Agricultural.

Farmer's Should Keep Accounts.

The great mass of the farmers of this country keep no accounts at all—not even a memorandum book in which they note down current expenses, etc. The idea of "keeping books" has a terror about it, which deters most people whose success in life does not absolutely hang upon their keeping accurate accounts to have much to do with them. The amount of money which passes through the hands of a small farmer in any part of the country is so small that his recollections about money transactions are usually pretty accurate, and the real necessity of spending a few minutes a day necessary to keep tolerably accurate accounts is not apparent to them, and will not be until proved.

It is not our object to enter upon an argument to convince any one of the desirableness of keeping accounts, but to show how it may be done conveniently and easily. The writer has for some time used the following system for keeping his family and farm accounts, which are kept together, and it certainly is simple, convenient, and appears to be all that is required.

The book is ruled with double dollars, and cent columns. In one of these columns the expenses are set down; in the other, the receipts. The book need not be larger than a common school copy-book, and three minutes a day will serve to make all the entries. If the farmer is cold and his fingers are stiff, his wife or one of his daughters will gladly take the pen. Offener than otherwise, we think the wife, if not overburdened with the cares of household and children, would be the best one to keep the accounts. In a great many cases, dimes and half-dimes slip away for personal indulgences (glasses of something warm, or tobacco,) which were it the good wife's daily duty to make the record, would not be spent. These accounts ought to be balanced as often as once a month. It will be observed that this book, if accurately kept, will only show the transactions in ready money, and hence should be called cash accounts. We almost all have, of necessity, another class of accounts to keep. It is not always possible or best to pay cash, and we may make little debts and give credits all the time. The settlements are often made in produce, labor, or something beside money. Here there should be just as accurate a record of the transactions for all that. With those persons with whom a running account is kept, there should be an account opened in another book, and some pages devoted to it. In other cases, a simple memorandum of the transactions may be sufficient. It requires no knowledge of book-keeping, or skill as a accountant. Any child of sixteen [illegible] the advantages [illegible] safe to say, beyond [illegible] American Agriculturist.

[illegible] Animals.—Nearly all diseases in animals are by improper feeding in the first place. In nine cases out of ten the digestion is [illegible] Charcoal, says the Live stock Journal, is the most efficient and rapid corrective. It will cure in a majority of cases if properly administered. An example of its use:

The hired man came in with the information that one of the finest cows was very sick, and a kind neighbor proposed the usual drug, and poison. The owner being ill, and unabled to examine the cow, concluded that the trouble came from over eating, and ordered a teacupful of pulverized charcoal given in water. It was hurried placed in a junk bottle, the contents shaked upward, and the water and charcoal poured downward. In five minutes improvement was visible, and in a few hours the animal was in the pasture quietly eating grass. Another instance of equal success occurred with a young heifer which had become badly bloated by eating green apples after a hard wind. The bloat was so severe that the sides were almost hard as a barrel. The old remedy, saleratus, was tried for correcting the acidity. But the attempt to put it down always caused coughing, and it did little good. Half a teacupful of powdered charcoal was next given, and in a few hours all appearance of bloat had gone, and the heifer was well.

Be Kind to Your Horse.—However often a horse stumbles, from any cause whatever, do not shout at him, for the animal dreads to be chided. Do not shake the reins, for his mouth is much more sensitive than your lips are. Do not use the whip, for the horse is naturally so timid that the moment you begin to correct him, he becomes so terrified that he loses control of his own reasoning faculties, and in his blind terror plunges, and rears, and fails to obey. The right course to pursue is to speak quietly but firmly to the creature. Comfort the trembling animal with the magic of your voice, and bring back those perceeptions which help your horse to guard against repeating the action of stumbling. This manner of procedur is far more humane and reasonable than to yell at the animal, or lash him fiercely, thus frightening and bewildering him, instead of teaching him what is expected of him.

Advice to Drivers.—Look at your horses, mouth see how he suffers as he strive to draw his load, and how hot and fretty he is. Do you not see that his mouth is hurt and stretched by the bit with that tight drawing rein; and the more he pulls the more he is punished? If we were working we should not like to have our heads buckled up in that manner. Now unhook the bearing rein and mark the difference. Your own good sense will tell you that it is a change for the better, for your horse can now throw his head forward and pull with all his strength, working coolly and comfortably and twice as well as he did before the bridle was loosened.

A Preventive of Botts in Horses. I will give you a remedy for botts which I have used, and known others to use twenty years with entire success. Get some salt from a fish barrel and feed to the horse once a week, and he will never be troubled with botts so long as the treatment is continued. My way of feeding is to mix it with clean salt in the proportion of about two parts of the latter to one of the former, and give a small handful once a week. If this is done from the first of January to the first of July, there is not much danger of botts. S. F. B.

She tied the halter to her waist, and led the cow to water; the brute took fright, and gave a twist—"My daughter!" cried the mother, "my daughter!"

SUSQUEHANNA COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE

The Spring term of this institution will commence MONDAY, APRIL 6, 1874.

No pains will be spared to maintain the high standing of the institution, and by carefully looking to the interests of each individual student to make its work even more efficient. Each teacher will have his speciality, and use every facility to make the topics interesting, and to secure the largest possible results in his department.

Classes will be organized in several new studies in Science and Language. Also the classes in English will be remodeled so as to meet the wants of new students desiring to pursue these branches.

To save expense, text books, the same as in the county will be used in the English branches, with the exception of Geography.

To make the sojourn of non-resident students more pleasant, the Principal will use his house, situated but a few rods from the Institute building—for boarding purposes, where rooms furnished throughout and provided with clothes closets and other conveniences will be furnished for the young ladies.

The best rooms in the Institute will be furnished and assigned to the young men; all will board at the house of the Principal. There will be a careful supervision on the part of the Principal and teachers of the manner in which students employ their time.

Price for furnished room and board, including fuel, lights, and washing not to exceed six pieces, $4 50 per week. Students will furnish their own toilet and bed clothes, or the furniture in their rooms.

Those desiring to prepare themselves for the work of teaching during the following Summer, should apply to the Principal at once.

Tuition from Four to Ten Dollars per term, according to studies pursued.

APPLETONS' AMERICAN CYCLOPÆDIA.

NEW REVISED EDITION.

Entirely rewritten by the ablest writers on every subject. Printed from new type, and illustrated with Several Thousand engravings and Maps.

The work originally published under the title of The New American Cyclopædia was completed in 1863, since which time the wide circulation which it has attained in all parts of the United States, and the signal developments which have taken place in every branch of science, literature and art, have induced the editors and publishers to submit it to an exact and thorough revision, and to issue a new edition entitled The American Cyclopædia.

Within the last ten years the progress of discovery in every department of knowledge, has made a new work of reference an imperative want.

The movement of political affairs has kept pace with the discoveries of science, and their fruitful application to the industrial and useful arts and the convenience and refinement of social life. Great wars and consequent revolutions have occurred, involving national changes of peculiar moment. The civil war of our own country, which was at its height when the last volume of the old work appeared, has happily been ended, and a new course of commercial and industrial activity has been commenced.

Large accessions to our geographical knowledge have been made by the indefatigable explorers of Africa.

The great political revolutions of the last decade, with the natural result of the lapse of time, have brought into public view a multitude of new men, whose names are in every one's mouth, and of whose lives every one is curious to know the particulars. Great battles have been fought and important sieges maintained, of which the details are as yet preserved only in the newspapers or in the transient publications of the day, but which ought now to take their place in permanent and authentic history.

In preparing the present edition for the press, it has accordingly been the aim of the editors to bring down the information to the latest possible dates, and to furnish an accurate account of the most recent discoveries in science, of every fresh production in literature, and of the newest inventions in the practical arts, as well as to give a succinct and original record of the progress of political and historical events.

The work has been begun after long and careful preliminary labor, and with the most ample resources for carrying it on to a successful termination.

None of the original stereotype plates have been used, but every page has been printed on new type, forming in fact a new Cyclopædia, with the same plan and compass as its predecessor, but with a far greater pecuniary expenditure, and with such improvements in its composition as have been suggested by longer experience and enlarged knowledge.

The illustrations which are introduced for the first time in the present edition, have been added, not for the sake of pictorial effect, but to give greater individ ality and force to the explanations in the text. They embrace all branches of science and of natural history, and depict the most famous and remarkable features of scenery, architecture and art, as well as the various processes of mechanics and manufactures. Although intended for instruction rather than embellishment, no pains have been spared to insure their artistic excellence; the cost of their execution is enormous, and it is believed they will find a welcome reception as an admirable feature of the Cyclopædia, and worthy of its high character.

This work is sold to Subscribers only, payable on delivery of each volume. It will be completed in sixteen large octavo volumes, each containing about 800 pages, fully illustrated with several thousand Wood Engravings, and with numerous colored Lithographic Maps.

SAYRE.—THE NEW TOWN OF SAYRE, PA., is situated on the Susquehanna River, between Waverly, N. Y., and Athens, Pa., 83 miles from the Anthracite, 43 miles from the Bituminous, and 93 miles from the Semi-Bituminous Coal Mines of Pennsylvania. It is the Southern terminus of the Southern Central Railroad, also of the Ithaca & Athens Railroad, and is virtually the Northern terminus of the Lehigh Valley and Pa. & N. Y. Railroads. It is a mile and a quarter from the Erie Railway at Waverly.

SAYRE has already in successful operation a large Car Wheel Foundry, a Furniture Factory, a Flouring Mill, a Woolen Mill, and a Planing Mill. A vigorous growth is anticipated for 1874.
