HARVEST HYMN.

God of the swiftly-rolling Year!
Thy bounties lie on every hand;
How rich Thy varied gifts appear,
While neath the arching skies we stand;
With countless sheaves of golden grain
The joyful reapers strew the plain.

Pensile from every drooping bough,
Fair in the sunlight's ruddy glow
The ripening fruits are bending now:
From lavish Hand our blessings flow,
Through day and night, mid heat and cold,
Still swells the marvelous sum untold.

Spring sent its thrill of dawning life
Through every root and branch and spray;
The earth awoke, with vigor rife,
As to a new-created day.
Song filled the air: from every tree
Were wafted strains of melody.

The flowers sprang blooming at our feet,
Earth's fruits matured 'neath sun and shower;
With thankful heart our lips repeat
God's goodness to this latest hour.
O lift to Him each voice in praise
Whose bounteous love hath crowned our days!

E. Y. S.

What is the Condition of your Cellar.

Is it damp, close, filled with disagreeable odors, proceeding from germinating or decaying vegetables? If so, it is high time you gave the matter your earnest attention; for you have in that locality the germs of disease, and yourself and family are liable to be prostrated at any moment. You think your cellar or basement is in good sanitary condition; do you know that it is? Have you fairly and carefully examined the premises? Have you looked over the potatoes, turnips, squashes, and other vegetables, to ascertain their condition? We know that diphtheria, typhoid and scarlet fevers, and many other most serious illnesses have their origin in cellars, both in city and country; and we can do our readers no greater service than to urge them to see that at all times, they are in a dry, sweet, wholesome condition. Why should farmers' families, living in the country, away from the pestilential vapors of cities, be so subject to attacks of malignant diseases?

There is a reason for it, and we point it out. They arise from the indifference manifested to the observance of hygienic rules, and violation of sanitary laws. Cleanliness is essential to health, and is just as necessary in the country as in the city. A family living over a foul cellar is more liable to be poisoned and afflicted with illness than a city family living in its polluted atmosphere, but without cellar or basement filled with fermenting roots and fruits. There is far more sickness in the country among husbandmen than there ought to be. With plenty of pure air, water, and exercise, the evil imp, disease, ought to be kept at bay; and he would be, if a better observance of certain hygienic conditions were maintained. Bad-conditioned cellars, small, close sleeping-rooms, stoves—these are all agents of evil, and are fast making the homes of farmers almost as unhealthy as those of the dwellers in cities. Are not these suggestions worthy of consideration.—Boston Journal of Chemistry.

Two Ploughings Before Seeding.

In the regular rotation of this section, wheat follows oats. Immediately on the latter crop being taken off the ground, some farmers plough up the oats stubble before the ordinary dry spell of weather, nearly always sure to occur, some time in the present month. Manure is then hauled on to the ground, spread and ploughed down, immediately preceding sowing in wheat. Others, however, without this primary ploughing, commence hauling their manure over the field, which becomes well compacted, dry and hard; then spread it and plough in before seeding. In this dairy district our most important crop is undoubtedly the grass crop comprising under this name both hay and pasturage; and it is therefore that the system of ploughing twice before seeding is strongly to be recommended, with a view to more thoroughly aerate the soil, and make a better bed for the reception of the grass seed.

It is a very common experience that grass always takes better after two ploughings. Our three crops in rotation may be said indeed to be made more in reference to the subsequent grass crop, than for any profit to the dairyman from his crop of corn, oats or wheat. Grass occasionally runs out, and is thought to require ploughing up and re-seeding. If the field could be well kept up in grass, without ploughing, it is a question whether it would not be more profitable for a dairy farmer, with a good run of custom, to buy all his corn, oats and wheat, instead of raising them.

Farmers do not seem ready yet to adopt our recommendations of ploughing twelve inches deep. If they would do so, so as to bring up some of what is called soil, it would be found their grass fields would remain much longer in grass, without needing ploughing up; but by all means, they should put in two ploughings before reseeding.—Practical Farmer.

Drilling Wheat.

The season approaching for seeding down to wheat, we would urge the benefit of drilling in the seed with a machine instead of broadcast sowing. Nothing in the agricultural practice, now-a-days, may be said to be better established than this, as every one knows who has ever tried it; and the reports last season in the Department at Washington, from all sections of the country, showed the grain in bushels per acre to be in sections 20 and 25 per cent., with the drilled wheat. It is found to be much less liable to be thrown out by frosts or winter killed, and the free action of the atmosphere through the drills in the field, the uniform depth at which it is covered, causing an evenness in the growth, together with at least one peck less seed being required for sowing, are all advantages which belong to drilling, connected also with securing a better taking of the grass seed.

Drills, as with other farm machinery, have been greatly improved the last few years, and are now constructed not only to sow wheat, oats, rye, &c., in given quantities, but also to sow with it, grass seed and fertilizers in the rows, with the grain; so that the soil being previously well prepared, the whole is finished at one operation, and the ground left in nice, smooth condition. The ridges left by the drill are leveled down by the frosts of winter, giving additional protection to the tender roots of the grain and grass.—Practical Farmer.

POMOLOGICAL CONVENTION.—This National Exhibition and meeting of Fruit Growers in Philadelphia last week, was a grand success. We have not room however for a report.
