Agricultural.

How to Use Corn Fodder.

The usual method of feeding corn fodder has been hitherto a very wasteful one, though now generally recognized value as an article of feed has to some extent brought about a change in this respect. Yet it is still true that the larger portion of the corn-stalks produced is wasted, so far as its feeding properties are concerned. It is the common practice to throw out into the barn-yard to the cattle a quantity of stalks, sometimes not even unbound, and allow them to eat what they can and destroy the rest. In the fighting and trampling done by cattle under such circumstances, the greater part of the fodder is unconsumed, and becomes trampled down in the mire or snow, a tangled mass of tough, unbroken stalks. There they remain, until it is necessary in the spring either to cart them out to the fields, or to turn them over in the endeavor to get them rotted. In the one case, they are useless as manure, and a very great impediment to the plow, or harrow, and even to the mowing machine, for they often remain on the surface undecomposed until the hay crop comes round again. In the other case, much labor is necessary to get them rotted, and the tearing the mass of them apart and turning them, is certainly the most severe labor the farmer is called upon the perform.

Now, with a rational mode of using them, this trouble and annoyance can be avoided, and their whole value as fodder be made available. If a farmer owns but one horse and cow, he can save money by procuring a fodder-cutter, and cutting up and feeding his corn-stalks. When few stock are kept, the copperstrip fodder cutter, of small size, and costing ten dollars or thereabouts, is sufficient. With a numerous stock, a large machine, to run by horse-power, and costing $30 or $40, would be needed. Provided thus, the farmer should cut up, the whole of his stalks. They contain, when properly harvested and housed, much nutritious matter, and in our experience we have found no difference in the appearance of our stock, or their productive qualities, whether fed on corn fodder or hay. Cut up, wetted, and sprinkled with meal of corn, oats, or buckwheat, either singly or ground together, with wheat or rye bran in equal proportions with the grain, at the rate of one quart to the bushel of fodder, with a handful of salt, they make a feed capable of keeping stock of all kinds in good, thriving condition throughout the winter. The quantity needed for one feed is one bushel of this mixture to each full grown animal. Yearlings consume one-half and younger calves one-third of this amount.

Skimmed Milk for Hens.

The editor of the Poultry World finding that a neighbor whom he had furnished with pullets had beaten him in eggs, inquired into the cause, and gives the following explanation. Faith's we may add that any kind of ever milk thickened with bran, is excellent food for all kinds of poultry.

"They commenced laying in October, and have been at it ever since, to the astonishment if not the envy of the neighbors of the fortunate owner, who has been selling eggs for the past four months for forty-five cents per dozen and upwards. Not one particle of meat or scraps is given, and but the veriest trifle of vegetable food is fed in the shape of a few boiled potatoes about once a week. An abundance of grain is allowed of various sorts, ground and unground, but never cooked, and plenty of unburnt oyster shells pounded, are at all times accessible. They have a supply of skimmed milk every day, so that they can help themselves to what they want, no other drink being provided. Skimmed milk and the white of an egg are very much alike, though the cream has been separated, undoubtedly the full allowance of Indian corn supplies the only constituents of the yolk. Some farmers think they can not afford to give milk to hens, but must save it for the pigs. But if skimmed milk is worth one and a-half cents per quart to feed to swine, as some claim it is worth three cents for poultry, if, by its use, winter eggs can be obtained and sold at high prices."

How to Kelp Celery.—A correspondent of Moore's Rural gives the following hints: "For the benefit of those of your readers who have never succeeded in keeping celery in catable condition throughout a winter, (and I know of several) I will give a rule by which I have preserved celery, free from rot or rust, as late as the last of March. Never worked at celery in any way except the plants be perfectly dry. Earth up never before 10 o'clock, a. m., or after four p. m., and then only on a very dry and sunshiny day. In the fall, as soon as the ground begins to freeze enough to make the slightest crust in the morning, select a dry and sun-shiny day, as near noon as possible, pack your celery in boxes, (I use soap or starch boxes), placing first a layer of earth, about one inch deep; then a layer of celery; placing the plants just far enough apart to not lay against each other, and thus alternating earth with celery until the boxes are filled, having the first and last layers of earth. Place the boxes where the celery will not in freeze, (but not in a heated room), and your celery will keep splendidly, and always convenient for use.

Remedies for Stagnant Wells.—The water in wells frequently becomes foul from various causes; sometimes from the soaking into them of surface water from rich land, where there is a large amount of vegetable or animal mold, sometimes from there being an amount of water in the well, which if not drawn off, stagnates and becomes offensive. A body of water remaining undisturbed for a few weeks is liable to become foul which, if occasionally agitated, would remain good. If stagnant water becomes unpalatable, it may be rendered drinkable by pouring it from one vessel into another three or four times, letting it, fall two or three feet. By so doing, it comes in contract with the oxygen of the air, which purifies it. Another method of purifying water is filtering it through sand or charcoal. A hogshead two-thirds full of sand can be set near the well, the water pumped into it, a hole made in the bottom covered with sponge and the water will percolate through and be purified. A chain pump or bucket is the best for a well, as it agitates the water every time it is used.—Country Gentleman.

IMPORTANT TO ALL WHO VALUE THEIR SIGHT! The sight of the aged assisted, the weak strengthened and the perfect preserved. PHILADELPHIA OPTICAL INSTITUTE, For the manufacturing of the CONCAVE CONVEX CRYSTAL LENSES, LONDON SMOKED AND TINTED GLASS FOR WEAK OR INFLAMED EYES. The Concave Convex Crystal Spectacles, made by the above institute are now a long time before the public, and the rapid and increased demand for them combined with the universal acknowledgment of their clearness in vision and ease to the eye, shows plainly that they are superior to any other glasses in the market. The majority of Spectacles, (mostly imported) and no matter how fine the frames, contain but a poor and worthless article of glasses, (generally cast or pressed;) they are made to be sold only, without any calculation respecting benefit to the eye, and therefore the great complaint of poor and weak sight. Thousands are using glasses now which tire and fatigue the eye, where the objects get dim after short usage, or require an intensely strong light and therefore destroying the sight, which, were they properly suited, would be preserved a life time. The advantages claimed for the Concave Convex Crystal Glasses are the following: The Lenses are ground of the best material, pure and hard, and made only for optical purposes, they are therefore not liable to get scratched or dim. They confer a brilliancy and distinctness of vision not found in any other glass. They can be used equally well by day or candle light without tiring or fatiguing the eyes. They are ground mathematically true in the concave convex mirror, according to the philosophy of nature, and shape of cornea of the eye, therefore assisting nature only instead of forcing it. That the lenses are centered correctly in the frames. They can be used longer than any other glasses without changing to a higher power. The frames are made strong and durable by experienced workmen and warranted to give satisfaction. WM. A. CHAMBERLIN, Dealer in Watches, Jewelry and Silver Ware, Towanda, Pa., has the sole agency for these glasses
