From Africa.—The U. S. brig Somers

General Jack on in Boyhood.
In a speech at Anderson District some years since, the late Mr. Stephenson, a veteran of the revolution, who had been a personal acquaintance of Gen. Andrew Jackson during the revolutionary war. I was induced by curiosity, as well as respect for the character of this estimable lady, to visit one who had been the companion of her illustrious ex President, in the days of his youth and obscurity. I found Mrs. Stephenson to be what she had been represented to be—an intelligent, kind hearted and fine looking old matron, fond of conversation and anecdotes of the 'old war.' She was born in the neighborhood of the Waxs-haws in Lancaster District, S. C., and there grew up with the future hero of New Orleans. The mother of Andrew Jackson, and her three sons, were well known to Mrs. Stephenson. Andrew was the youngest, and about her own age. They were seat to the same school, and their parents were very near each other. The father of Gen.
Jackson died before Mrs. Stephenson's recollection but shortly after his settlement in South Carolina.
He and his wife were both from Ireland. At the commencement of the revolutionary struggle in South Carolina, Andrew was going to a grammar school kept in the meeting house of the Waxhaw church yard. As the contest grew warm, the school was discontinued, and the meeting house became a fort. In the meantime, one of Andrew's brothers died, and the other entered the service of his country. During the war this other brother died with the small pox.
In the Waxhaw neighborhood, at one period of the war, it was the seat of war in the Southern country, and was laid almost entirely desolate, and left without inhabitants. It was during this period that Andrew himself then a lad of fifteen or fifteen years old, joined the army. The particulars of his service a re unknown to Mrs. Stephenson. She understood, however, that he was taken a prisoner by the British, and heard that he had received a blow from an officer with his sword, for not performing some menial office during his imprisonment.
There were two cousins of Andrew in the army with him. One of them was killed and the other was a prisoner. Whilst a prisoner of war in Charleston, he was taken sick and his aunt, Mrs.
Crawford, lost her life in attempting to visit him.
She fell a victim to the climate and sorrow, and her husband soon followed. This left Andrew without relation on this side of the Atlantic—a boy and a stranger in a new country. The little property which his family possessed had been plundered and destroyed. When the country was restored to peace, he found himself in a very agreeable situation—destitute of a home, relations, and money. Under these circumstances, he made the house of a Mr. White his home.— He was the uncle of Mrs. Stephenson, and a saddler by trade. Andrew remained with him for eighteen months, and during that time served his time in working at his trade. What prospects the future President of the United States had in his humble but respectable occupation, is not known. But the fact of his being thus engaged for a length of time, is well known to Mrs.
Stephenson. Becoming tired of the business of saddles, and finding an opportunity of doing so, he left Mr. White's and went to Ko th town, where he afterwards commenced the study of the law, and was admitted to the bar.

SELLING ASSORTMENT UP.
READY MADE CLOTHING
AT THE THREE BIG DOORS,
No. 351 Liberty st., one door from the Jackson Foundry.
THE Subscriber having prepared at his establishment the largest and most varied stock of READY MADE CLOTHING ever offered in the Western country, would respectfully invite the public to give him a call and examine his Goods and hear his prices before purchasing elsewhere. His stock consists in part of 1,500 Coats, assorted sizes and quality; 2000 pair Pantaloons; 1300 Vests; with a large assortment of Shirts, Drawers, Cravats, Stocks, Gloves, Supenders, and every other article of winter Clothing.
His Clothes were all selected by himself in the Eastern Markets and purchased at the very lowest cash prices, and consequently he can afford to give his customers BETTER BARGAINS than they can get at any other house in the city. Believing in the principle of "Protection to Home Industry" he has therefore had all his articles manufactured by Pittsburgh workmen, and he has no hesitation in saying that they will be found in every respect superior to the Eastern manufactured articles that are offered for sale in the slop shops that have recently anchored among us.
In these times when Home Industry is occupying so large a share of public attention, as it always should, the proprietor of the "Three Big Doors" takes peculiar pride and pleasure in assuring the citizens of Pittsburgh that his Goods are all manufactured under his own eye, by the mechanics of his own town. He does not, like some of his rivals in trade, have his Clothes made up in a distant city, in another State, nor does he advertise his Stock in bills printed three or four hundred miles from here. He goes on the principle that the mechanics of Pittsburgh can do work as well as any others, and he does not desire to draw money from their pockets to support distant workmen; while he asks them to support him, he does not wish to impoverish them by a drain to support far of mammoth workshops.
The subscriber would take this occasion to return thanks to his friends and customers for the unprecedented patronage extended to his establishment, and to repeat his invitation to all those who wish to purchase clothing, of every description, made in the latest fashion and sold on the most accommodating terms, to call at No 151 Liberty street.
