Agricultural.

FARMERS' GIRLS.

Up in the early mornings,
Just at the peep of day.
Straining the milk in the dairy,
Turning the cows away—
Sweeping the floor in the kitchen,
Making the beds up stairs,
Washing the breakfast dishes,
Dusting the parlor chairs.

Brushing the crumbs from the pantry,
Hunting the eggs at the barn.
Roasting the meat for dinner,
Spining the stocking yarn.
Spreading the snow white linen
Down on the bushes below,
Bleaching every meadow
Where the red strawberries grow.

Starching their cotton for Sunday.
Churning the snowy cream,
Raising the pails and strainer
Down in the running stream.
Feeding the geese and poultry,
Making the puddings and pies,
Judging the little one's cradle,
Driving away the flies.

Grace in every motion,
Music in every tone,
Beauty of form and feature
Thousands might covert to own—
Cheeks that rival a roses,
Teeth the whitest of perals;
One of these country maidens is worth
A score of your giddy girls.

The Object in Applying Manure.

This is a question too little discussed and too frequently ignored by the every day farmer. Too many work in a some what aimless manner in the application of fertilizers. If a definite object is had in view, there seems to be an indefinite idea how that object is to be attained with a considerable class, and thus they work less understandingly, and oftentimes to a considerable loss in several ways. One man has in view the permanent improvement of the productiveness of his soil, while at the same time he is desirous of immediate returns from the present crop. Another has in view the growing of the largest possible crop, leaving the permanent improvement of the soil as a secondary consideration; and so on to the end of the chapter. The varieties of soil—sandy loam, light sand, clayey loam, or clay, stony, gravelly loam—are differently constituted, and each is better adapted to some special crop than the other; some of them are what we term "light" soils, while others are "medium" or "heavy." Now the cultivator of each of these varying soils wishes to attain a specific object in its culture, and to that end he applies fertilizers and grows a crop which he finds, from experience, that his soil is adapted to. Scarcely any one at all experienced would think that the same object would be attained by applying manure in the same state, in the same manner, to each and all of these varying soils. Local experience and a knowledge of local farming and circumstances always best determines the matter of application of manure, and in the discussion of the subject all these matters should be considered; but my questions remain: What is the object in applying manure? Should we let any other object take precedence of the present crop? One crop is certainly all we are assured of. If we apply manure to plowed and hoed ground, it cannot be done without in some way permanently improving the same, for the aeration causes the manure and soil to act chemically, producing the improvement.

W. H. WHITE.

Roots as Manure

It has been found that the roots of a good crop of red clover left in an acre of land after the removal of the crop weigh 5,580 pounds, or from three to three and a half tons. The same examination gave the weight of an acre of rye roots at 3,400 pounds. A similar experiment gave the weight of the roots of alfalfa from an acre at over five tons) All of this matter is, of course, valuable for the use of such crops as may be grown during or after its decomposition. The well-known superiority of clover as a manuring crop, however, is not due alone to the great amount of organic matter, taken mainly from the atmosphere, which the roots supply, but also to the position in which this matter is deposited.

The roots reach deeply into the soil and on their decomposition they serve to draw moisture from the lower soil, and by the decomposition of fertilizing matter to a considerable depth, they induce the descent of the roots and crops to a point where they are much more sure of a supply of moisture during the dry seasons than they could be if near the surface. Then again these keeply penetrating roots traverse parts of the subsoil not heretofore open to vegetation, and in their decomposition they produce a chemical effect on the inorganic substances that lie along their courses, and help to render them, too, serviceable for future crops.—American Agriculturalist.

THE Rural New Yorker, speaking of the way to have apples every year, says:

Another mode recommended (which we have not tried, but which is said to work effectively,) is to take the cions from a tree in 1874 and graft on a good thrifty tree and do the same in 1875; thus fruit will be got on each in alternate years. It is also asserted that if you cut off from the thrifty tree the growth of 1873 in the last of June, leaving three or four buds that would come out in 1874 you will force out the next year's buds and gain one year. Again if all the blossoms are removed from one-half of the orchard in the bearing yaar, the next year the half of the orchard from which the blossoms have been removed will bear. This is true. We have had experience in this matter. But it is better, we think, to thin out the fruit from trees, after it sets, every year and thus get an income from each tree annually. This matter of thinning fruit is not sufficiently attended to. With the present devices for pruning and clipping, it will require comparatively little time for the orchardist to go through his trees and thin out his blossoms or young fruit, thus preventing the trees from overbearing one year and from resting the next. Besides the superior quality and size of the fruit thus obtained will pay for the labor by increasing its market value."

POTATO PUDDING.—One pound of mashed potatoes, three quarters of a pound of butter, three quarters of pound of sugar, four eggs, one gill of cream. Work the potatoes and butter well together. Beat the sugar and eggs to a froth. Mix them well and bake in a quick oven.

A LIFE properly seasoned with grace has a uniform flavor.

SUSQUEHANNA
COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE

The second winter term of this institution will commence MONDAY, JANUARY 26, 1874.

No pains will be spared to maintain the high standing of the institution, and by carefully looking to the interests of each individual student to make its work even more efficient. Each teacher will have his speciality, and use every facility to make the topics interesting, and to secure the largest possible results in his department.

Classes will be organized in several new studies in Science and Language. Also the classes in English will be remodeled so as to meet the wants of new students desiring to pursue these branches.

To save expense, text books, the same as in the county will be used in the English branches, with the exception of Geography.

To make the sojourn of non-resident students more pleasant, the Principal will use his house—situated but a few rods from the Institute building—for boarding purposes, where rooms furnished throughout and provided with clothes closets and other conveniences will be furnished for the young ladies.

The best rooms in the Institute will be furnished and assigned to the young men; all will board at the house of the Principal. There will be a careful supervision on the part of the Principal and teachers of the manner in which students employ their time.

Price for furnished room and board, including fuel, lights, and washing not to exceed six pieces, $4 00 per week. Students will furnish their own toilet and be held accountable for the furniture in their rooms.

Those desiring to prepare themselves for the work of teaching during the following Summer, should apply to the Principa at once.

Tuition from Four to Ten Dollars per term, according to studies pursued.

For further particulars or circulars, address the Principal, E. E. QUINLAN, Towanda Pa.

AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS,

FOR ALL THE PURPOSES OF A FAMILY PHYSIC,

Curing Costiveness, Jaundice, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Dysentery, Foul Stomach and Breath, Dry sipelas, Headache, Piles, Rheumatism, Eruptions and Skin Diseases, Biliousness, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Tetters, Tumors and Salt Rheum, Worms, Gout, Neuralgia, as a Dinner Pill, and Purifying the Blood, are the most congenial purgative yet perfected. Their effects abundantly show how much they excel all other Pills. They are safe and pleasent to take, but powerful in cure. They purge out the foul humors of the blood; they stimulate the sluggish or disordered organ into action; and they impart health and tone to the whole being. They cure not only the every day complaints of every body, but formidable and dangerous diseases. Most skilful physicians, most eminent clergymen, and our best citizens, send certificates of cures performed and of great benefits they have derived from these Pills. They are the safest and best physic for children, because mild as well as effectual. Being sugar coated, they are easy to take; and being purely vegetable they are entirely harmless.
