Agricultural.

AGRICULTURAL ODE.

BY JOHN G. WHITTIER.

This day two hundred years ago,
The wild grapes by the river's side,
And tasteless ground-nut trailing low,
The table of the woods supplied.

Unknown the apple's red and gold,
The blushing fruit of peach and pear,
The mirror of the flower told,
No tale of orchards ripe and rare.

Wild as the fruits he scorned to till,
These vales the ideal Indian trod,
Nor knew the glad creative skill,
The joy of him who toils with God.

O, Painter of the fruits and flowers!
We thank Thee for Thy wise design
Whereby these human hands of ours
In Nature's garden work with Thine.

And thanks that from our daily need
The joy of simple faith is borne;
That he who smites the Summer weed,
May trust Thee for the Autumn corn.

Give fools the gold and knaves their power,
Let fortune's bubbles rise and fall;
Who sows a field or trains a flower,
Or plants a tree, is more than all.

For he who blesses most is blest;
And God and man shall own his worth
Who toils to leave as his bequest
An added beauty to the earth,

And soon or late, to all that sow,
The time of harvest shall be given;
The flower shall bloom, the fruit shall grow
If not on earth, at least in heaven!

Hints about Work.

Hay-making.—Cut with the machine when the dew is off. If heavy, and a tedder is used, as soon as well wilted stir constantly until cured enough to cock-up; then throw into windrows or cocks while the sun is still high and the hay is hot. It is best to use the hay caps every night, and to apply them before dew begins to fall. On eastern slopes, this is before five o'clock, usually, and the men will have an hour to mow away hay, hoe corn, or other work. Let the hay cure as much as possible in the cock; and after the first day keep it in the heaps or windrows, turning and loosening them up frequently, but never spreading them thin,—that is, if you have caps, to protect against showers.

Haying and Harvest.—It requires a good general to manage the cutting and curing of a large grass crop, and the harvesting of several fields of grain of different kinds, avoiding injury from rains and thunder showers, if they prevail, unless a large gang of hands and teams stand ready all the time to do whatever is needed. Good plans are worth much, and should be made, knowing the order in which different fields of grass and grain will be cut, where the product of each is to be stored, permanently or temporarily, the use to which the hay, grain, or straw is to be put, and the amount of work that can be done each week.

Potatoes ought not to be disturbed after the tubers have begun to form. With the early sorts this takes place early, but with the late ones not before the middle of this month. After the tops interfere with the use of the cultivator, turn a light furrow towards the hills, and leave them, pulling weeds by hand as they appear through the season.

Grass Land.—The best time to manure grass land is as soon as the hay is off, and though "hand" fertilizers are best applied now, they have much more effect if well mixed with dry muck soil, spread with a shovel from the trail of a cart, and brushed in. The best dressing for mowing lots or lawns is well-rotted barn-yard manure.

Hoed Crops.—The pressure of other work leads often to neglect of these crops, and they are not so thoroughly weeded and attended to as they ought to be. For this reason every thing that can be hoed by horse-power should be. Corn that may be in danger of neglect should be in rows both ways, so that there will be little work for the hand-hoes. The rows of Swedish turnips, beets, etc., should, on the same principle, be wide apart, so that the horse-hoe may be used freely.

Corn.—Stop hoeing as soon as the ground is well shaded. The plow may still be used with care, for the sake of loosening the soil; and the little one-horse subsoil plow is often run between the rows, if you have a strong horse, with great advantage, especially in dry weather.—

Weeds.—Let none go to seed. Easier said than done, but do it if you can. We use a heavy hoe, 2 inches wide, 6 inches long, and sharp. It will cut off a dock root three inches under ground at one blow, and it is fun to use it where the weeds are not too plenty. Dock that is pulled or cut in blossom will mature every seed, we think; so will many other weeds. Lay such in heaps, and when dry, burn them.

Insects will still need attention. See that the borers do not penetrate the tree. If the eggs have been laid, rubbing with a corn-corb will kill them. If the grubs have already gained an entrance, the fact may be discovered, and they can be easily dug out by the use of the knife. Keep a look-out for the late caterpillars which prey upon the leaves. It is often better to sacrifice a branch upon which leaf-caterpillars have established themselves, than to let them spread to the whole tree. Visit the orchard frequently, and see what the many insect enemies are doing.—Agriculturist.

SECOND CROP OF HAY.—Very seasonably the question of great advantages of cutting hay when in a green state has been taken up by some of our agricultural publications, although there can be no doubt concerning the propriety of doing so; for every farmer who cuts a second crop knows how superior it is for milk-producing and feeding purposes generally, when compared with hay which has been cut while in a ripe state, and when almost all the saccharine matter in it has gone to constitute woody fibre. No season has been more favorable for a trial of the early mowing plan than the present, which, so far as we can learn, promises to be good, for two crops—if the first is seasonably harvested—and when the rowen or second crop may turn out as liberal in quantity as the first one. The subject is one farmers would do well to think over and act upon, even should hoeing be partially neglected when the moving season comes. In connection with this subject, the method of drying hay in the shade, in the cock and partially in the mow, may also be considered.

A CORRESPONDENT of the Rural New Yorker, says the best method of destroying lice on cattle, is to make strong suds of soft-soap and rain water, with a handful of salt added. This forms a paste like substance, which should be rubbed thoroughly over the animal. When used on colts, the animal should be blanketed after the rubbing.

A COUNTRY editor having written a long article on "hogs," a rival paper upbraids him for introducing his family matters to the public.

FARMERS OF BRADFORD CO:

THE CAYUGA CHIEF

IS THE

BEST MOWER,

THE BEST REAPER, AND THE BEST COMBINED MACHINE.

It is the LIGHTEST DRAFT MACHINE sold. It is two wheeled, with a flexible pole, and NO WEIGHT ON THE HORSES' NECKS. It has a floating finger bar, and follows closely the inequalities of the ground, while the graduating bar gives perfect control of the guard fingers, so as to work perfectly in lodged and tangled grass, and clover. In lodged clover it beats anything out—no place is too bad for it. A simple ledger plate, easily taken out, enables the owner at any time to make the cutting apparatus to cut as perfectly as when new.

It is an iron machine, and will last years longer than a wooden framed machine can.

Our new machine, No. 2, in DURABILITY, LIGHTNESS, UTILITY, SIMPLICITY and CHEAPNESS is unsurpassed.

If you want a PERFECT THING, come and examine the CHIEF before purchasing, and you will take no other.

Do you want a SELF RAKER, the CHIEF, with Wheeler's New Controllable Rake, is ahead of any other.
