POLITICAL PARALYSIS.

The paralysis under which the Republicans have been laboring in Ohio and Pennsylvania grew out of the failure to bring the leading rebels to justice. The balling of JEFF. DAVIS, instead of hanging, fell like a palsy on the Republican heart. Tens of thousands of Republicans stayed at home on Tuesday last because they were utterly disgusted with the farce that was played at Richmond in the release of the leader of the rebellion, and nothing that any speaker could say in the late canvass served to infuse a better feeling into their minds. Every one who took an active part in the late canvass in this county realized this fact at every step of its progress. The popular sense of justice was so thoroughly outraged by the practical discharge of JEFF. DAVIS from all restraint that it refused to accept of any excuse for, or palliation of it. This feeling, on the part of the masses, did not show itself in outward demonstrations, but you can see it now, in the returns from every poll in the Commonwealth. A very large portion of the people felt that it was of no use to go to the election, since all their efforts, litherto, to bring the leaders of the rebellion to justice had resulted in utter failure.

CALEDONIA IRON, LAND AND RAILROAD COMPANY.

At the last session of the Legislature a Company was chartered by the name of the "Caledonia Iron, Land and Railroad Company," with a capital of $500,000, with power to increase the same to such an amount as may be deemed necessary to carry out the objects of the corporation.

It gives the company power to hold in fee simple or to lease mineral lands not exceeding 16,000 acres, wherever it may choose to select them, with power to mortgage, sell, lease or otherwise dispose of the same or any part thereof, with the right to manufacture and prepare for market lumber and other articles prepared therefrom; to open mines, mine and prepare for market coal, ore, limestone, fire clay, and other minerals, and to use and consume the same, and to manufacture iron and fire brick and transport said articles to market and dispose of them, and to do all such other acts and things as may be necessary to the prosecution of such business. Also to make such improvements and erections as may be required.

Section 6 of the bill provides that it should be lawful for the Company to construct and operate a railroad or railroads, with branches from any part of their lines, to connect with the Caledonia and South Mountain Railroad and its branches, or with any other railroad now or hereafter to be built.

Section 8 provides that payments to the stock of the Company may be paid in real and personal estate appropriate to the business contemplated by the act, at a bona fide cash valuation; and the corporation is authorized to issue bonds, with or without coupons, at 7-30 per cent. interest, and to sell them at their market value.

The corporators of this Company, including Hon. THADDEUS STEVENS, will meet in this city on Tuesday next, October 15th for the purpose of conferring with our citizens upon the subject. As this charter gives ample power to construct a new road from here to Philadelphia or Baltimore, it is of the utmost importance to our commercial men and manufacturers. We trust they will give it their earnest attention, and confer with the corporators when they meet here.

THE REPUBLICAN PARTY.

The man who would win the respect of others must respect himself. He who would gain the confidence of others must confide in himself. He who would convince others must himself be fully convinced. Perhaps there is no lesson which the Republican party so much needs to learn as the truth contained in these simple maxims. Look at its history since the day it came into power. In '60 the Democracy openly threatened disunion, if the people should place the government in the hands of their opponents. The issue was fairly made. The people accepted it, and placed their government in the hands of Republicans. Self-respect taught that they should, in good faith, accept, hold, and to the best of their ability, discharge the duties of the trust. The people by their vote, said, "We are tired of democratic rule, and want a change;" they were entitled to the change they had decreed. How did the Republicans execute the trust reposed in them? How did they respond to this demand for change? Simply, by retaining in office, enough democrats to prevent the harmonious working of the government on republican principles. They did not manfully and with self-reliance, grasp the helm placed in their hands, and steadily and stoutly wheel the ship of State into the new course ordered by the owners of the craft. They showed a lack of nerve when the threatened conflict burst upon them, by appointing, to places of high responsibility, a majority of men who had been life-long opponents of their principles. Of the early appointments, in the Army, the democratic Generals were three to one republican. In the Government Departments hundreds of their enemies were retained, or placed in positions, where they had power to betray them. They disappointed friends in hope of conciliating enemies, to such a degree that in 1862 it was impossible to rally the people to their support. When driven in '63 to show confidence in their principles, and to take a determined stand against treason, the people rallied to their aid with wild enthusiasm; and nothing could be more plainly indicated as the popular will than this "Treason is a crime and must be punished." The people demanded that treason should be made odious, and JEFF. DAVIS hanged "on a sour apple tree." Their darling thought, throughout all the horrors of the struggle thrust upon them, was, to hang the traitors. They never could have been induced to fight out the war to the bitter end on any other ground than that treason was to be made odious unless on the principle that the Southern States, and people, by their acts of secession, had become foreign enemies to be conquered and dealt with according to the law of nations. They demand always, a definite policy. As traitors, the leaders must be hanged or banished; as foreign enemies, those implicated in murdering prisoners should have suffered the extreme penalty of the law. Self respect demanded that our soldiers should be secured in the treatment awarded by civilized warfare; but this demand was not met. The party in power, with false magnanimity, had overlooked the claims of a hundred good and true men, who had distinguished themselves as advocates of its principles, and elected a life-long enemy, to those principles, to a place from which the assassin's bullet transferred him to one of almost supreme control.

When he had thrown off the mask, and confronted them as a traitor, in full sympathy with traitors, instead of acting promptly and hurling him from his seat, they halted and reasoned and temporized. They have permitted him to make treason safe and profitable. They have allowed the escape of the guiltiest band of criminals that has yet disgraced the records of modern history. They have shown a lack of nerve and decision. They have neither treated the rebels as rebels, nor as foreign enemies. They have not enunciated any definite and distinct policy. Treason is not made odious. Traitors are not punished. There is so little difference between the reward of loyalty and treason that it requires a philosopher to define it. The people do not see the distinction. The men who lead in revolutions must be prompt and confident. The measure which would be carried into a great success to-day may be a dead drag to-morrow. Negro Suffrage in the South, and disfranchisement of rebels, would have been hailed with acclaim in the spring of '65. Now they must be secured by patient labor; and it only remains for Congress to convince the people that they themselves are convinced of the justice of their policy—to hold the ground already taken, and press steadily forward. They must fight it out on this line, or be swept from the ground, next fall, as autumn leaves are swept before the wind. Any vacillation, any going backward, will call forth the contempt of friend and foe. The American people will pardon any crime rather than cowardice. They worship courage, pluck, daring. The doggedness of Andrew Johnson begins to command their respect. He stands his ground. Let Congress waver, and the people will have no further use for them.

A FRENCH NOVELIST says: "The Parisian girl exchanges her six-penny dress for velvet and moire antique, and you would swear she had never worn anything cheaper." The New York Times claims that American women are equal to the Parisian in this quality of transforming themselves by a change of dress, and says the wailing-maid suddenly come to wealth "carries off not only her finery, but her mistress's manners." If the manners of the mistress and maid corresponded when they occupied that relation, as the manners of mistress and maid are apt to do, the maid carries them in velvet as well as calico; but velvet and moire antique can never make a vulgar, ignorant woman any less vulgar and ignorant. The mistake of the age is that money, by giving finery, can give an air of culture and refinement, hence the feverish desire for wealth, and the pursuit of it, often, at the sacrifice of moral worth. The Press could scarce teach a more mischievous lesson than this, that finery makes a lady, or breadcloth a gentleman. The woman of gentle nature and gentle culture is a gentle-woman in rags, and so she will appear. A coarse nature and coarse breeding is only the more prominent in diamonds and lace. To make a lady, or bestow the manners of a lady, you must cultivate the heart first, then the head; millinery has no part in the work. The light within the vase can never be counterfeited by the glitter of diamonds on the outside.

THE Tribune has a leader on JOHNSON calling SHERMAN to Washington, in which it asks:

"Is it possible that Andrew Johnson in his madness contemplates a coup d' etat, and that, failing to secure Grant, he has sought the Lieutenant General, with the view of having the second officer of the army to support him in the hour of trouble. * * * * * The President is hemmed in on all sides. Within sixty or seventy days Mr. Stanton will be restored to the Cabinet. If the President contemplates action to defeat Congress, he must do something before that time."

A BUTTON MANIA is raging out West, amongst little girls and grown women. It consists in an ambition to have a string of buttons of no use to any one, but of as great variety and costliness as possible. One lady in Louisville values her string at $1,000. They are carried in the hand, and the Kentucky State Fair Association gives a premium to the lady exhibiting the finest string of buttons.

PERSONAL.

—Chief Justice Chase is to preside at the trial of Davis.

—The staggers prevail fatally among the horses in Norfolk county, Va.

—A ritualistic marriage ceremony in London recently occupied three hours.

—Bandelaire, "the poet of all ill," recently died in a private mad house in Paris.

—The skeleton of a mastadon, almost complete, has been dug up near Fort Wayne.

—James Miller, who murdered his wife in Philadelphia, two weeks ago, is not yet arrested.

—Jefferson Davis, who was once President of the Confederate States of America, is to be tried for treason in November.

—Iturbide and Maximilian, the only two emperors of Mexico, were both shot on the 19th of June. The one in 1824, the other in 1867.

—Miss Helen Western is playing in Cincinnati at the Fourth Street Theatre, Mrs. Lander at Mozart Hall, and Booth begins an engagement at the National on Monday.

—Beauregard was in Richmond last week, for only the second time in his life. In '61 he passed through the city, but at no other time entered it. So says the St. Louis Dispatch.

—Ann E. Kirby, who murdered her husband nearly two years ago, in the market house, in Richmond, Va., because he was unfaithful to her, has been tried and sentenced to seven years in the Penitentiary.

—B. W. Green, who murdered his wife in Hartford several years ago, and was acquitted on the ground of insanity, died at the State Asylum of Dr. Bell, in Litchfield, Conn., last week. He was about sixty-four years of age, and leaves an estate of nearly $300,000.

—A German newspaper says: "Two years ago Mr. Christian Segemeyer became father of his fifty-eighth child. His first wife gave birth to twenty-three, of which six were triplets and eleven single born children. Of these fifty-eight children twenty-eight are living, all being daughters, and this man has never been sick, and enjoys good health, as do his children.

CHICAGO ITEMS.

—A Christian Union has been organized and proposes to hold a mass meeting in the New Opera House. In denouncing sectarianism, and pleading for liberality, in a speech at its organization, Rev. T. E. St. John said:

"The idea that a man must believe in three Gods to be a Christian was something that was not known for three hundred years after Christianity came upon the earth; and it was not until two hundred years after that that doctrine of total depravity was crowded down the throats of the young Christians. They are not Christians who do not cluster under the banner of Christian unity, because Christianity substantially is Christian unity. Nothing illiberal can ever claim the name of Christianity. Therefore, let us marshal our forces. Let us make a warfare, if it need be, against the power of those who stand opposed. Let us prove that we have the true principles of Christianity with us, and that with the power of these we must be respected by all."

If the Cristians of Chicago are illiberal after hearing this there is little hope of enlarging their ideas of liberality.

—The papers are discussing the State donation to Mrs. Douglass of $25,000 as a precedent for relieving "Mrs. Lincoln's pecuniary embarrassments." Democratic editors are liberal in urging our statesmen to tax poor widows in order to give annuities to those who keep private carriages and fancy teams, who dress in velvet, and fare sumptuously every day, yet are very much troubled about high taxes.

—Ann Neelin put her husband Michael in jail for abusing her, then married Whalen. She was arrested for bigamy, but got out of prison. Michael also got out, and went home drunk, when she gave him morphine, of which he died. She escaped with Whalen.

—James Steele, contractor for improving North Clark street, donated all the old planks to the Christian Association as fuel for the poor.

—A female pickpocket robbed thirteen ladies, in Second Street Church, on Monday evening, of sums ranging from $10 to $100.

—Presbyterians are about holding a fair for the benefit of the widows and orphans of soldiers.

—Bishop Simpson lectures for the Young Man's Christian Association this evening

—St. Luke's Hospital hold a ball on the 17th, for the benefit of the institution.

—The house at St. Helens, once occupied by Napoleon I. is now a stable. The French people are very indignant about it.

GENERAL NEWS.

—Two thousand five hundred and fifty carriages are assessed in Philadelphia at an aggregate value of over $700,000.

—The Dubuque Herald gives an account of a raftsman swimming a mile with one hand clinched on his money.

—The Cincinnati Enquirer has been seized by a violent attack of "hen fever" and has broken out in roosters. Other Democratic papers have taken the disease, but not in so virulent a form as the Enquirer.

—Mr. Washburne says Gen. Grant is in full sympathy with Congress, and accepted the position of Secretary of War to prevent its being given to a Johnson man, after full consultation with Secretary Stanton.

—The World still harps upon the ignorance and debauchories of southern negroes, and appeals to forget the argument thus furnished against southern whites, who, for two centuries, have claimed to be their guardians and teachers.

—The proprietors of the Memphis Bulletin attempted to introduce printers into their office independent of the Printers' Union. The attempt was resisted by the Union men and one of the independents shot—severely wounded. The Union holds the office.

—Gen. Ord has ordered that when a Union man is arrested he may have his trial by military commission instead of Rebel Court, on his oath that he fears injustice on account of his Unionism. The Memphis Appeal sees a Star Chamber and Inquisition in this arrangement, and is troubled about the Constitution. The Appeal is also playing champion for Gen. Charles P. Stone.

—A paragraph has been going the rounds of the press quite recently, stating that Helmbold, the celebrated New York Druggist, pays the Tribune of that city over $10,000 per year for advertising. Helmbold's business must be immense, to enable him to pay such a sum of money to one paper out of some fifteen or sixteen hundred in which he advertises. By his judicious, but at the same time extensive advertising, Helmbold has made his "Buchu" and other proprietary compounds standard remedies in almost every household in the land; while the medical faculty, whose approbation is never gained for a nostrum, not only recommend Helmbold's preparations, but quite generally use them in their private practice. If some thousands of business men, who have been content to plod along in the old fogy footsteps of their ancestors, who looked upon newspaper advertising as m ney thrown away, had but possessed Helmbold's sagacity and courage, they might, perhaps, figure quite as largely in the Income Tax returns.—N. Y. Times.

Mammoth Cave of Martinique.

That the Mammoth Cave of Martinique is an antiquity of the world before the Flood—a city of giants which an earth quake swallowed, and which a chance roof of rocks has protected from being effaced by the Deluge—is one of the fancies which its strange phenomena force upon the mind. All is so architectural. It is not a vast underground cavity, raw and dirty, but a succession of halls, domes, and corridors, streets, avenues, and arches—all under ground, but all telling of the design and proportion of a majestic primeval metropolis. It is not a cave, but a city in ruins—a city from which sun, moon and stars have been taken away—whose day of judgment has come and passed, and over which a new world has been created and grown old. By what admirable laws of unknown architecture those mammoth roofs and ceilings are upheld, is every traveler's wondering question. In some shape or other, I heard each of my companions express this. No modern builder could throw up such vast vaulted arches, and so unaccountably sustain them. And all else in keeping. The cornices and columns, aisles and galleries, are gigantically proportionate, and as mysteriously upheld. Streets after streets, miles after miles, seem to have been left only half in ruins; and here and there is an effect as if the basements and lower stories were encumbered with fragments and rubbish, leaving you to walk on a level with the capitals and floors once high above the pavements. It might be described as a mammoth Herculaneum, first sepulchred with over-lopping mountains, but swept and choked afterward by the waters of the Deluge, and found the way to its dark streets in their subsiding.

INVISIBLE POISONS.

The Medicis and the Borgias fortified their systems with powerful antidotes against the subtle poisons with which they used to destroy their enemies, and which they feared might one day be employed against themselves. Tastes are insipide poisons, almost as deadly, against which few of us think of taking any precautions. These tastes are in the air. When the atmosphere is surcharged with them, as it sometimes is at this season, epidemic fevers ensue. The summer which has just passed has been a most remarkable one. The amount of rain that has fallen, and the unusual heat, have combined to make a pestiferous atmosphere, the effects of which are almost beyond calculation. These exhalations exercise a pernicious influence on the vital powers, and predispose the system to disease. Everywhere people are complaining of unusual debility, lassitude and depression. These symptoms are usually the forerunners of an epidemic. Combat them early—before they have into something worse—with HOSTETTER'S BITTERS, the most effective antidote to malaria that the vegetable kingdom has yet yielded. Its operation is three-fold—invigorating, depurative and anti-bilious. It is from our very hard climate that is in the highest degree calculated to health, and consequently its extensive use in all climates, as a medicinal tonic, is immeasurably superior, as it is in every respect to all other tonics, bitters or stomachics, at present offered to the public. Dyspepsia, liver complaint, and nervous debility, are its specific and certain cures. Its operation is thoroughly searching, a perfect safeguard against intermittent and remittent fevers.

BLIND EYES RESTORED.

The case to which we alluded some weeks ago, of Christiana Fisher, of Beaver county, is now entirely confirmed by the appearance of Miss Fisher herself, who to-day called on DR. KEYSER in person, to thank him for his genius and skill in restoring her TO ENTIRE AND PERFECT SIGHT. Miss Fisher had been nearly blind for several months. She was so blind that she could not distinguish any object so as to make out what it was. The case is remarkable, as hundreds of cases like hers are deemed to be incurable darkness, on the flimsy pretext that there is no cure, and nothing can be done. She was under DOCTOR KEYSER'S treatment for two months, and before she applied to him through her brother, Simon F. Fisher, slight hopes were entertained of her ever getting her sight. Her case is well known in the neighborhood where she resides, and has been regarded as one of extraordinary recovery.

We, the undersigned, know of the cure of Miss Fisher, and bear willing testimony to the facts above stated.
