Agricultural.

The Germination of Seed.

There are, doubtless, one million of dollars lost annually, on the American continent, by depositing seed so deep in the earth as to render their germination difficult; and, in many instances, enfeebling the life of the plant after germination so to make the yield unprofitable. The seed of wheat or Indian corn deposited at a depth of ten inches under the surface will not sprout at all—being below the influences of surface agitations, such as sun rays, showers, &c.; at seven inches some, probably ten per cent., of corn or wheat will force out, but will be so enfeebled as not to mature seed as, from actual experiment, corn planted seven inches deep required twenty-one days to come up and was so enfeebled that it grew to the height of three feet and died prematurely, not maturing a grain. A like experiment with wheat gave a few very imperfect seeds. At four inches the vitality of the plants seemed proportionately checked, the germination being effected in sixteen days. The same grain, corn or wheat, planted at a depth of three-fourths of an inch, or one inch, would germinate in eight days in a moderately cool soil, or in six days as the sun's rays become warmer.

The natural functions of the seed in germination is to support the body of the plant till it becomes sufficiently stout to throw out surface feeders sufficient for after support, when the powers of the germ are exhausted, which are wholly exhausted in germination when the seeds are so deposited as to make the germination very difficult—lessening the support of the plant at a very critical period of existence.

Counting the loss of seed that never germinate at all, and the proportionate loss by being too deeply planted, and one can very readily see the loss by neglect or carelessness of deep planting has not been over-estimated. Doubtless many planters, who have made extra efforts for a crop and had almost an entire failure, could, by experiment, ascertain the prime cause.

A Drover on Fattening Cattle.

Mr. Bela S. Hastings, who is one of the leading drovers from Vermont, is supplying cattle for the Boston market, gave his experience and observation in relation to fattening stock, at a late meeting of the Caledonia county Farmers' Club:

He said the main object of the farmer was to get the most out of his fodder. It does not pay to feed grain to a poor creature, one that does not take on flesh rapidly. Farmers will do better to dispose of such stock for what it will bring and procure animals of good style. He believed that one-half of the grain fed was wasted by not being fed to good cattle. Another important point is, farmers do not feed heavy enough. He would commence with as much feed as they could bear at first and then increase. In feeding twelve quarts of meal, the last four quarts are worth twice as much as the first four for fattening purposes. Some farmers complain that they do not get pay for the grain they feed out, but he had noticed that it was only those who fed light that thus complained. Whether the animal was to be fed a short or a long time, he would recommend heavy feeding. Mr Hastings said he knew of nothing better than corn meal. The cob is worth but little, if anything. Those persons of whom he purchased fat stock, who were the most successful and made it most profitable, were those who fed meal largely. If a farmer has potatoes or other roots it is well enough to feed these in part, but a farmer will do better to exchange some of his roots for corn, than to feed roots altogether. It is important to feed regularly and not too often, as the stock will eat and lie down and ruminate. It is better to feed cattle but three times a day and sheep but once.

A New Disinfectant.—We dare say very few persons are aware that coffee is a valuable disinfectant. Experiments, however, have proved that it is the most powerful means, not only of rendering animal and vegetable effluvia innocuous, but of actually destroying them. A room in which meat in an advanced state of decomposition had been kept for some time, was instantly deprived of all smell on an open coffee roaster being carried through it, containing a pound of coffee roasted. In another room, exposed to the effluvium occasioned by the clearing out of a manure pit, so that sulfuretted hydrogen and ammonia in great quantities could be chemically detected, the stench was completely removed in half a minute, on the employment of three ounces of fresh roasted coffee, while the other parts of the house were permanently cleared of the same smell by being traversed with the coffee roaster, although the cleansing of the pit continued for several hours after. The best mode of using the coffee as a disinfectant, is to dry the raw bean, pound it in a mortar, and then roast the powder on a moderately heated iron plate, until it assumes a dark brown tint, when it is fit for use. Then sprinkle it in sinks or cesspools, or lay it on a plate in the room which you wish to have putrified. Coffee acid, or coffee-oil, acts more readily in minute quantities.

Hollow Horn Diseases.—A writer in the Boston Cultivator gives the following as the symptoms of, and remedy for, the hollow horn disease. 'The symptoms are drooping of the head and ears, lying down. Turning the head over the back, towards the shoulders, as if pain in the head. This I think is a spinal disease, affecting the brains and horns.

'Cure.—Take a large table spoonful of sulphur, and lard, sufficient when warm to make it soft like paste, pour it on the top of the head at the root of the horns; take a shovel or flat piece of iron, heat it, and hold it over the head so as to heat the paste and warm the top of the head as much as the beast will bear: repeat once in two or three days, and bore the horns on the under side, two or three inches from the head, so as to let in fresh air, and let the putrid matter out if any is collected. I have never known this to fail if taken before too far gone. I have cured one cow when the top of the head was so full of matter that I opened a place above the ear which discharged more than a half pint. This was in the summer, the cow was fatted in the fall and killed. The head was all right, excepting a place at the roots of the horns about as large as a spoon bowl.'

No human heart is ever vacant. It is soon inhabited, either an angel or a devil.

Imaginary troubles are to us like the deceiving views of camera—sometimes a hundred fold.

CONSUMERS OF

CONFECTIONERY!

COME,

LET US REASON TOGETHER!

How can any person manufacture Confectionery, and sell it at 15 cents a pound, when sugar is worth 16 cents at the Refinery, (unless it is terribly adulterated?

How can any dealer retail such a vile compound to his customers and have a conscience void of offence?

How can any consumer expect to purchase pure Confectionery at twenty-five and thirty cents per pound when a pure article cannot be manufactured less than thirty to forty cents per pound, consisting of cassia buds, burnt almonds, and such class of goods?

Within a few days we have been offered cassia buds, etc., for fifteen cents per pound, and Chocolate Creams at twenty cents, and the agent acknowledged that they were adulterated ten per cent. with Terra Alba; and it is fact that tons of this cheap Confectionery are made and sold in this country every year, and the consumers are the only persons injured by it.

Now, for the benefit of those who wish a Pure article of Confectionery, we will warrant every article of our manufacture Strictly Pure and free from every ingredient deleterious to health.
