Agricultural.

Winter Plowing.

It is not often that winter plowing can be practiced in this (43d) latitude. But when it can I have found it to be of the greatest advantage, especially if, as now, it is preceded by frost penetrating the arable soil. It is sure to come up mellow, unless unusually heavy and compact, and then greatly ameliorated. The advantages beside this mellow condition, are not a few, some of which cannot be obtained otherwise. The ground is freshly thrown up to the cold air, or at least cold enough to chill and benumb what vermin may be exposed; the frosty nights alone would do this. The seeds of weeds that had some protection in the deep soil are now fully exposed, the frost rains and snows having a great influence. Then this fresh soil, disintegrated by plow and frost is thus laid open through its pores to the immediate influence of the elements, which further disintegrate and mellow it. Besides, there is less snow to pack now, part of the winter having passed. The plowing is between the fall and spring plowing, and partakes of the nature of both, getting the full benefit of both in addition to its own special advantages. There is, to a greater or less extent, the looseness of the soil deep down which we get in spring plowing; also the absence of grass and weeds which get started in fall plowing, especially when early performed. The gain in work which we get in fall plowing is also secured in winter plowing, a time when there is no farm work done, unless specially favored with mild weather. The gain, therefore, at a time when labor is worth little, is considerable. The land newly and loosely thrown up will also take in the rains and melted snows, and gradually pass them off instead of keeping the more compact body of the soil wet, sometimes visible on the surface. Fall plowing will show this in the spring very frequently. It is seldom seen on land plowed in the spring or winter, particularly late winter. Further, there is no evaporation of the fertilizing gasses of the soil, which the direct heat of the sun in summer produces. The fertility of the rains and snows is retained.

I have had the chance offered me several times during the course of my life for plowing in winter. Uniformly, the results have been good. Perhaps we ought to except some wet places, which, plowed at any time, without under treatment, would have done poorly. But, in the main, there was a mellow opening in the spring, and an earlier chance for working—the soil being porous, and drained beyond what was usually its condition, so that it was fit for the horrow several days (and possibly a week) earlier than would have been the case with fall plowing. This is the land for seeding down. It can be done early and on the best of seed beds. The grass seed or clover brushed in, there can be no failure if the ground is rich enough. If not rich enough, manure may be drawn on it and spread immediately after plowing. This may also be done on any plowed land open in winter, and it should be done then if neglected in the fall.

Our summer was a cold one. The cold continued through the fall and into December, and in addition to the snow gave us full winter in effect. If there is a law of compensation in the weather, the rest of our winter, or a part of it, ought to be mild; so also prophesy the scientists. Already this seems to have taken place. To-day, Dec. 12th, the sn o, which was two feet in depth, has about all disappeared, and there is little frost left in the ground. There is, therefore a prospect for an open and mild winter. It needs not many favorable days to prepare the ground for the plow. Farmers should keep themselves in readiness to test the matter should the weather favor them. Land plowed early in the fall may be re-plowed now to advantage, if the weather admit. But in no case plow if the land is not dry enough. Do not think the frost will remedy it. It will do it only in a measure—not sufficiently to counterbalance the hurt. If it comes up mellow, or loosened if sod, and not greasy, it is in the right condition for the plow. Plow as deep as the land will bear.

How Eggs are Hatched.

People have an idea that the hen sits on the eggs for a time, and when time comes for hatching the chick bursts forth. There never was a greater mistake. The chick, until liberated from the shell by outside aid, is as incapable of motion as if it formed a solid egg, which it nearly does. You might as well inclose a man in an iron boiler, and tell him to get out of it without help. The chick grows on the inside of the shell, and bursts up a very small scale. Of course, when it does this, it at the same time "breaks in that spot" the inside of the egg. This admits the air; in a short time it breaths and gets strength to cry loudly. The hen then sets to work to liberate it; she brings it forward under the feathers of the crop, and supporting it between the breast bone and the nest, begins the work of setting it free. She hatches the point of her beak into the hole formed by the raising of the scale by the chick's beak, and breaks away the egg-skin or shell around the greatest diameter of the egg. The joint efforts of the hen without and the chick within then liberate the prisoner, and he struggles into existence, and gets dry under the feathers and the natural heat of the hen. All female birds which sit on their eggs to hatch them have the hook in the beak strongly developed. Even the broad-billed duck and goose have those hooks especially developed, and with them they liberate their young. In Australia, where everything seems to be by contraries, it is the cock of the bush-turkey that hatches the eggs, and not the hen. It would be interesting to know whether the hook of the beak is better adapted for service in the male than the female. The hook of the beak of the ordinary cock of the common fowl is quite different from that of the hen—it is adapted for wounding in fighting, but not for hatching of eggs.

Potato Soup.—Two and a half pounds of peeled potatoes, cut once or twice in two, boil in three quarts of water for half an hour; then put in two teaspoonfuls of salt, some pepper, and four ounces of butter; when the potatatoes have boiled to pieces some, mash the lumps and stir in one pint of milk. Let it boil up and is done. If thickened with one or two soda crackers, it tastes very much like oyster soup.

The second winter term of this institution will commence MONDAY, JANUARY 26, 1874.

No pains will be spared to maintain the high standing of the institution, and by carefully looking to the interests of each individual student to make its work even more efficient. Classes will be organized in several new studies in Science and Language. Also the classes in English will be remodeled so as to meet the wants of new students desiring to pursue these branches.

To save expense, text books, the same as in the county will be used in the English branches, with the exception of Geography.

To make the sojourn of non-resident students more pleasant, the Principal will use his house—situated but a few rods from the Institute building—for boarding purposes, where rooms furnished throughout and provided with clothes closets and other conveniences will be furnished for the young ladies.

The best rooms in the Institute will be furnished and assigned to the young men; all will board at the house of the Principal. There will be a caeful supervision on the part of the Principal and teachers of the manner in which students employ their time.

FOR ALL THE PURPOSES OF A FAMILY PHYSIC,

Curing Costiveness, Jaundice, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Dysentery, Foul Stomach and Breath, Erysipelas, Headache, Piles, Rheumatism, Eruptions and Skin Diseases, Billousness, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Tetters, Tumors and Salt Rheum, Worms, Gout, Neuralgia, as a Dinner Pill, and Purifying the Blood, are the most congenial purgative yet perfected. Their effects abundantly show how much they exce all other Pills. They are safe and pleasent to take, but powerful in cure. They purge out the foul humors of the blood; they stimulate the sluggish or disordered organ into action; and they impart health and tone to the whole being. They cure not only the every day complaints of every body, but formidable and dangerous diseases. Most skilful physicians, most eminent clergymen, and our best citizens, send certificates of cures performed and of great benefits they have derived from these Pills. They are the safest and best physic for children, because mild as well as effectual. Being sugar coated, they are easy to take; and being purely vegetable they are entirely harmless.
