METEORS.—On the 13th of November there was a regular hunt through the heavens for meteors. Six observers were stationed at the Observatory at Greenwich, England, and they seem to have been amply rewarded. Indeed it was the most exciting sport of the kind ever witnessed there. About 250 were observed in an hour. They were of various hues—red, yellow and blue. Each observer marked the direction of every meteor, and registered it, with the portion of the heavens where first observed and where it disappeared. The result seems most satisfactory. The astronomers are now satisfied that they have got on the track of the "wreck of worlds" that we seem annually to visit, and to know how to calculate the time when to expect the meteors and the point from which they come across our orbit.

An interesting girl of sixteen years was convicted in the New York court of special sessions of pocket-picking at funerals. It appeared from the testimony of one witness that a death occurred in his house, and at the funeral the prisoner came in, pretending to be a mourner, and her movements around the room led him to suspect while all were engaged in prayer, he noticed the prisoner glide to the side of a woman who was deeply affected, and insert her hand in the womans pocket. The week previous a death had occurred in his brother-in-law's family, and he saw the prisoner there, and after the funeral was over, $200 was found to have been stolen from one of the mourners.

It is natural enough that the London Times, which upheld the rebellion in this country, almost alone of the British press, defends the Jamaica butcheries.
