Agricultural.

Useful Hints.

CREAM OF TARTAR rubbed upon soiled white kid gloves cleanses them well.

A mixture of oil and ink is a good thing to clean kid boots with: the first softens, the last blackens them.

In sudden attacks of diarrhœa, a large cup of strong, hot tea, with sugar and milk, will frequently bring the system to a healthy state.

STONE MASON's saw-dust is infinitely better than soap for cleaning floors and much more economical.

Moths may be kept out of furs and woolen clothes by wrapping the fabric in muslin. Moths cannot eat through muslin.

One of the best applications for rheumatism is to bathe the parts affected with water in which potatoes have been recently boiled, as hot as can be borne, just before going to bed.

An excellent receipe for removing paint or grease spots from garments may be had by mixing four tablespoonfuls of alcohol with a tablespoonful of salt. Shake the whole well together, and apply with a sponge or brush.

To restore scorched linen, take two onions, peel and slice them, and extract the juice by squeezing or pounding. Then cut up half an ounce of white soap and two ounces of fuller's earth; mix with them the onion juice and half a pint of vinegar. Boil this composition well, and spread it, when cool, over the scorched part of the linen, leaving it to dry thereon. Afterwards wash out the linen.

SOUP MAKING.—In the first place observe always to lay your meat in the bottom of the pan or pot, cutting meat up, or, if a bone cracking it well. A lump of butter adds richness, but it is not necessary. Select the herbs and vegetable as you prefer, cut them up very small and lay over the meat, with a little water and a cautiously small piece of salt. Cover the vessel with a close-fitting lid, and set by a slow fire. This will draw out all the herbs, and roots, giving the soup a different flavor from that imparted by putting the full quantity of water in at first. Turn the meat frequently. When the gravy produced is almost dried up, cover it again with a sufficient quantity of water to make soup enough for the family. To a large shank bone of beef three quarts, or even a gallon is not too much to allow. When your soup is done take it off the fire to cool, and skim thoroughly. Put it on again, and be careful not to dish it up unless boiling hot. Be careful to add salt and other high flavored condiments sparingly; every table is provided with these, and eaters, so that a deficiency in these respects maybe easily remedied, not so an over quantity. Flour or other thickening than the vegetables used is deemed advisable, except the dish of ox soups and oyster soup.

EXPERIMENTS IN FEEDING A MILCH COW.—Milch cows require a large amount of succulent food and oleaginous matter to be deposited in their tissues, or secreted in milk. Potatoes will not to increase the proportion of butter in the milk of a cow that is kept upon them, their starch being converted into fatty matter. It has been proved by experiment that the proportion of butter in the milk of a cow allowed to feed during the day in pasture, and shut up at night in a warm stall, was much greater in the evening milk than in the even, the former containing 5.6 parts of butter in 100, and the latter 2.7 parts. This was evidently due to the increased demand for the material during the night, while the body was at rest and the skin kept warm.

Another time it was tried of keeping the cow in a shed during the day, and feeding her with grass, and the proportion of butter in her evening milk rose to 5.1 parts in 100. But this diminished the proportion of caseine, or cheesy matter in the milk, which was again increased by allowing the cow to pasture in the open field. Hence it appears that stall feeding is favorable to the production of butter, and pasturing to that of cheese.

MARKET FOR COMBS OF FOWLS.—The Poultry World has this, which may suggest a new resource to some poultry breeders and create an increased demand for the large comb-bearing breeds: "The combs of Spanish and Leghorn fowls are sold in some parts of Europe as choice delicacies for the plates of those who seek for fresh appetizers. Under the name of 'Cretes de Coq,' a supply of these morsels has been recently imported thither from Paris. The combs are of large size, both single and rose, and are put up in white vinegar, in large tubular white bottles, holding about a pint, sealed with black wax. When we say that these small bottles cost at wholesale in Paris more than a dollar in gold each, the inflection is forced that many a large combed rooster may in future be sacrificed to Mammon, as they were offered up to Esculapius. There are enough large combs in the yards of our breeders to make a fortune if they could be utilized."

TO CLEAN A RUSTY PLOW.—Take a quart of water and pour slowly into half a pint of sulphuric acid. The mixture will become quite warm from chemical action, and this is the reason why the acid should be poured slowly into the water rather than the water into the acid, and let it remain on the iron until it evaporates. Then wash it again. The object is to dissolve the rust. Then wash with water, and you will see where the worst spots are. Apply some more acid and rub on those spots with a brick. The acid and the scouring will remove most of the rust. Then wash the mold-board thoroughly with water to remove all the acid, and rub it dry. Brush it over with petroleum or other oil and let it be till spring.

ASPARAGUS.—Beds of asparagus if covered with two inches of manure, will be protected from the cold, and the liquid from the manure will work down to the roots by rains and melting snows, and giving the plants a fine start next spring. If new beds are set out in autumn, this covering will serve to shield the young plants from the effect of winter, but the bed must have a good bottom dressing, or the plants will be likely to be killed even with this protection.

APPLETONS' AMERICAN CYCLOPÆDIA.

NEW REVISED EDITION.

Entirely rewritten by the ablest writers on every subject. Printed from new type, and illustrated with Several Thousand engravings and Maps.

The work originally published under the title of THE NEW AMERICAN CYCLOPÆDIA was completed in 1863, since which time the wide circulation which it has attained in all parts of the United States, and the signal developments which have taken place in every branch of science, literature and art, have induced the editors and publishers to submit it to an exact and thorough revision, and to issue a new edition entitled THE AMERICAN CYCLOPÆDIA.

Within the last ten years the progress of discovery in every department of knowledge has made a new work of reference an imperative want.

The movement of political affairs has kept pace with the discoveries of science, and their fruitful application to the industrial and useful arts and the convenience and refinement of social life. Great wars and consequent revolutions have occurred, involving national changes of peculiar moment. The civil war of our own country, which was at its height when the last volume of the old work appeared, has happily been ended, and a new course of commercial and industrial activity has been commenced.

Large accessions to our geographical knowledge have been made by the indefatigable explorers of Africa.

The great political revolutions of the last decade, with the natural result of the lapse of time, have brought into public view a multitude of new men, whose names are in every one's mouth, and of whose lives every one is curious to know the particulars. Great battles have been fought and important sieges maintained, of which the details are as yet preserved only in the newspapers or in the transient publications of the day, but which ought now to take their place in permanent and authentic history.

In preparing the present edition for the press, it has accordingly been the aim of the editors to bring down the information to the latest possible dates, and to furnish an accurate account of the most recent discoveries in science, of every fresh production in literature, and of the newest inventions in the practical arts, as well as to give a succinct and original record of the progress of political and historical events.

The work has been begun after long and careful preliminary labor, and with the most ample resources for carrying it on to a successful termination.

None of the original stereotype plates have been used, but every page has been printed on new type, forming in fact a new Cyclopædia, with the same plan and compass as its predecessor, but with a far greater pecuniary expenditure, and with such improvements in its composition as have been suggested by longer experience and enlarged knowledge.

The illustrations which are introduced for the first time in the present edition have been added not for the sake of pictorial effect, but to give greater lucidity and force to the explanations in the text. They embrace all branches of science and of natural history, and depict the most famous and remarkable features of scenery, architecture and art, as well as the various processes of mechanics and manufactures. Although intended for instruction rather than embellishment, no pains have been spared to insure their artistic excellence; the cost of their execution is enormous, and it is believed they will find a welcome reception as an admirable feature of the Cyclopædia, and worthy of its high character.

This work is sold to subscribers only, payable on delivery of each volume. It will be completed in sixteen large octavo volumes, each containing about 800 pages, fully illustrated with several thousand Wood Engravings, and with numerous colored Lithographic Maps.
