SCHOOL-WORK FOR THE CENTENNIAL.

We make the following extracts from circulars issued by the Department of Public Instruction. Material for exhibition should be in Philadelphia by April 25th:

"In answer to many inquiries, we indicate in a general way, the kind of work it is desirable to have done for the Centennial Exposition. What is said is simply suggestive. Those concerned in preparing material may have something better to present than any thing we have named. If so, let it be forwarded by all means. The more new, novel or unique an article is, if good, the better. We should like each county, city, institution and individual to give us a representation of that which is consider d of mots value, or of that which would be first shown to intelligent visitors. Thus will be gathered from all parts of the State, the most interesting of our educational products. Every article should be carefully labeled.

WORK FOR COUNTIES.

1. A framed picture of one or more of the best school houses. A group of such pictures would be valuable. Photographs of other school houses may be placed in port-folios.

2. District rules, regulations, courses of study, forms, &c., of special excellence. These can be presented in atlas or port-folio form.

3. Charts showing statistics, progress, superintendent's work, &c. These should be mounted.

4. Scholars' work, drawing in port-folios, and work in other branches, prepared according to directions heretofore issued from the school department, and bound in volumes.

5. Original designs of school houses; plans of heating, lighting and ventilating school houses; inventions of school furniture or apparatus.

WORK FOR CITIES AND BOROUGHS.

1. Framed pictures or models of best school houses, with interior views, &c. Pictures of all the school houses in a city could be shown in a port-folio.

2. Charts exhibiting the organization of the board, grading of the schools, courses of study, work of superintendent, history, statistics, progress, &c.

3. Reports, other kinds of printed documents, blanks, rules, diplomas, arranged in a convenient form.

4. Scholars' work in all grades of schools, and in all branches, selected and arranged in port-folios or bound volums A few of the very best drawings might be framed for wall exhibition.

5. Original designs, plans, inventions relating to schools.

The following rules apply especially to scholars' work prepared at a prescribed time for the exhibition.

1. No work that is not considered good of its kind by some competent judge should be forwarded.

2. All grades of school may prepare work. The work of a primary school, if good of its kind, will be just as acceptable as the work of a high school. Work may be classed into primary school work, grammar school work and high school work.

3. All manuscript work should be written on letter paper 8x10 inches in size.

4. The questions to be answered should be written directly above each answer in all manuscripts in arithmetic, and in all other subjects the same course should be pursued, or the answers should be so framed that the question is plainly indicated.

5. Not more than four hours should be allowed for the writing of a paper on any one branch of study, which time should include the entire work from the time the questions are placed before the pupil to the completion of the copy submitted.

6. The ground or limit of the examination should be the work done within the current school year up to the time of the examination, and work preliminary thereto.

7. The questions for examinations should be prepared by the acting visitor or superintendent of schools in each town or city, or some other person not engaged in the instruction of the class under examination, and the utmost care must be taken that no informotion in regard to the questions be circulated among the pupils.

8. All schools and school systems of towns and cities exhibiting, may be represented, first, by papers prepared as above from one entire class of each grade in which pen and ink are used in writing; and second, by not less than one paper in ten selected from the other manuscripts prepared in examination.

9. Every manuscript of every pupil should be headed in the pupil's own handwriting, with his full name, age, grade or class, the name of the school of which his class is a part, and the date of the examination; and at the foot of the last page it should contain, also in the pupil's own handwriting, a minute of the time taken for the writing of the paper, which must include the whole time elapsing from the putting of the questions before the pupil to the handing in of the copy exhibited. On the completion and handing in of any manuscript or specimen for exhibition, the pupil should make the following declaration on a separate slip of paper over his own signature, viz: "This accompanying manuscript was written by myself without aid from any source."

The manuscripts of every class must be accompanied by a written declaration by the teacher that the entire work of the class was done under his ovn eye, and that all the regulations were observed as herein prescribed.

These certificates written on separate sheets of paper, must be sent to the Superintendent or other officer having the direction of the examination. They need not be sent to the exposition, however.

10. A title page should be inserted in every volume, collection or set of manuscripts designed for exhibition, and no papers will be admitted for exhibition unless accompanied by a declaration of the principal executive officer of the school, that said papers were executed in accordance with the above rules.

In addition to the work prepared especially for the Centennial Exposition, a place will be found for any kind of school work that will serve to illustrate systems or methods of instruction.
