Agricultural.

Storing Potatoes for Winter.

It is often a matter of very great pecuniary importance for a farmer to be able to keep his potato crop until spring. Many made very handsome sums by pursuing this course the past season. Potatoes were bought for fifty cents a bushel, and those in good order were sold very generally in the spring for two dollars. As long as the custom of early marketing prevails so generally, the man who cultivates the new seedlings and stores them until spring, will be likely to pursue a safe course. Prices are generally enough higher to pay for the extra handling, and leaves a margin for profit. They can be stored upon the surface of the ground in any dry position, in the same manner as turnips, but this requires much care in covering the pits, on account of the extreme weather that prevails in the best potato districts. It is not uncommon for the earth to freeze two feet deep, and the raising of a mound with walls of that thickness over potatoes is a great labor. It has its advantages however, in saving carting, and once handling. The heaps or pits are usually made upon the field where the potatoes grow, and so near together that when the potatoe are picked up they are taken directly to the heaps, which contain from 30 to 100 bushels each, as suits the convenience of the farmer. A light covering of straw is put upon the potatoes, making a roof that will shed water and keep out the frost. When the farmer wishes to keep his potatoes for the spring market, this is a good method. Another way is to store their potatoes in pits, partly below the surface, but this can only be done where the soil is perfectly drained. There is not much difference in the labor involved, or in the security of the crop against frost.—Farmers living near ports, who wish to ship their potatoes in winter, build cheap vaults or cellars in hill sides, that will hold from 500 to 1,500 bushels. The vault has a window and shoot arranged for tipping in a cart-load at a time, and a door is upon the south side for taking the potatoes out. In New Jersey and Long Island it is quite common to store potatoes in the house or barn cellar, to be ready for market at any time when the price suits. Immense quantities are stored by dealers in the city of New York, more in barrels, but sometimes in bulk. In cellar storage straw should be thrown over them to keep out the light. This crop keeps best, away from the air, in darkness, and a low temperature, a few degrees above freezing. That method is best which secures these conditions most perfectly, with the least labor and the least expense.

MANURE THE TEST OF GOOD FARMING.—We farm for profit as a rule, however many exceptions there may be. This profit which we all seek comes from the sale of products of the land, or from that of animals fed upon them. This divides farming operations into two classes, and determines the nature of them, and the system pursued upon different farms, or upon different fields of the same farm. By far the greater number of farmers pursue a mixed system, deriving their income in part from crops sold, and in part from animal products. With such animal manure is a necessity, and the success of a farmer may be predicted upon the amount he makes and uses. A temporary exception to this rule is seen on some of the virgin lands of the West, and wherever apparently inexhaustible fertility of soil renders manure superfluous. When a system of great manuring for wheat and Indian corn, with the addition of lime and plaster, and perhaps bone dust occasionally, is sufficient with good tilliage to maintain fertility, farmers have an economical substitute for animal manures. This system may often be profitably be applied to "out fields," and occasionally to entire farms. Manure—barn yard manure, or properly barn manure, for the yard is a poor place, at best, to make it—regarding both quantity and quality, must be considered the measure of good farming, and the test of success.

STRINGHALT IN HORSES.—This blemish in horses has been defined to be a "nervous affection for which there is no cure." Until recently this definition would have been accepted as genuine. A more thorough knowledge of the veterinary art, in connection with a closer anatomical knowledge of the horse, has rendered the version obsolete.

This affection is shown to be, not one originating in nervous debility, but one arising from the strain and consequent inflammation of an elastic cord, extending from the hock to the hoof joint. The cord lies immediately under the main middle vein, and in cases of strain the inflammation which ensues may affect the nerves and other parts in sympathy, calling off the mucous secretions, rendering this cord elastic, and thus causing a hitch or halt.

If the skin is slit by a skillful and steady hand, four inches above the hoof of the effected leg, and this cord be carefully drawn out with an awl and server, it will relieve the horse of all lameness as soon as the wound is healed, an experience has shown that no injury results from the operation. This incision should be washed often with warm castile soap suds, and anointed with sweet oil, or some healing ointment, and the horse kept quiet till the cure is effected.

SCALDS AND BURNS.—A correspondent has sent us the following remedy:

"Mix milk of sulphur and common oil (seal-oil is the best) to the consistency of cream; then with a feather apply it to the affected parts as often as possible until the pain is gone.—The mixture will form a crust, and must not be washed or touched, but allowed to remain until it peels off, which it will do, without leaving a scar."

LEMON PIES.—Take three good lemons, roll them until soft, take the juice out into a dish, pick out the seed, chop the peel very fine, chop one teacupful of raisins; add the whole together, with one and a half cup of molasses; stir it well, put in a little water and flour; do not hurry the baking, as it will run out.

The above will make two delicious pies, with a rich paste.

TO PICKLE RED CABBAGES.—Slice them into a naive, and sprinkle each layer with salt. Let the whole drain three days, then add some sliced onions, and place the whole in a jar, to be filled over with boiling vinegar. The purple red cabbage is the finest. Add mace, allspice, whole cloves, to be boiled with the vinegar, and it will make a great improvement.

They also beg to subjoin the following Commandments for their guidance.

COME ONE! COME ALL!

At Rosenberg & Wolff's One Price Regulator, Main Street, Towanda, Pa.

THE TEN COMMANDMENTS,

Keep them, and Happy will be Thy Days.

1. Thou shalt have no other place to buy clothing except Rosenberg & Wolff's One Price Regulator, Main Street.
2. Thou shalt not choose any other merchant; though shalt not listen to their speeches, for Rosenberg & Wolff are no Chatham-st. dealers, but sell at one price, and reliable, and will serve you unto the third and fourth generation.
3. Thou shalt not seek in vain any more for cheap raiment, for they can be found at Rosenberg & Wolff's One Price Store.
4. Thou shalt bear in mind that we sell only on six days of the week, and don't desecrate the Sabbath by keeping our doors open and hangin out a show, for, on the seventh day, Rosenberg & Wolff, and their clerks, desire to rest from their labors.
5. Thou shalt honor the way Rosenberg & Wolff deal, and long may be thy days to enjoy its benefits.
6. Thou shalt not commit an improprietyof buying of Chatham st. Dealers, but come direct to Rosenberg & Wolff's One Price Regulator, Main street.
7. Thou shalt not seek in vain for goods of Foreign make, for Rosenberg & Wolff keep a large variety.
8. Thou shalt not purloin from the Regulator for Rosenberg & Wolff sell so cheap it would be a sin.
9. Thou shalt not baar false witness, but honestly acknowledge that you can get better suited and for less money, at Rosenberg & Wolff's than any other store.
10. Thou shalt not covet thy neighbors goods or his bargains, for Rosenberg & Wolff can give them to you likewise; therefore, take counsel, and buy only of Rosenberg & Wolff the Once Price Men.
