Agricultural.

THE IMPATIENT HEN.

This is the tale of a queer old hen
That sat on eggs exactly ten.
She made her nest with pride and care,
And weather foul or weather fair,
You always found her at her post,
For patience was her daily boast.
Alas! how oft it is out lot
To brag of what we haven't got!
This will apply to hens, and men,
And boys and girls.

Days passed, and when
The sun began to warmer grow,
The grass and leaves began to show
Their twinkling green on hill and vale;
When sweet and pleasant was the gale,
This queer old hen began to long
To join once more the noisy throng
Of idle gossips—half a score—
That strutted by the old barn door.

Oh, dear! O, dear! here I am tired!
A weary lot is mine," she sighed,
"No gleam of pleasure do I catch:
Why don't these tiresome chichens hatch?
It worries me in heart and legs
To sit so long upon these eggs,
I'm sick of pining here at home;
O, chicks, chicks, chicks, why don't you come?

Your little houses white and warm,
I've sheltered from the angry storm.

There's Mother Dominique next door,
Her darlings number twenty-four,
And they've been out a week or more;
And now she wanders at her ease,
As proud and happy as you please.
So stir your pinky little pegs,
My yellow bills come out and walk,
Or else I'll doubt my eggs are eggs,
And think they are but lumps of chalk."

Then something rash and sad befel;
This hen picked each brittle shell,
And now so wonderful to tell,
Her treatment, which was very rude,
Killed on the spot her tiny brood!
And now, despised by fowls and men,
She lives a broken-hearted hen.

This is the moral of my lay—
To reap success in work or play,
Why spoil whatever you've begun,
Through eagerness to have it done!
Remember poor Dame Partlet's fate!
Don't be impatient—learn to wait.

PLANTING HORSE-RADISH.

If we look through our markets and see the chunky stuff sold for horse-radish, it is clear that not one in a hundred know how to grow it. Horse-radish well grown is as profitable as any garden crop, but we think there is not much profit in the scrubby stuff referred to.

To have good horse-radish, a rather heavy soil should be chosen, but by no means wet, though one which garderners would call damp and cool will be by no means objected to. It cannot very well be made too rich, and if even trenching the ground is to find favor it will surely be in favor with this crop. Most our readers know what gardeners call trenching; if not, the more agricultural term of sub-soiling will give a good idea.

Now the object in raising good horse-radish is to have long, clean, straight roots, and good culture is to get these. In raising horse-radish, every piece of the root which has a little of the crown. Generally pieces an inch or so long are set just beneath the soil, and one or more bud starts up to make crowns with leaves, and others go down to make a root or roots. These are then forkey or twisted and give the wretched roots we see. The proper way is to make holes with a dibble, post-spade or crowbar, so as to let the small pieces which are to make plants go down a foot or more. Then fill in the holes and wait. The result is that in a couple of months a sprout will start upwards to the surface, and this sprout in time becomes the straight, clean root we have spoken about. The second season after planting they will be in marketable condition, and should be all taken up and marketed that season and a new plantation made in like manner on the same ground. From the pieces left in the ground by the digging of the old roots many will come up, and these are generally relied on to form the succeeding chop; but these sprouts should be hoed off as they come and be regarded as nothing but weeds, which everything that comes up where it is not wanted is.

In setting out the rows must be made about eighteen or twenty inches apart, and the pieces to form roots be planted about four or six inches apart. The distance, however, between the rows is to be regulated by the method of culture. When the plow is used to clear out between the rows, they must be wider than when grown as a garden crop. The richess of the ground will also regulate the distance to put the sets apart. The richer the ground the closer the sets may be put.

If these simple hints are followed, one need never be without a good relish for fish, roast beef, or any of the multitudinous dishes where a little pungency is not to be dispised.
—Germantown Telegraph.

ABOUT GRAFTING.—There are many curious facts about vegetable life. We can, for example, graft the apricot on the plum, and the peach on the apricot, and the almond on the peach, and thus we may produce a tree with plum roots and almond leaves. The wood however, or the stem will consist of four distinct varieties, though formed from one continous layer. Below the almond wood and bark we shall have perfect peach wood and bark, then perfect apricot wood and bark, and at the bottom perfect plum wood and bark. In this curious instance we see the intimate correspondence between the bark and the leaf, for if we should remove the almond branches we might cause the several sorts of wood to develop buds and leafy twigs each of its own kind. Each section of the compound stem has its seat of life in the cambium layer, and the cambium of each reproduces cells of its own species out of a common nutrient fluid.—Massachusetts Ploughman.

SNOW PUDDING.—Pour one pint boiling water on half a box of gelatine, add the juice of one lemon, and two cups of sugar. When nearly cold strain, add the whites of three eggs beaten to a froth, then beat the whole together and put in a glass dish. Take the yolks of these eggs, one pint milk, one pint milk, one tablespoonful cornstarch, flavor with vanilla, and cook as you always do soft custard, pour it round the jellied part, or serve separately, as you prefer.

CROSSING POULTRY.—More eggs are obtained from hens by mixing the breeds. Crossing also promotes health. But little trouble would be experienced with croup, gapes cholera and others disease in the poultry yard if careful attention were given to crossing and guarding against the vile practice of breeding in-and-in.

SUSQUEHANNA COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE

The Spring term of this institution will commence MONDAY, APRIL 6, 1874.

No pains will be spared to maintain the high standing of the institution, and by carefully looking to the interests of each individual student to make its work even more efficient. Each teacher will have his speciality, and use every facility to make the topics interesting, and to secure the largest possible results in his department.

Classes will be organized in several new studies in Science and Language. Also the classes in English will be remodeled so as to meet the wants of new students desiring to pursue these branches.

To save expense, text books, the same as in the county will be used in the English branches, with the exception of Geography.

To make the sojourn of non-resident students more pleasant, the Principal will use his house situated but a few rods from the Institute building—for boarding purposes, where rooms furnished throughout and provided with clothes closets and other conveniences will be furnished for the young ladies.

The best rooms in the Institute will be furnished and assigned to the young men; all will board at the house of the Principal. There will be a careful supervision on the part of the Principal and teachers of the manner in which students employ their time.

Price for furnished room and board, including fuel, lights, and washing not to exceed six pieces, $4 00 per week. Students will furnish their own toilet and be held accountable for the furniture in their rooms.

Those desiring to prepare themselves for the work of teaching during the following Summer, should apply to the Principal at once.

Tuition from Four to Ten Dollars per term, according to studies pursued.

For further particulars or circulars, address the Principal, E. E. QUINLAN, Towanda Pa.

APPLETONS' AMERICAN CYCLOPEDIA.

NEW REVISED EDITION.

Entirely rewritten by the ablest writers on every subject. Printed from new type, and illustrated with Several Thousand engravings and Maps.

The work originally published under the title of THE NEW AMERICAN CYCLOPEDIA, was completed in 1863, since which time the vast progress of events has attained in all parts of the United States, and the signal developments which have taken place in every branch of science, literature and art, have induced the editors and publishers to submit it to an exact and thorough revision, and to issue a new edition entitled THE AMERICAN CYCLOPEDIA.

Within the last ten years the progress of discovery in every department of knowledge, has made a new work of reference an imperative want.

The movement of political affairs has kept pace with the discoveries of science, and their fruitful application to the industrial and useful arts and the convenience and refinement of social life. Great wars and consequent revolutions have occurred, involving national changes of peculiar moment. The civil war of our own country, which was at its height when the last volume of the old work appeared, has happily been ended, and a new course of commercial and industrial activity has been commenced.

Large accessions to our geographical knowledge have been made by the indefatigable explorers of Africa.

The great political revolutions of the last decade, with the natural result of the lapse of time, have brought into public view a multitude of new men, whose names are in every one's mouth, and of whose lives every one is curious to know the particulars. Great battles have been fought and important sieges maintained, of which the details are as yet preserved only in the newspapers or in the transient publications of the day, but which ought now to take their place in permanent and authentic history.

In preparing the present edition for the press, it has accordingly been the aim of the editors to bring down the information to the latest possible dates, and to furnish an accurate account of the most recent discoveries in science, of every fresh production in literature, and of the newest inventions in the practical arts, as well as to give a succinct and original record of the progress of political and historical events.

The work has been begun after long and careful preliminary labor, and with the most ample resources for carrying it on to a successful termination.

None of the original stereotype plates have been used, but every page has been printed on new type, forming in fact a new Cyclopedia, with the same plan and compass as its predecessor, but with a far greater pecuniary expenditure, and with such improvements in its composition as have been suggested by longer experience and enlarged knowledge.

The illustrations which are introduced for the first time in the present edition, have been added, not for the sake of pictorial effect, but to give greater fidelity and force to the explanations in the text. They embrace all branches of science and of natural history, and depict the most famous and remarkable features of scenery, architecture and art, as well as the various processes of mechanics and manufactures. Although intended for instruction rather than embellishment, no pains have been spared to insure their artistic excellence; the cost of their execution is enormous, and it is believed they will find a welcome reception as an admirable feature of the Cyclopædia, and worthy of its high character.

This work is sold to Subscribers only, payable on delivery of each volume. It will be completed in sixteen large octavo volumes, each containing about 800 pages, fully illustrated with several thousand Wood Engravings, and with numerous colored Lithographic Maps.
