MONDAY EVENING, MARCH 22, 1880.

A DOCTOR'S STORY.

Mrs. Rogers lay in her bed,
Bandaged and blistered from foot to head,
Bandaged and blistered from head to toe,
Mrs. Rogers was very low.
Bottle and saucer, spoon and cup,
On the table stood bravely up;
Physic of high and low degree:
Calomel, catnip, boneset tea—
Everything a body could bear,
Excepting light and water and air.

I opened the blinds; the day was bright,
And God gave Mrs. Rogers some light,
I opened the window; the day was fair,
And God gave Mrs. Rogers some air.
Bottles and blisters, powder and pills,
Catnip, boneset, syrup and squills,
Drugs and medicines, high and low
I threw them as far as I could throw.
"What are you doing!" my patient cried:
"Frightening death," I coolly replied.
"You are crazy!" a visitor said;
I flung a bottle at her head.

Deacon Rogers he came to me;
"Wife is comin' round," said he,
"I re'lly think she will worry through,
She scolds me just as she used to do.
All the people have poohed and slurred—
And the neighbors have had their word;
'Twas better to perish, some of 'em say,
Than be cured in such an irregular way."

"Your wife," said I, "had God's good care.
And his remedies—light and water and air.
All the doctors, beyond a doubt,
Couldn't have cured Mrs. Rogers without."

The deacon smiled and bowed his head;
"Then your bill is nothing," he said,
"God's be the glory, as you say;
God bless you, doctor, good day! good day!"

If ever I doctor that woman again,
I'll give her medicines made by men.

Tobacco Culture—Soil and Climatic Influences.

Cincinnati Tobacco Journal.

Soil, climate and fertilizers, either separately or combined, have a wonderful influence on the growth and development of the tobacco plant. The soil has more to do with the texture of the leaf than any other one thing. True, fertilizers have much to do with this important quality, but not to that extent that the soil has. In proof of this, compare New England seed leaf with that grown in Wisconsin, yet both use an abundance of manure. It is the soil, rather than the climate, that has produced so many varieties of the plant, however great the climate may have to do with the flavor of the leaf. The soil affects more particularly the size, color or texture of the leaf. The climate has only to do with the flavor of the leaf. The fertilizers applied to the soil give either a light or dark colored leaf, according to kind used, and also in some measure affect the texture of leaf.

In the tropics we find the rarest and finest flavored tobacco, used chiefly for cigars, and yet in some portions of tropical and semi-tropical regions the leaf has no remarkable flavor whatever, as is the case with St. Domingo tobacco. In Cuba the plant grows throughout the winter, the finest of which comes from the Vuelta Abajo district. The other three or four districts produce some good tobacco. In the other islands of the West Indies, Porto Rico, Martinique and Jamaica quite a quantity of tobacco is grown, but not so good as Cuba leaf, with the single exception of that grown on the Island of Martinique, where an old variety of tobacco has been grown for many years, and is used by the French for snuff, the manufactured product taking the name of Macaboy.

Mexico also produces some fine tobacco, similar in flavor to that grown in Cuba. Honduras and Gautemala produce some good cigar tobacco, but little attention, however, is paid to its culture, and it is but little known in even foreign markets. That grown in the latter state bears a white flower, as does also Persian tobacco. If we consider the tobacco of the East, that grown in Persia and Turkey, we shall find that it has a fine aromatic or spice odor. Latakia tobacco, which comes from Syria, has an aroma like the ashes of roses, while Java tobacco, when burning, has the aroma of peppers.

Thus it will be seen that the climate gives flavor rather than size, texture on color of leaf. It may be said, however, that Yara tobacco grown in Cuba, is a very large sort of tobacco, and so it is if altitude or height of the plant be considered rather than size of leaf. The writer tested this sort of tobacco a few years since, and some of the plants before topping reached the height of seven feet, and when topped it stood about five feet high; but the leaves are no longer than those of Havana tobacco, but are very close together on the stalk. If we shall examine the tobacco of France, Italy and other tropical or semi-tropical countries we shall find that it is the flavor of the leaf that is its distinguishing peculiarity, as it is with all tropical sorts. When we come to the soil and its influence upon the plant we shall find that only the color, size and texture are affected.

In this country almost every tobacco grower can show the visitor leaves in the tobacco field ranging in length from 2½ to 3 feet long and with a breadth of from 14 to 20 inches. So it is with the texture. The finest leaf we ever saw, not excepting even Perique, was a few samples of Connecticut seed leaf as fine as silk and with veins like ordinary spool cotton.

If one wishes to know how soil affects the color of the leaf let him examine dark Kentucky leaf or Perique tobacco the latter sort owing its color in part no doubt to the curious node or putting it up, after the manner adopted by Perique, an old Spanish navigator of St. James parish, La., who began to cultivate the plant there in 1820. Holland tobacco also is dark, and if we examine the soil we find that it is dark. The soil of a good portion of Lancaster county, Pa., is dark, and we have a dark, cinnamon wrapper as the result.

The fertilizers, as we have written, also affect the color of the leaf. When light-colored tobacco was in demand the growers of seed leaf tobacco in New England used large quantities of horse manure, and thereby obtained a light colored leaf of very fine texture. Use the offal of swine and the planter need not expect other than dark leaf, particularly so if the plants are grown on dark soil. This is the long and short of the tobacco controversy.

Tobacco Instead of Wheat.

Reading Times and Dispatch.

Lancaster county thirty years ago raised the largest wheat crop of any county in the republic. The change made in the agriculture of Lancaster by the cultivation of tobacco is remarkable, but shows the facility with which our Pennsylvania farmers can become successful with any crop to which they seriously turn their attention.

MEDICAL.

Brandy as a Medicine.

The following article was voluntarily sent to Mr. H. E. Slaymaker, Agent for Reigart's Old Wine Store, by a prominent practising physician of this county, who has extensively used the Brandy referred to in his regular practice. It is commended to the attention of those afflicted with Indigestion and Dyspepsia.

BRANDY AS A MEDICINE.

This now much abused Alcoholic Stimulant was never intended as a beverage, but to be used as a medicine of great potency in the cure of some of the destructive diseases which sweep away their annual thousands of victims.

With a purely philanthropic motive we present to the favorable notice of invalids—especially those afflicted with that miserable disease Dyspepsia, a specific remedy, which is nothing more or less than

Brandy.

The aged, with feeble appetite and more or less debility, will find this simple medicine, when used properly,

A Sovereign Remedy

or all their ills and aches. Be it, however strictly understood that we prescribe and use but one article, and that is;

REIGART'S OLD BRANDY,

Sold by our enterprising young friend, H. E. SLAYMAKER. This Brandy has stood the test for years, and has never failed, as far as our experience extends, and we therefore give it the preference over all other Brandies, no matter with how many jaw-breaking French titles they are branded. One-fourth of the money that is yearly thrown away on various impotent dyspepsia specifics would suffice to buy all the Brandy to cure any such case or cases. In proof of the curative powers of

Reigart's Old Brandy,

In cases of Dyspepsia, we can summon numbers of witnesses—one case in particular we cite:—

A hard-working farmer had been afflicted with an exhaustive Dyspepsia for a number of years; his stomach would reject almost every kind of food; he had sour eructations constantly—no appetite—in fact, he was obliged to restrict his diet to crackers and stale bread, and as a beverage he used McGrann's Root Beer. He is a Methodist, and then, as now, preached at times, and in his discourses often declaimed earnestly against all kinds of strong drink. When advised to try

Reigart's Old Brandy,

In his case, he looked up with astonishment, but after hearing of its wonderful effects in the cases of some of his near acquaintances, he at last consented to follow our advice. He used the Brandy faithfully and steadily; the first bottle giving him an appetite, and before the second was taken he was a sound man, with a stomach capable of digesting anything which he chose to eat. He still keeps it and uses a little occasionally; and since he has this medicine he has been of very little pecuniary benefit to the doctor.—A PRACTISING PHYSICIAN.
