly submit to the jeers and contempt of the world; that world which has only pretended, in the opening vista viewed so bright, so fresh and fair, today by no fault of her own, it becomes the object of obloquy and scorn; the stricken and defiled.

And oh, lady, reclining in thy velvet chair, amid thy luxurious surroundings, remember, that it is a fate to which no chaste accident may subject even her. And thou, oh father, with thy innocent offspring, forget not that from the veriest casualty may cease a similar fate befall thy cherished daughter! And for all this horror and infamy, our lawe apportion out a few months or years, as the case may be, imprisonment. Should there be a conviction; of which there are slice chances to ten; there will be none; or some evasive nonability. For there appears to be an almost universal tacitly conceded right to treat this crime with unsparing levity. One of our Pittsburgh papers, with a suave grandiosity, thought that the entire gang will be punished with the utmost rigor of the law!" What a baleful significance do these words convey; the possibility, or even probability, that they should escape even the mearre penalty which the law does allow. Every feeling of pity, every dictate of humanity, of justice, imperitively demand that the severest penalty known to our code of laws should be meted out to this crime; and that it should be beyond the power of any man or any set of men to commute that penalty. For murder, our laws recognize death, or imprisonment for life; and how infinitely rather would a parent see a daughter struck dead at his feet than subjected to so revolting a degradation.

It is appalling to contemplate such brutal mechanism as ever scanning sitting with or beholding woman, nearer than through the grating of a prisoner's bars. In close proximity to whom should be assigned a location for the valorous knight of the Birmingham bridge, who so gloriously avenged his own safety by slinking away from his wretched companion.

SENTENCE SENTENTIA.

Pittsburgh, July 29th, 1867.

A Vile Seducer.

Some three years since a young girl, about sixteen years of age, whose name we decline mentioning, came from the "rural districts" to the city to seek her fortune, and apprenticed herself to a fashionable dress maker, with whom she remained for eighteen months. During all that time she conducted herself in a proper manner, and had succeeded in gaining the respect and esteem of her employer. Having finished her apprenticeship, she was now in a situation to make a respectable living by her industry, and had she remained with her first employer all might have yet been well. But in an evil hour she was induced to leave the roof which had kindly sheltered her since her advent into the city and seek her fortune elsewhere—a wrong step, as the sequel will show. She moved her quarters to another portion of the city, and for many days had passed she met the man who worked her ruin. Having been reared and educated in the country until she was sixteen years old, and being of an unsuspecting disposition, unsophisticated and entirely unacquainted with the snares that infest paths over which her weary feet must tread, she was introduced to a man, (who shall be nameless,) who, by his cunning wiles and villanous arts, won her affections only to trample them under foot, after he had wearied of her charms. Having paternality of a confiding disposition, she loved him with all the fullness of her soul, "not wisely but too well," and like many others of her sex, without once stopping to inquire who his object of her adoration was, or what the consequences of such a step might be, she allowed herself to be led a willing victim to a life of shame. Yet not without an appearance of some sort of compunction. Her seducer, a black hearted libertine, already the husband of a loving and confiding wife, and father of four innocent children, professed to her to be a single man and represented himself as a steamboat engineer, told her tales of endless love, and asked her hand in marriage, which was readily granted.

The day was appointed, the arrangements made, and when the time arrived some kind of a mock ceremony was performed by some one representing himself to be a minister, whom, at a special fraction, he was taken to a respectable boarding house, where she was introduced as his wife, and after remaining there a short time, a pleasure trip was taken to Cincinnati, the latter returning he again secured boarding for her, alone, stating that his boat was about to start out, and he would be gone a week. At the expiration of the week he called and remained with her for a day or two, when another trip was taken, and he returned again. This manner went on, each visit growing shorter, and the time between them increasing, until finally she ceased altogether. Then for the first time did she realize her situation. After numerous efforts to get some tidings of her truant lover had failed, she became sensible of the folly of her ways, and the step she had taken. It was then that thoughts of laudanum, arsenic, hemp and razors were flitting through her frenzied brain, as was plainly evident from her manner and the many significant remarks upon death and the grave(yard), so far as she could learn she has not attempted to reduce any of those terrible remedies, but taking a more sensible view of the case has determined to action against her supposed husband, charging him with the crime of bigamy and fraud. Thousands thereby but not the victim's disgrace, which is destined to follow her to the grave. Young ladies should think of the consequences of a fall of this kind, and instead of casting incentives heading into misery, sin, woe and infamy, as too many do, they should carefully investigate the subject, and by no means be careful in forming gentleman acquaintances.

The State Fair—Meeting of the Allegheny County Agricultural society.

A meeting of the Board of Managers of the Allegheny County Agricultural Society was held yesterday at the office of Messrs. Phelps, Park & Co., St. Clair street. The following members were present: Messrs. Bockstoce, Brush, Oliver, Jennings, G. G. Negley, Hodgson, Young and Park, President pro tem.

Judge Park, from the Committee on the Fair Grounds, submitted a report.

On motion of John Negley, jr., the report was accepted, and the committee instructed to carry out all the recommendations (the man had not already commenced,) to put the track in proper order, at the cost of the Messrs. Zimmerman.

Judge Parke submitted a report from the committee appointed to raise money for the purpose of securing the location of the State Fair at this point.

On motion of Mr. Young, the report was accepted, and the committee instructed to obtain such additional subscriptions as may be necessary to close up the account. The committee were also instructed to have a list of the contributors to the fund prepared for publication.

The Chairman presented a communication from Peter Fraser Esq., President of the Agricultural College of Pennsylvania, announcing that the annual meeting of the delegates from the several Agricultural Societies throughout the State would be held at the College, on Wednesday, September 4th, and asking the society to select three delegates to attend at that time.

At this point Judge Parke retired, and J. F. Jennings, Esq., took the chair.

An election was then gone into for delegates to represent the society at the State Agricultural College, and Messrs. John Scott, of East Liberty, J. F. Jennings, of Highland, and Col. W. H. Negley were elected. James Kelly, Esq., Wilkins township, a member of the Board of Trustees of the State Agricultural College, was also elected a delegate.

Mr. Brush offered the following resolution, which was adopted:

Resolved, That the thanks of this society are due, and are hereby tendered to Judge Parke, for the energy and unstinting industry in making collections of funds necessary for the approaching State Fair.

The meeting then adjourned.

Abe Lincoln Lodge No. 23, I. O. of G. F.

At a meeting of the Abe Lincoln Lodge, No 23, I. O. of G. F. held at their hall in Etna, on Monday evening last, the following officers were elected to serve for the ensuing term:

C. F. John M. Yahres. W. V. F., Miss Addie Davis. W. S., Mrs. Isabella Jones. W. A. S., Joseph D. Hunter. W. F., Miss Lizzie Love. W. F. S., J. W. Hughes. W. I. G., Miss Kate Grimmer. W. O. G., Chas. N. Howenstein. W. M., James Hunter. W. D. M., Miss Hattie Tyler. W. R. S., Miss Emma Danks. W. S. B. S., Miss Annie Sutter. W. Chap., Samuel H. Yahres. P. W. C., Samuel H. Sutter.

This lodge is in a very flourishing condition, and numbers some ninety or a hundred members. The regular meetings of Abe Lincoln Lodge are held on Monday night.

Monthly Fire Report.

The Superintendent of the Fire Alarm Telegraph reports that the number of alarms struck during the present month was ten. In striking the alarms, two hundred and fifty-seven blows were given on the big bell, and in striking the hours, two hundred and forty-eight blows were required. The largest fire of the month was that by which the Pennsylvania Railroad Shops were burned on the fifth instant. The amount of losses and insurance have not yet been officially reported.

Blackwood's Magazine.—We have received from W. A. Gilmartin, book seller and stationer, 45 Fifth street, the July number of Blackwood's Magazine. It is an unusually interesting number.

Fatal Accident.—At Martins, Ohio, last Tuesday evening, a little daughter of Adam Heiner, was at a neighboring building, where a part of an old roof that had been removed from a building was standing. In a moment, by some means it fell over upon the little child, aged about six years, and crushed in the back of her head, broke her jaw, knocked out her teeth and killed her instantly.

Fire in East Birmingham.—Yesterday afternoon the straw houses connected with the glass works of Bryce, Hartley & Co., East Birmingham, accidentally caught fire, and the contents were burned. The building being despised, was not materially injured. The Walton Hose Company were promptly on the ground and did efficient service.

Discharged.—Miss Marin Young, of Hollidaysburg, Blair county, charged with the murder of her father, who discharged from custody last week, a nolle prosequi having been entered by the District Attorney.
