Norway Oats.

EDITORS OF REPORTER—Dear Sirs: For the sake of the farming interest of Bradford county, I feel it my duty to give, through your excellent paper, my experience and thoughts about the so-called Norway Oats. Last winter I bought, for one dollar and twenty cents, one quart of Jones & Clark, D. W. Ramsdell, accredited agent. I drilled them, in twelve-inch rows, early in April, on good soil, covering six rods of ground—a little less than one bushel to the acre; result, sixty-three pounds. Now, when I received these oats, I compared them with mine, and could see no difference. I sowed them side by side the same day, watched the growth and formation very closely, and when they matured, on a perfect examination of the height, size of leaf, head, form of the head, color of straw, also of the grain, thickness of the straw, thickness of the shell of the straw, &c., I said they are the same that I had sown for four years, and last spring sold three hundred bushels for eighty cents per bushel; that I do now candidly believe to be the same. Now I would not discourage trials for improvement in any kind of farm produce, by any means; for it is laudable in all of us farmers to try to improve in all the products of the farm. In the New York Weekly Tribune of December 22, is a list of names from different States, stating the amount sown and the product. If the editor had put his name at the foot of that column, we should have known who made the synopsis; but a large number thus reported are from seven and one-half bushels to fifty per acre. One man reports one quart sown on eleven rods, gathered fifty-six bushels and fourteen quarts, or about eight hundred and forty bushels per acre. Who believes it? I think it a mistake, or truth most awfully stretched.

Now, there are some things that we have learned by the so-called Norway Oat notoriety:

1. That we usually sow too much seed per acre.

2. That we do not give the land as good tilling as we should.

3. That we often lose much by careless gathering and bad threshing. Now look at a few rods of ground rich to begin with, plowed two or more times, made perfectly fine, then nicely top-dressed, each seed put separate, far apart, the weeds pulled out by hand, the chickens kept out, cut clean, saved from waste by storm, threshed clean, and we all know that we would obtain entirely different results. But there is one thing that I have noted for years, and that is, these oats will stand up good on richer land than any oats I ever saw. The straw is very thick in the shell, and also in diameter, and remains comparatively green when the oats are fit to cut. I have cut acres of them that stood up to my chin, and I stand six feet. There is one thing more to be considered, and that is, I think as farmers we do not change seed frequent enough. I have no doubt but many marked results are from this cause, viz: change of seed.

Farm Work, Mechanics, Clerkships, Bar-Tenders and Stable-Boys

Why do young men leave the farm and workshop to engage in counter-jumping, mixing liquors, cleaning spittoons, and lounging around stables and liquor saloons? It is because they do not know any better, cannot realize where it leads to, or because they are perverted and willfully wicked. Many farmers are to blame for not supplying their sons with useful and entertaining books—with the means of improvement and amusement at home. They fail to realize that boys are boys, and that they love variety. It is observed by young Robert Corncob that young Mr. Yardstick dresses nicely, goes into company, and is popular with young ladies. This gives R. C. a desire to change his rougher but much healthier pursuit and become a clerk. Or, failing in this, it would be a good thing, in the way of promotion, to learn to smoke, drink, tell stories, and get acquainted with bar-room life and bar-room lions. Strong talk—profanity and vulgarity—strong liquor, and strong tobacco go together and may be found there. He begins by holding horses, holding spittoons, and doing much menial service as his low ambition and coarse nature suggests or permits. He usually "fetches up" in the poor-house, in the gutter, or in the prison.

Parents cannot be too careful in impressing their sons with right ideas as to the most desirable callings in life, and to cultivate in them a love for rural life. Who is there more noble, more independent, than the intelligent farmer, who owns his homestead stocked with horses, cattle, sheep, pigs, poultry, fruit-trees, vines and shrubs? The farmer who is thrifty, and well-to-do, what cares he for the fluctuations in the price of stocks or dry goods? He will gather his crops, lay in a store of good things for the winter, and sell the surplus. His time is his own, and his crops grow while he sleeps. The life of a farmer is, or should be the first choice of many more of our young men. Next to this importance to the commonwealth is the mechanic and manufacturer. After the farmer—or father juxtaposition with him—comes the mechanic, the inventor. He makes the labor-saving machinery. By his contrivance we transport our productions and ourselves across continents and seas by means of the steam engines. It is the engineer—not the politician—who is prominent in building up a nation and making it a power. Then let us encourage our sons to become inventors, engineers, machinists, architects, builders, manufacturers, rather than to fritter away their precious livers in doing nothing, becoming nobodies, and in making life a failure. "Work, work, more work," is what is wanted to give health, wealth and power for good in the world.

RATS AND HARNESS.—It is stated on good authority that a teaspoon of Cayenne pepper mixed with a quart of oil and rubbing the harness with the oil, will effectually protecting it against the gnawing of rats. It is also said that an ounce of aloes to one gallon of oil will afford the same protection. Our remedy heretofore has been, and have never known it to fail, to hang the harness up so no rats can molest it. But as some people are careless in this respect, the red pepper and the aloes and oil remedy had better be adopted.

IF you would be miserable, look within; if you would be distracted, look around; if you would be happy, look up!
