Agricultural.

Hints on Butter Making.

Salt.—The Government tests of Onondaga salt for preserving meats, and the tests for butter under the superintendence of the New York State Agricultural Society, must show to any unprejudiced mind that as good salt is made at the Onondaga salt works as can be made anywhere.—The company put up an article especially for dairy purposes, under the brand of "factory filled dairy salt," and Lieut. Gov Alvord, at the American Dairymen's Convention, last winter, in Utica, affirmed that the company would pay every pound of butter or cheese that was injured by the company's salt sent out under this brand. We use this brand of salt in our own dairy, and believe it equal to any of the foreign salts. In order, however, to be sure of a pure article, we should advise parties to order direct from the company, or from its known and reliable agents

Salt per pound.—As to the quantity of salt to be used for butter, something will depend upon its manufacture, and the market for which it is intended. The Orange county butter makers, who obtain the lagest prices for their product, use at the rate of a pound and two ounces of salt for a batch of twenty-two pounds of butter. For winter use, a little more salt is used at the last working.

Washing out Buttermilk.— there is difference in opinion among butter-makers in regard to washing out the butter-milk. We are strongly impressed that butter will keep best that is properly washed. It is the caseons or cheese particles in the buttermilk, the decomposition of which causes the butter to become frowcy or rancid. The more perfectly these are expelled, the better will the butter be preserved sweet and sound. Washing properly, to our mind, secures best that result. It is certainly less work to get rid of the buttermilk by washing than by the "kneading process," besides there is less danger of spoiling the butter by overworking, since overworking injures the grain, rendering the butter salvy. It is claimed by some that when the buttermilk is worked out without washing, a more delicate aroma is retained; and this principle is observed in Holestein and Normandy, where a very superior butter is manufactured for the London market.

We have tested hundred of samples of butter in London, which came from France and Holstein. The butter is very slightly salted, and when fresh has a most delicious flavor, but much of it does not keep well.

Packing.—A most important point to be observed by butter makers who hope to make a reputation for fine goods is to pack in suitable tubs or packages In our opinion there is no wood so suitable for butter packages as white oak. The timber should be well seasoned, and the packages strongly hooped, so as to be water-tight. No leaky packages can preserve butter for any length of time.

In salting cheese, much will depend upon manufacture and the time it is desired to have it ready for the market, from two and a half to three pounds of salt are used for one hundred dounds of curd. The usual quantity at the factories is two and seven-tenths pounds salt to one thousand pounds of milk. In spring, when it is an object to have the cheese go to market early, two and one-quarter pounds salt, and even less, are used to the thousand pounds of milk.—N. A. Willard in Utica Herald.

THE CORN GRUB.—The corn crop has several formidable enemies to contend with, and among them is what is comonly called the white grub, which damages the crop seriously. One of the best and judicious remedies, perhaps the very best suggested, is the aplication of salt as soon as the plant makes its appearance above the ground. Take one part common salt and three parts plaster of gypsum, and apply about a full tablespoonful around each hill, and it will be found to be a sure protection. The mixture should not come in contact with the sprouts, as it may destroy them. This method has been tried over and over again by some of the best farmers of Pennsylvania, Delaware and Jersey, and, when properly applied, has never failed to be perfectly successful. We hope our farmers, who have reason to fear the depredations of the grub this season, will try this mixture, leaving a few alternate rows of corn without the salt, and communicate to us the result. We are aware some writers say salt has no effect upon vermin, but we speak in this matter on the best authority.—Germantown Telegraph.

REARING FRUIT TREES.—Many people put out fruit trees; some throw them out and into the ground; some stick them in, a few set them out, and after they are set out take care of them. Some bring forth thirty fold, some sixty, and some one hundred.—Now let him who readeth do likewise.

Those who throw and stick their fruit trees into the ground, are apt to leave the care of them to the cattle and hogs, especially the pruning—consequences, dead trees, deformed trees, poor fruit, and little of it—no profits.

To have trees pay expenses—to have them pleasant to look at—an ornament to the neighborhood, and a gratification to the stomach—set them out in good soil good enough to bear stout corn or any other grain. Then keep the soil good; keep them well and properly pruned yourself, not allowing either cattle or hogs to assist. Much is lost in allowing too many small branches to grow. Only the limbs to form a good symmetrical top, should be allowed to grow.—Too many limbs on a fruit tree are just as precious as too many stalks of corn in a hill—smaller corn, smaller fruit and inferior quality. And, reader, where do you pick the best flavored fruit? It is not on the branches to which the sun and light have free access? Then prune accodingly.

Passing along the highway a short time ago, I observed a row of trees each side of the way, to bestow an apple on the traveller. Are there any more to do likewise, thus many a poor one, who hath not of God's domain to grow an apple, can pick one to eat without trespass and without price? —Country Gentleman.

WE walk here as it were, in the crypts of life: at times, from the great cathedral above us, we can hear the organ and the chanting of the choir; we see the light stream through the open door, when some friend goes up before—and shall we fear to mount the narrow staircase of the grave that leads out of this uncertain twilight into the serene mansions of the life eternal?
