Agricultural.

How Nutmegs Grow.

An old whaler tells, in the American Grocer, all about nutmegs. This spice, so much used in every family, is indigenous to the Moluccas, reaching its greatest perfection in Amboyna. This island belongs to the Dutch, who do not permit the cultivation of the nutmeg in the other islands under their control. The nutmeg tree is twenty-five or thirty feet high when fully grown, with foliage of a rich dark green, and very plentiful. It reaches maturity, or full productiveness, at the fifteenth year from planting. From the blossom to the ripening of the fruit takes about seven months, but as the tree is a perennial bearer, there are always blossoms, green fruit and ripe on the tree. The yield is most plentiful in the last four months of the year. The average yield per annum of a healthy tree is 5 lbs. of nutmegs and 1½ lbs. of mace. A plantation of one thousand trees requires the labors of seven coolies, fifty oxen and two plows, for cultivation and harvesting. The fruit is gathered by means of a hook attached to a long pole. It is shaped like a pear, about the size of a peach, and has a delicate "bloom." The nut has three coverings; the outside one is a thick, fleshy husk, having a strong flavor of nutmeg. This husk, preserved in syrup when young, is a favorite sweetmeat in the East Indies. Under this husk is the bright red mace, which is carefully flattened by hand and dried on mats in the sun. It loses its rich scarlet and becomes a dull orange color, and requires to be kept perfectly dry to preserve its flavor. After the mace is removed from the fruit, the nuts, in their brown shells, are placed on hurdles over a slow fire, which is kept constantly burning under them for two months. The nuts then rattle in the shells, which are cracked with a wooden mallet, the sound nuts selected and packed in wooden cases and sprinkled over with dry, sifted lime, and are then ready for market. The best nutmegs are dense, emit oil when picked with a pin, and can always be known by their heavy weight. Poor ones are light and easily known.

How Soil was Made. — Prof. Agassiz said that all the materials on which agricultural progress depends are decomposed rocks, and not so much those that underlie the soil, but those on the surface, and ground to powder by the glaciers. Ice all over the continent is the agent that has ground out more soil than all other agencies put together. The penetration of water into the rocks, forests, running water and baking suns have done something, but the glaciers more. In a former—age the United States was covered with ice several thousand feet thick; and the ice moving from north to south by the attraction of the tropical warmth or pressing weight of the snow and ice behind, ground the rocks over—which was called soil. These masses of ice can be tracked by the hunter. He has made a study of them in the country as far south as Alabama, but has observed the same phenomenon in Europe, particularly in Italy, where, among the Alps glaciers are now in progress. The stones and rocks ground and polished by the glaciers can easily be distinguished from those scratched by running water. The angular boulders found in meadows and the terraces of rivers not reached by water can be accounted for only in this way.

A Few Words About Ducks.—The domestic duck is one of the most valuable fowls of the farmer, but it has one great objection, which is, that it is an unmerciful gormandizer, and is difficult to raise. Where there are ponds or streams, it is as profitable as any fowl; it is very prolific, and its eggs are preferred by many to those of the hen. Where they have free access to ponds, they feed on various reptiles, and several species of aquatic grass which they find beneath the surface, and which is a very excellent substitute for animal food. When insects are abundant, they require no supply of meat, as they obtain a sufficiency of animal food themselves; but when this is not the case, they must be furnished liberally, or they will speedily die. Potatoes boiled, mashed and mixed with meal, make an excellent article of feed for the duck. It becomes very fat when fed on it, and when in preparation for the market, it is perhaps the best food that can be given except meat. Young ducks require great attention. Their voracious habits often induce them to eat to repletion, and many die while quite young, from no other cause.—Germantown Telegraph.

Now for the Seed.—It is a good time and a good plan at this season of the year to be on the lookout for seeds for the coming season to prepare (if it has not already been done) such seeds as one produces himself, cleansing and assorting it for the seeding. Then the selection of new seed—of seed of new grains and roots—should be a part of every farmer's business these winter months. Grass seed grains, and vegetables can be bought cheaper for cash now than two months hence. Besides, there should be an eager search for information as to the merits and adaptation of new things to one's own needs and localities. This can only be obtained by inquiry through papers devoted (in whole or in part) to giving agricultural information, wherein farmers exchange their opinions and experiences relating to whatever is new or called new under the sun. This is a hint that may be acted upon with wisdom.

Honey Bees.—Professor Agassiz said, in reference to honey bees: The beehive consists when in full activity, of one queen, several hundred drones, and many thousand working bees. These constitute a community by which a combined system of labor is carried on transcending in many respects the most complicated actions of man himself. Their structure shows no organ similar to those by which the mental functions are manifested in the higher animals and in man. They have no brain proper, nor does their nervous system correspond in any way to that of the vertebrates.

The farmer should sow his P's, keep his C's warm, hive his B's, Kill off the J's, remember what he C's, take care of the V's, and praise his O's, teach his wife not to T's, and take his E's.

It is said that there was never an honest robbery—he is always a robber.

An honest employment is the best inheritance that can fall to any one.

SUSQUEHANNA
COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE

The second winter term of this institution will commence MONDAY, JANUARY 26, 1874.

No pains will be spared to maintain the high standing of the institution, and by carefully looking to the interests of each individual student to make its work even more efficient. Each teacher will have his specialty, and use every facility to make the topics interesting, and to secure the largest possible results in his department.

Classes will be organized in several new studies in Science and Language. Also the classes in English will be remodeled so as to meet the wants of new students desiring to pursue these branches.

To save expense, text books, the same as in the county will be used in the English branches, with the exception of Geography.

To make the sojourn of non-resident students more pleasant, the Principal will use his house situated but a few rods from the Institute building—for boarding purposes, where rooms furnished throughout and provided with clothes closets and other conveniences will be furnished for the young ladies.

The best rooms in the Institute will be furnished and assigned to the young men; all will board at the house of the Principal. There will be a careful supervision on the part of the Principal and teachers of the manner in which students employ their time.

Price for furnished room and board, including fuel, lights, and washing not to exceed six pieces, $4.00 per week. Students will furnish their own toilet and be held accountable for the furniture in their rooms.

Those desiring to prepare themselves for the work of teaching during the following Summer, should apply to the Principal at once.

Tuition from four to Ten Dollars per term, according to studies pursued.

For further particulars or circulars, address the Principal, E. E. QUINLAN, Towanda Pa.

AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS,
FOR ALL THE PURPOSES OF A FAMILY PHYSIC,
Curing Costiveness, Jaundice, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Dysentery, Foul Stomach and Breath, Erysipelas, Headache, Piles, Rheumatism, Eruptions and Skin Diseases, Biliousness, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Tetters, Tumors and Salt Rheum, Worms, Gout, Neuralgia, as a Dinner Pill, and Purifying the Blood, are the most congenial purgative yet perfected. Their effects abundantly show how much they excel all other Pills. They are safe and pleasant to take, but powerful in cure. They purge out the foul humors of the blood; they stimulate the sluggish or disordered organ into action; and they impart health and tone to the whole being. They cure not only the every day complaints of every body, but formidable and dangerous diseases. Most skilful physicians, most eminent clergymen, and our best citizens, send certificates of cures performed and of great benefits they have derived from these Pills. They are the safest and best physic for children, because mild as well as effectual. Being sugar coated they are easy to take; and being purely vegetable they are entirely harmless.
