Agricultural.

Fattening Cattle.

The age at which cattle can be profitably fattened will depend much upon their breeding, and the manner in which they have been reared. Steers or heifers, having from half to three fourths short-horn, or Hereford blood in them, and that have been kept in a thrifty growing condition from calf-hood are usually sufficiently advanced to be put up to fatten when from thirty to thirty-six months old. Pure bred animals of short-horn or Hereford blood may be profitably fattened at an earlier age. A cross of one-half to three-quarters Devon blood on common stock makes an animal that can go into the stalls at two years old, if it has been kept in good growing condition. Common native cattle can rarely be profitably fattened till they are four years old. If cattle are put up to fatten before their growth has sufficiently advanced, so as to bring them near their full capacity of laying up substance, much of the food given them, instead of going to make them fat, will be wasted in adding bone and muscle, which could have been obtained more cheaply by giving them time to complete their developement on ordinary keep. Besides, the effort to fatten an animal, when in an immature state, can only result in producing meat of a very inferior quality, and commanding a much less price than if the same animal had been kept on longer until its frame had become solid and well knit together, its muscles developed to their full capacity, and its stomach capable of digesting and assimilating a larger amount of food than is actually required to sustain the ordinary growth and wear and tear of life, without derangement of its vitality.

There are every year greater numbers of young cattle sold to the butcher, or slaughtered by farmers, and their carcasses brought to market at the close of the grass season, when they are in a state of development that renders their flesh of an intermediate quality between veal and beef, without the tenderness of the one and the rich juiciness of the other, but as flavorless and worthless as any flesh can well be. It is sheer folly to sacrifice such animals for the sake of the paltry saving of a few months' food, when by keeping them over one winter more they would bring nearly their present value, and be fit to make into beef that is full of savory juices.—Canada Farmer.

How to Manage Milch Cows.

"F. G.," a farmer of Herkimer county, writes that it is an axiom among our dairy men here, in South Herkimer county, that much grain fed to stock will not pay, that is to keep it; fattening is a different thing and may pay or not. Sometimes it does not, and generally not too much. For milch cows it will not pay; so it is thought here. There is one thing that will pay—that does pay. It is the feeding of green, tender hay, cut green and young; and then from such hay—it may be said grass—butter is made equal to summer and fall butter not equaling only the early June butter. The quantity of milk is large in November and December, and again at calving time. There is an excellent flow of milk, and not quite so rich perhaps as grain would make it, but rich and copious; and it was brought without the great expense, the cost not being more than one-half. When summer opens, your cow is still strong, and will continue in that condition on good feed—that is good pasturage, and when getting short, fed on cornstalks provided for her, which is but a continuation of the green pasture. And when winter comes your cow will still be round and strong—not overfed, not overstrained with grain, but what a cow should be—a quiet domestic animal, supporting the dairy, intended for milk, not to be driven, either too hard by boys, or yoked as in Europe. Such a cow, a milk-giving mother, needs but sufficient strength for her purpose, and that is not much in her quiet routine. She needs good treatment; that is the great point. She grows under it, but deteriorates with abuse, and that rapidly. Give her warm winter quarters and plenty of water with her grass hay.—Rural World.

Hominy Muffins.—Having washed a pint of small hominy through two or three waters, pour boiling water on it, cover and let it soak for several hours. Then put it into a thick saucepan with half a pint of boiling water, and let it boil until soft enough to mash; drain it, and mix it well with a pint of white corn meal or wheat flour, a little salt, and a pint and one-half of milk in which two tablespoonfuls of butter have been melted. When the butter is nearly cold add four tablespoonfuls of yeast, cover it, and set it in a warm place, until very light, with the surface covered with bubbles. Butter some muffin rings, set them on a hot griddle, pour into each a portion of the mixture and bake them brown on both sides. Send them to table accordingly as they are done, pull them open with your fingers and butter them quickly.

* * *

Fence Posts.—The following experience on the mooted question whether fence posts will last longer when set in the same position in which they grew, or vice versa, is given by a writer: Some twenty-three or four years since, I set a fence, inclosing house and door-yard—a rail and banister fence. The posts were sawed from good-sized, first-growth, red chestnut logs. To saw them tapering, one-half of them must be sawed to set in the ground, top down, and the other half bottom down. The posts were set promiscuously, and to this day there has been no distinguishable difference in their lasting quality, unless it be where some of them had more sap on than others, and these gave out first, without regard to which end was set down.—Manufacturer and Builder.

* * *

Efficacy of Onions—A writer says: We are troubled often with severe coughs, the result of colds of long standing, which may turn to consumption or premature death. Hard coughs cause sleepless nights by constant irritation in the throat, and a strong effort to throw off offensive matter from the lungs. The remedy I propose has been tried by me, and recommended by me with good results, which is simply to take into the stomach before retiring for the night, a piece of raw onion, after chewing. The esculent in an uncooked state is very heating, and collects water from the lungs and throat, causing [illegible] relief to the patient.

TO THOSE GETTING THEIR

CLOTHING MADE TO ORDER.

You should study two things. First, to

GET THEM WHERE FIRST-CLASS CLOTHING IS MADE

Secondly,

WHERE THEY ARE SOLD CHEAP

And in order to be able to sell a good article cheap the merchant must understand his business, and know how, where and what to buy as a practical man does; and a

In the business. Have been a cutter in some of the best houses in

I do my own buying, selling and cutting, and divide my profits with no man, so that less of it will do—and with low rent and other expenses in proportion, thus making the cost of carrying on the business very small.

In reading the above you will see why it is that

I CAN SELL GOODS CHEAPER

SMOKED AND TINTED GLASS FOR WEAK OR INFLAMED EYES.

The Concave Convex Crystal Spectacles, made by the above institute are now a long time before the public, and the rapid and increased demand for them combined with the universal acknowledgment of their clearness in vision, and ease to the eye, shows plainly that they are superior to any other glasses in the market.

The majority of Spectacles, (mostly imported) and no matter how fine the frames, contain but a poor and worthless article of glasses, (generally cast or pressed;) they are made to be sold only, without any calculation respecting benefit to the eye, and therefore the great complaint of poor and weak sight. Thousands are using glasses now which tire and fatigue the eye, where the objects get dim after short usage, or require an intensely strong light and therefore destroying the sight, which, were they properly suited, would be preserved a life time.

The advantages claimed for the Concave Convex Crystal Glasses are the following:

The Lenses are ground of the best material, pure and hard, and made only for optical purposes, they are therefore not liable to get scratched or dim.

They confer a brilliancy and distinctness of vision not found in any other glass.

They can be used equally well by day or candle light without tiring or fatiguing the eyes.

They are ground mathematically true in the concave convex mirror, according to the philosophy of nature, and shape of cornea of the eye, therefore assisting nature only instead of forcing it.

That the lenses are centered correct into the frames.

They can be used longer than any other glasses without changing to a higher power.

The frames are made strong and durable by experienced workmen and warranted to give satisfaction.

BOOTS AND SHOES MADE AND REPAIRED.

L. C. NELSON,

Has made arrangements to accommodate customers that are constantly calling with boots and Shoes for new soles, etc., and have had to leave them, to their great disadvantage, until another day. The constant call for this kind of work, and the desire to have it done immediately, has induced me to make such arrangements that you need not return home

Without your sole being renewed and your heels set square,
For prices that are honest and perfectly fair.

Ladies that have gaiters that are broke at the toe,
To this repair-shop is the place for to go
To get them re-vamped, neatly tipped or half-soled,
And your feet well protected from the wet and the cold

New work we can make you with the above double quick,
We can make them for you thin, or we can give them to you thick,
We can make them with high heels, or we can give them to you flat,
So you need not stager with a brick in your hat.

N.B.—Good cider vinegar for sale by barrel or gal.
