Agricultural.

EXPERIMENTS.

Farmers often find fault with those who experiment. They say of a neighbor sometimes, "he is rather experimental;" but they should remember that every new truth is an experiment, to all those who have not tried it. Some one must be the first to vary from the trodden path, or we should still use a crooked stick instead of a plough. There is a class, however, who, upon hearing of any novelty in agriculture, at once try it, not on a square yard, but on their whole crop; such men are not worthy of being styled experimenters. But should a farmer at this day call himself practical and judicious in his calling, who, after having heard that in many sections of country corn is cultivated flat, without hilling, and that potatoes are so cultivated, still continues to hill both without trying the experiment of flat cultivation even on a single hill, can such a man be rated as judicious? Is such a man to be called a practical farmer? Is he practical, who allows Lima beans to travel round a pole fifteen feet high, when the pinching off of the vine at five and a half feet high will produce double the crop of beans, and particularly before frost? Should he not try the experiment and see how it will answer? Many permit melons, cucumbers, etc., to run over the entire area of the soil, in long single vines, while others, by pinching off the runner buds after the third rough leaf has formed, get their fruit early and of double size. Why should not this experiment be tried and adopted, if found true? Gooseberries mildew all over the country, but some have saved them by cutting every branch that is within five inches of another, and by mulching the surface with salt hay, or other cheap refuse material; is this not a fair experiment to try?

It has been frequently asserted that properly underdrained subsoiled lands never suffer from drouth; who cannot name many farmers who lose their crops from drouth, at least once in ten years, and still have never experimented to know whether they can underdrain and subsoil their land, for one tenth the value of crops, or whether such subsoiling and underdraining will save them from drouth entirely? And those who doubt this fact, should they not make the experiment, or visit the farms of those who have, to know of its truth?

Thousands of acres of peach trees are grown by those who have never tried the shortening in process, and cannot tell whether they will bear for a series of years longer for such practice or not. Is it not a fair experiment to try this on a single tree at least? Are there not thousands of farmers in the United States who have never tried any other fertilizing material than barnyard manure? Should they not satisfy themselves by experiment, whether or not others may not be more cheaply used, and produce more profitable results?

Continually we hear it said, that those who surface plough five or six inches, have another farm under it which they have not developed.—Should not such farmers experiment with the subsoil plough to know if this be true or false? A bushel of carrots and a bushel of oats are said to be equal in effect, when fed to a horse, to two bushels of oats. Now as sixteen times the number of bushels of carrots can be raised on an acre, than can possibly be grown of oats, should not those farmers who have never raised carrots try the experiment, and thus ascertain if these assertions are true? Those who use hoes, and forks, etc., for cleansing row crops of weeds, have heard that the horse weeder would do the work of forty men with hoes, and that many have repudiated the use of the hoe altogether for root crops; why should they not try this experiment? It is said that one mowing machine will do the work of twenty men with scythes, and that one threshing machine will do the work of a hundred men with flails; should not those who at present use flails, visit farms where mowing machines and threshing machines are used, to ascertain if that experiment will not warrant them in the purchase of such tools?

Those who use barnyards open and exposed to the winds and rains, and who permit the washings to run off to the creeks and streams, have doubtless heard that with manure sheds, and with properly arranged tanks retained the drainage of the manure heaps, and pumps, they obtain better results than with the open barnyard practice; should they not carefully review the operations of these experiments, rather than satirize that of which they have no knowledge? Experience is said to be the mother of wisdom—experiment is the father of truth.

☞ There will, for many weeks to come, be great accumulations of weeds and rubbish, by the digging up of potatoes, removal of pea and bean straw, and many other materials which, when decayed, will make good manure. The economical manager never wastes a particle of anything which can be rotted into compost; and if the compost pits are now full, room must be made for any extra supplies. It is not uncommon to see the refuse of the garden placed in holes full of water, in order that it may decay the more rapidly. The idea that water washes out all the goodness of the material is forgotten. It would be much better to accumulate all vegetable refuse in one heap, to undergo fermentation and decay without the help of adventitious moisture; and when offensive effluvia results, put a layer of earth over the heap. Common mould is the best of all deodorizers.

CHARCOAL FOR TURKEYS.—We notice that a California paper highly recommends charcoal for fattening turkeys, and recommends that it should be pulverized and mixed with mashed potatoes and corn meal, as well as fed to them in small lumps. While we condemn the practice of mixing the pulverized charcoal with the other food of the turkey, compelling them to eat whether they wanted it or not, we have no doubt of the excellent effects of supplying fattening turkeys with charcoal broken into small pieces. We have had evidence of what we say, and for a number of years have recommended charcoal for this purpose.

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS EXPERIENCE IN DENTISTRY.

O. J. H. SMITH, M. D., would respectfully inform the inhabitants of Bradford County that he is permanently located in Waverly, N. Y., where he has been in the practice of his profession for the past four years. He would say that from his long and successful practice of 25 years duration he is familiar with all the different styles of work done in any and all Dental Establishments in city or country, and is better prepared than any other Dental operator in the vicinity to do work the best adapted to the many and different cases that present themselves oftentimes to the Dentist, as he understands the art of making his own artificial teeth, and has facilities for doing the same. To those requiring under sets of teeth he would call attention to his new kind of work which consists of porcelain for both plate and teeth, and forming a continuous gum. It is more durable, more natural in appearance, and much better adapted to the gum than any other kind of work. Those in need of the same are invited to call and examine specimens. Teeth filled to last for years and oftentimes for life.—Chloroform, Ether, and "Nitrous Oxide" administered with perfect safety, as over four hundred patients within the last four years can testify.

I will be in Towanda from the 15th to 30th of every month, at the office of W. K. TAYLOR, (formerly occupied by Dr. O. H. Woodruff.) Having made arrangements with Mr. Taylor, I am prepared to do all work in the very best style, at his office. April 23, 1867.

DR. VANBUSKIRK, OPERATIVE AND MECHANICAL DENTIST, has opened rooms in the Beidleman Block, directly opposite the Means House, for the practice of his profession, and is prepared at all times to perform all operations belonging to Dentistry. The different kinds of Plate Work, will be recommended according to their honest merits. Natural Teeth filled and restored to their original beauty, with material the best adapted to each individual case. The greatest care and attention will be given to the correction of irregularities and the extraction of Teeth. In this Department of practice the Doctor would say he claims an amount of skill and experience equal to that possessed by any one in this or any other country. Teeth will be extracted without pain, by the use of gas, chloroform or ether, and in a manner very satisfactory to patients, as the testimony of hundreds can be shown. Please call and examine specimens of our work, and be assured of the correctness of the statements. Advice and consultation will be cheerfully and gratuitously given.

Towanda, June 6, 1867.—6m.
