Agricultural.

Best Milk-Producing Food.

In a carefully-tried experiment which I made last winter I found that heavy feed, such as corn, wheat, and rye shorts, fed to twelve cows, pound for pound, did not make as much milk as wheat bran, into nine quarts a day, and I have no doubt that for a time this would invariably be the result; yet I should not dare to continue for any considerable length of time to feed my cows upon wheat bran alone, as it would undoubtedly diminish the strength of the cow and soon reduce her to a condition that she would be incapable of giving very much milk. I am now feeding to twelve cows two bushels of wheat bran mixed with one bushel of corn meal ground in the cob, with very satisfactory results. The milk is good, the strength of the is kept up, and a diminished amount of hay will keep the cow in good thriving condition. I feed tiwice a day.

It is yet an open question whether the feed should be fed dry or wet. There is no doubt but that in cold weather it would be much better if the water, which is required by cows in milk, could be warmed. If taken into the system while at a very low temperature, the process of digestion will be retarded until the temperature of the water is raised to blood heat. In warming this water digestion is not only retarded, but there will be a loss of a certain amount of food, which, like fuel, is consumed in keeping up the heat of the body, and this accounts for the fact that a herd of cattle require very much more food in extremely cold weather than they do in warm weather. It will be evident, therefore, that a large amount of food may be saved by warm stabling in cold weather, and consequently a much greater secretion of milk.

The great mass of the community are no doubt ignorant in regard to the great difference in the quality of milk made by the different kinds of feed. Milk made from a cow fed upon turnips and buckwheat bran or buckwheat shorts is totally unfit for a young child or its mother, and there is no doubt but that the mortality among children is often caused by improper food of which the milk is made. The physician knows the importance of having the milk from a new milch cow assigned for a young child; the why and wherefore very likely he does not know. He probably does not know that the milk from a farrow cow is one-third heavier and one-third richer in caseine than that from a new milch cow, and therefore is not as well adapted to the wants of the child; nor does the mother understand that the cause of the child's illness is owing to some improper food eaten by the cow. If I were desirous of making a given amount of milk the best adapted to the use of the greatest number of children, I would feed the cows on equal parts (in pounds) of oats, wheat bran, and Indian corn, and the best of hay and apples.

Until we become accustomed to trying experiments, we shall not know whether the cutting of hay for our milch cows in winter will pay for the extra expense and labor of doing it. Some of our milkmen who have tried cutting are of the opinion that it pays well for the trouble, and some contemplate steaming.

Roots, especially carrots, increase the flow of milk, and of the best quality, and will tend to keep the cow in good health. Apples will increase the quantity of milk nearly as much as turnips, and of much better quality.

In making milk there is nothing more important than good, early-cut hay. Without this it may be doubted whether milk can be made with profit. T. L. HART.

Spreading Manure.

In going through the country we see much of the manure drawn out lying in heaps—and it is apt to lie there until spring. Will people never learn the great error of treating manure in this way? Here is the principle: Take a lump of manure, apply it to the soil. What comes in contact with its outside—the only part that can come in contact—will receive some benefit from the manure; but the rest, the greater part by far, remains bound up in the lump. If on the top of the ground, much of the strength goes off; the atmosphere gets it; the rest goes into the soil immediately in contact with it, making this part of the land too rich, the other side not rich enough. If the lump buried, much the same is the result, only the ground gets all the strength, but only that part coming in contact with it and immediately below it, thus giving the subsoil the part which should have gone into the soil above.

It will be clearly seen that this is an evil. This same lump, scattered, pulverized thoroughly, mixed intimately, all its part would act at once, and give all the benefit to the soil, whether applied at the top and left there, as in the meadows, or harrowed in, as in the popular and good way. It is the contact of all the manure at once that is wanted. Then it is secured, then it is immediate in its effect.

Now to draw manure out, and let it remain in heaps, as is done, is to treat it as the "lump" was treated, giving part to the soil that is in immediate contact with it, the rest all the while going into the atmosphere, so that these manure heaps are but bigger "lumps," enriching too much what they come in contact with, showing lodged grass where they were. The rest, faded and deprived of its strength, goes to the rest of the soil, but to do it little good.

The way is, to spread as we draw and draw as it is made, if possible. This the way to get the strength. If the fluid parts in the stable have been secured by absorbents, the full strength will thus be obtained. Close to the soil in a fine (pulverized) condition, the ground will hold what the atmosphere otherwise (in lumps) might get. The rains will ram it into the soil; and in the spring the heaps will be frozen; there will be a difficulty of reducing them finely, and it is a piece of work we never like to do then. The other land—manure spread in the fall—works up mellow, and black, and rich, all of it; here you get the benefit; in the other case you certainly do not.—Rural New Yorker.

TRAVELLER'S CAKE.—One coffee-cup of sugar, two tablespoonfuls of butter (not melted), one teacup of sweet milk, the whites of two eggs (or one whole egg, if you do not want it very delicate), two coffee-cups of flour, one teaspoonful of cream of tartar, half teaspoonful of soda.

You should study two things. First, to

GET THEM WHERE FIRST-CLASS CLOTHING IS MADE

Secondly,

WHERE THEY ARE SOLD CHEAP

And in order to be able to sell a good article cheap the merchant must understand his business, and know how, where and what to buy as a practical man does; and a

PHILADELPHIA OPTICAL INSTITUTE,

For the manufacturing of the

CONCAVE CONVEX, CRYSTAL LENSES, LONDON

SMOKED AND TINTED GLASS FOR WEAK OR INFLAMED EYES.

The Concave Convex Crystal Spectacles, made by the above institute are now a long time before the public, and the rapid and increased demand for them combined with the universal acknowledgment of their clearness in vision and ease to the eye, shows plainly that they are superior to any other glasses in the market.

The majority of Spectacles, (mostly imported) and no matter how fine the frames, contain but a poor and worthless article of glasses, (generally cast or pressed) they are made, to be sold only, without any calculation respecting benefit to the eye, and therefore the great complaint of poor and weak sight. Thousands are using glasses now which hire and fatigue the eye, where the objects get dim after short usage, or require an intensely strong light and therefore destroying the sight, which, were they properly suited, would be preserved a life time.

The advantages claimed for the Concave Convex Crystal Glasses are the following:

The Lenses are ground of the best material, pure and hard, and made only for optical purposes, they are therefore not liable to get scratched or dim.

They confer a brilliancy and distinctness of vision not found in any other glass.

They can be used equally well by day or candle light without tiring or fatiguing the eyes.

They are ground mathematically true in the concave convex mirror, according to the philosophy of nature, and shape of cornea of the eye, therefore assisting nature only instead of forcing it.

That the lenses are centered correct into the frames.

They can be used longer than any other glasses without changing to a higher power.

The frames are made strong and durable by experienced workmen and warranted to give satisfaction.

BOOTS AND SHOES MADE AND REPAIRED.

R. C. NELSON,

Has made arrangements to accommodate customers that are constantly calling with boots and Shoes for new soles, etc., and have had to leave them, to their great disadvantage, until another day. The constant call for this kind of work, and the desire to have it done immediately, has induced me to make such arrangements that you need not return home

Without your sole being renewed and your heels set square,

For prices that are honest and perfectly fair.

Ladies that have gaiters that are broke at the toe, To this repair-shop is the place for to go

To get them re-vamped, neatly tipped or half-soled, And your feet will protected from the wet and the cold

New work we can make you with the above double quick,

We can make them for you thin, or we can give them to you thick,

We can make them with high heels, or we can give them to you flat,

So you need not stager with a brick in your hat.

N.B.—Good cider vinegar for sale by barrel or gal. Front of Methodist church, Main street.
