PENROSE'S FOES FROZEN OUT BY SLATE MAKERS

Not a Single Follower of Governor and Vares on Committee

PLUMS FOR FAITHFUL

Senator Humes, From Washington, for War Board Session at Shore

The Penrose forces do not intend to give any of the patronage of the Legislature to the Vare-Brumbaugh-Magee faction. This was shown this afternoon when the "Slate" Committee of the House, which has the distribution of the more than 125 jobs in the House at its disposal, was announced.

Not a single follower of the Governor or the Vares has been placed on the committee. The committee, which is composed of one Representative from each of the thirty-two congressional districts in the State, is made up entirely of Penrose followers. With one exception they all voted for Richard J. Baldwin for Speaker. The exception is Aaron B. Hess, of Lancaster County, who declined to vote, but who has since thrown his support to the anti-Brumbaugh forces.

The committee was announced just before Chairman Woodward left with the other members of the Penrose "war board," which will hold its first conference in Atlantic City late this afternoon or tonight.

PENROSE HURRIES TO FRONT

Senator Penrose, who will preside at the deliberations of the "war board," left Washington at noon, and is hurrying on his way to the shore. Last night and today, politicians from all parts of the State flocked to Philadelphia bound for Atlantic City, to observe the deliberations of the "war board" at close range.

The conference is considered to be the most important political confab held on the subject of Pennsylvania politics in fifteen years.

Whether impeachment proceedings will be brought against Governor Brumbaugh and the exact extent to which the investigation of the Governor and of the State Administration on the charges of bribery, perjury, malfeasance in office, coercion, intimidation and maladministration will go, will be settled by the conferees.

The meeting of the "war board" was called to discuss the Penrose plans for the future against the opposing faction of the Republican Organization, legislation and patronage. The committees of both branches also will be made up during the conferences, but they will not be announced until the Legislature reconvenes on the night of Monday, January 22.

The slate committee, which will hand out the $5, $6 and $7-a-day jobs in the Legislature, includes the six Philadelphia members announced yesterday. A Penrose-McNichol member was appointed even in Congressman William S. Vare's own congressional district. The committee and the congressional districts they represent follow:

First—Daniel J. Neary, Seventh Ward.
Second—Jefferson W. Smith, Thirteenth Ward.
Third—Joseph H. McArdle, Sixteenth Ward.
Fourth—Sigmund J. Gans, Thirty-eighth Ward.
Fifth—Samuel J. Perry, Twenty-fifth Ward.
Sixth—Theodore Campbell, Thirty-fourth Ward.
Seventh—Samuel A. Whitaker, Chester.
Eighth—James S. Boyd, Montgomery.
Ninth—Aaron B. Hess, Lancaster.
Tenth—William W. Jones, Lackawanna.
Eleventh—David W. Thomas, Luzerne.
Twelfth—Curvs M. Palmer, Schuylkill.
Thirteenth—George J. A. Miller, Lehigh.
Fourteenth—W. Worth Jennings, Bradford.
Fifteenth—Henry T. Albee, Potter.
Sixteenth—William W. Robertson, Northumberland.
Seventeenth—James W. Sampsel, Snyder.
Eighteenth—Joshua W. Swartz, Dauphin.
Nineteenth—James E. Bininger, Blair.
Twentieth—Robert S. Spangler, York.
Twenty-first—Harry B. Scott, Center.
Twenty-second—Victor B. Bouton, Westmoreland.
Twenty-third—Duncan Sinclair, Fayette.
Twenty-fourth—George Plummer Baker, Washington.
Twenty-fifth—June B. Hoyes, Erie.
Twenty-sixth—Harry Zauders, Carbon.
Twenty-seventh—Miles A. Milliron, Armstrong.
Twenty-eighth—Daniel B. Goodwin, Venango.
Twenty-ninth—Edward M. Hough, Allegheny.
Thirtieth—James F. Woodward, Allegheny.
Thirty-first—William J. McCaig, Allegheny.
Thirty-second—William C. Wagner, Allegheny.

MEMBERS OF WAR BOARD

The members of the "war board" who will confer at the shore are State Senator James P. McNichol, Philadelphia; State Senator Edward E. Beidleman, Dauphin, president pro tem. of the Senate; Speaker Baldwin, Delaware; State Senator William C. Sproul, Delaware, chairman of the Senate State Committee; Representative James F. Woodward, Allegheny, chairman of the House State Committee; Auditor General-elect Charles A. Snyder, Schuylkill; State Senator T. Larry Eyre, Chester; W. Harry Baker, secretary of the Republican State Committee, and William S. Lieb, Schuylkill. Senator Penrose, of course, is also a member of the board.

Delegations of politicians from Philadelphia and Allegheny Counties went to the shore this afternoon to watch proceedings. They included the Philadelphia members of the House slate committee and Coroner Samuel C. Jamison and Max G. Leslie, of Pittsburgh. Mayor Armstrong, of Pittsburgh, is expected before the conference ends the last of the week.

Others who went to Atlantic City include Congressman Rowland, of Clearfield; Representative McCaig, of Allegheny; William C. Gallagher, of Wilkes-Barre; Thomas H. Garvin, chief clerk of the House, and Harmon M. Kephart, State Treasurer-elect.

ALLEGED DOPE FIENDS HELD

Three Men Accused of Violating Drug Act Committed for Court

A Chinese, Mark Yick, and two negroes, Charles Rollins and Walter Harris, were held under bail for court by United States Commissioner Long today in the Federal Building, charged with violating the drug act.

Yick, who was found in the basement of 919 Race street, last night, was the center, detectives say, of an opium lay-out and seemed to be under the influence of the drug. He was held under $500 bail. Rollins, 1115 Bainbridge street, was arrested on Ninth above Arch street yesterday with opium in his possession and was held under $1000 bail, while Harris, Kater street, near Twelfth, had what police believe to be heroin in his pocket when he was arrested last week and was held under $1000 bail. The arrests were made by Officers Hicks and Pachell, acting under the direction of Col. William Gray Beach.

Class of Girls Adopts Baby

APPLETON, Wis., Jan. 10.—Wishing to have a live subject to work with, girl students of the domestic science department of the Appleton High School have adopted a two-month-old baby from a poor family. The girls are kept busy feeding and dressing the baby, according to approved scientific methods.

THAW ON ROAD TO N. Y. TO SURRENDER TO POLICE

Attorney Announces Accused Millionaire Will Answer New Charges

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Jan. 10.—Harry Kendall Thaw is reported to be on his way to New York city, presumably to surrender himself to the authorities there, who have been conducting a search for him since an indictment charging him with kidnapping and whipping Frederick Gump, Jr., a Kansas City boy, in the Hotel McAlpin, was found against him there yesterday.

Stephen Stone, a local attorney, made the announcement. He said, "Thaw is now on his way to New York to answer the charges."

Stone refused to say from where Thaw is going to New York. He did declare that Thaw had not been in Pittsburgh within forty-eight hours.

Thaw was in Philadelphia Monday, when he testified in the Municipal Court in an automobile case. He discussed the murder of Mazie Colbert, the model, with newspaper men, and then disappeared.

Fred Gump, Jr., sixteen years old, a Kansas City schoolboy, made the accusations that form the basis of the charge against Thaw.

Oliver Brower has been arrested on suspicion that he was an accomplice of Thaw. He was held under $1200 bail by Magistrate Pennock at the request of the New York police. Gumpp was unable to recognize Brower as one of his assailants.

Wilson Kin Denies Tip on Peace Note

member of the Connolly brokerage firm October 13 last. Previously he said he had been engaged in the real estate business in Washington, and in that connection did no business in stocks. He said he had had no stock brokerage experience previous to his connection with the Connolly company.

Representative Campbell asked Mr. Rolling if he would tell the committee about the conversation he had with Mr. Connolly when he first talked of entering the firm.

Mr. Rolling said he had had several casual conversations with Connolly about going into the firm, the first in March, 1916.

A conversation was held in August, he said, and in October he entered the firm.

"You are the President's brother-in-law?" asked Mr. Campbell.

"Yes."

DENIES GETTING TIP

"Did you ever receive any advance information about the President's peace note—information before you saw it in the press?" asked Mr. Garrett.

"Absolutely not," said Mr. Rolling.

Rolling said his name had been dragged into the investigation just as Secretary Tumulty's had and that he thought he ought to have a public apology from Representative Wood just as Mr. Tumulty had asked.

"You will probably have to wait a long while," said Representative Chipperfield.

Representative Lenroot then pursued this line of questioning:

"Did any member of the firm of F. A. Connolly & Co. receive information?"

"No."

"Does Connolly & Co. deal in stocks for its own account?"

"No, we are only brokers."

"You deal through Hutton & Co., of New York?"

"Yes."

"Did you receive any inquiry about the note from Hutton & Co.?"

"No, I am sure not."

"Were your dealings particularly heavy on December 19 and 20?"

"I think not."

"Do you know of any one in the Government profiting by this leak?"

"No."

Mr. Rolling said he did not know the name of any member of Congress or other official who speculated in stocks and that he made no purchases himself on December 19 or 20.

"You know nothing of the so-called leak?" asked Representative Lenroot.

"No," replied Mr. Rolling. He was then excused.

The first "contradictory testimony" of the probe came when Archie Jamison, State Department reporter for the Central News, in describing how Lansing gave the newspapermen the confidential tip on the note, said:

"Secretary Lansing had said he was giving us the information because he did not want it to come back in garbled form from abroad and 'injuriously affect the market.'"

Representative Lenroot then read Secretary Lansing's testimony, to the effect that he "had not had the market in mind" when he gave the tip to, and imposed secrecy upon, the reporters.

Manager W. A. Crawford of the Washington bureau Central News of America, presented a confidential telegram sent to his New York office wherein he had revealed under permit from the State Department) the fact that a note was forthcoming.

"There was no leak on that, however," Crawford explained. The message declared the note was held for morning paper publication because the department did not want to have it affect the market.

Crawford informed the committee that the International News Service supplied news to the Dow Jones Company, a ticker concern, whereupon Representative Bennet asked that a representative of that organization be called.

PRINTERS QUIZZED

Cornelius Ford, public printer, said that although the peace note was printed in the Government Printing Office he knew nothing about it until he read it in the papers.

W. J. McAvoy, deputy public printer, explained that in "setting up" the note the copy was cut into eleven sections and that no one could tell its contents from one "take." He said the greatest secrecy was maintained, and that not more than two or three persons in the office besides himself could have seen the note in its entirety.

"I don't think there was any possibility that the leak occurred from the printing office," said Mr. McAvoy.

William Odlin, of Hearst's International News Service, said the only information about the note sent out by the Hearst service was a "cautionary message to hold the report for release."

"Is your service the Hearst service?" asked Chairman Henry.

"It is so called," Odlin replied.

Chairman Henry wanted to know who had written an article printed in Texas under an "I. N. S." slug line recently which, Henry said, was in effect that a Cabinet officer, two Senators and a high official might be involved in the leak situation. He thereupon demanded the names of all the Hearst staff here.

After having telegraphed for C. W. Barron, of the Wall Street Journal and Dow Jones Company, the committee later decided to issue a subpena for him to come here with his ticker records.

With Thomas W. Lawson's sweeping charges concerning the "leak" to Wall street still without definite substantiation, the committee entered upon what is probably the last day of the preliminary investigation. Democratic members are plainly weary with the proceedings. Republicans were forced to admit that neither Lawson nor any of the other witnesses had disclosed one definite fact.

All of the Wall street financial men, including Bernard Baruch, Charles H. Sabin and Otto H. Kahn, have reiterated before the committee categorical denials of any advance knowledge of the President's peace note, dispatched the week before Christmas, and cross-examination left the committee just where it started.

"A. Curtis," whose name was signed to a letter to Representative Wood, of Indiana, making sensational accusations against public men, still remains a mythical character. No member of the committee now belives that any such man exists.

As to Thomas W. Lawson himself, four motions have been made to cite him to the House for contempt for failing to answer the questions which might have given the committee a basis to continue its work. To date he has not given the name of even one person responsible for the alleged "leak," or who benefited financially by it.

CABINETS AGAIN FALL AND RISE IN EUROPE

Russia Has New Premier, Spanish Ministry Retained by Alfonso

LONDON, Jan. 10.

Cabinet changes and rumors of Cabinet changes have been the feature of the international political situation during the last twenty-four hours.

There has been another reorganization of the Russian Cabinet. Premier Trepoff has resigned, being succeeded by Count Golitzine. Senator Kulchitsky has been appointed Russian Minister of Public Instruction and M. Neratoff, Deputy Foreign Minister, has been appointed a member of the Russian Council of the Empire.

King Alfonso has refused to accept the resignation of the Spanish Cabinet which was handed in yesterday.

Amsterdam advices say that the Austrian Cabinet is tottering and may soon fall.

The foregoing dispatch on its face indicates a further victory for Russian Liberalism and the elements behind the recent assassination of Gregory Rasputin, the monk, who was reputed to have dominated the Russian court for more than ten years.

Prince Golitzine, the new Premier, comes of a family with a historical reputation for Liberal leaning and scholarship. Count Ignatieff, the retiring Minister of Instruction on the other hand, has notoriously reactionary antecedents. He is a son of Count Nicholas Ignatieff, who attained prominence as a prosecutor of the Jews when he was Minister of the Interior thirty years ago, and is a nephew of General Alexei Ignatieff, who was assassinated in December, 1906.

Countess Ignatieff, his widowed mother, has always been openly Germanophile and her salons are declared to have been the rendezvous of those "dark forces" which have been so often denounced in the Duma and which were centralized in Gregory Rasputin.

As for M. Trepoff, his appointment as Premier last November, ostensibly the result of an agitation in the Duma, was hailed in the European press generally as a triumph of the Russian people over bureaucracy and the forces of reaction. His subsequent inactivity, however, has given rise to the suspicion that despite his Liberal reputation, he is at heart as much a reactionary as was his father, General Trepoff, one time Governor of Petrograd, who was assassinated because of intolerable tyranny.

The family of Golitzine, better known in America as "Galitzin," has an intimate link with Pennsylvania, one member, Prince Dmitri Augustin Golitzine, a noted missionary, having been founder of the town of Loretta, in Cambria County. He was forced to leave Russia on his conversion to Catholicism. The town of Galitzin, in the same county, is named for him. The Golitzines are one of the four noblest families of Russia. They were once offered the throne of Russia, and it is by grace of their refusal that the Romanoffs rule Russia today.

SUES TO PROBE STOCK VALUE

Jersey City Man Seeks to Know Business of Screw Company—Result of "Leak"

TRENTON, N. J., Jan. 10.—Declaring that the business of the Standard Screw Company, a $5,000,000 corporation, is dependent upon munitions contracts and susceptible to fluctuations through peace proposals, George W. Shera, a Jersey City stockholder in the concern, today applied to the Supreme Court for an order to examine the company's books to ascertain just how much of the company's business is dependent upon munition contracts and what his stock is really worth.

Shera alleges that the stock, which was worth $100 par, rose rapidly after war contracts were received, and last November was quoted at $503. The "leak," it is alleged, caused a drop to $350. The Court will hear the case January 18.

BOYS' FLORIDA JAUNT ENDS AT ATLANTIC CITY

Two Runaways, Young and Bold, Decide Home Is the Best Place

If you were a little boy—a regular one, with freckles and exactly twelve bestowed years to your credit—and last Monday afternoon you slipped up on your long dozing uncle, slipping up having absolutely nothing to do with a certain subject making its serene way toward blackboard regions, and if the teacher cruelly sent you home with a note, what would you do? If into the path of your homeward-bound misery, Florida, a place far, far away, stretched forth a beckoning hand, what would you do?

Probably exactly as did the small boy who measures up to these particular specifications, Morris Diegman, of 6332 Germantown avenue, and a pupil of the Germantown Combined Boys' School. He looked up his one best pal, Harry Wexler, of 6321 Germantown avenue, and asked him "to run and run." At the same time he offered to pay complete expenses for the trip. Accordingly embarkment was made.

With the sky and Florida the limit on expenses, the tourists made a stopover at Haddonfield, N. J., and right there and there that portion of a little boy that usually lasts in an emergency to live up to standards of being twelve years old, yearned for "mother." Morris followed up the yearnings with a timid note home telling of the proposed journey and gently hinting that the globe-trotters might be reached at their next address, which was to be Atlantic City at the home of Harry Wexler's uncle.

By this time the parents of the boys were thoroughly frightened and had reported the case to the police. Upon receipt of the "forwarding address" late yesterday Mr. and Mrs. Diegman lost no time in making connections in Atlantic City with the travelers.

At present two chastened and hearth-loving little boys are making amends and resolutions to postpone their explorations until a decidedly later date. "Morris likes to play in school," was Mrs. Diegman's explanation.

STOKOWSKI TO CUT DOWN SEASON'S WORK

Increased Burden to Be Reduced by Ten Concerts, Which Thaddeus Rich Will Conduct

In order to relieve some of the burden of Leopold Stokowski, conductor of the Philadelphia Orchestra, to such an extent that his work next season will not be curtailed, the management today announced that Mr. Stokowski would not conduct ten of the remaining concerts of this season.

This news was first made known at the annual concert held in the Stetson Auditorium last night for the benefit of the Stetson Hospital by Arthur Judson, manager of the orchestra.

In confirming it today Mr. Judson said that Mr. Stokowski's physician had decided it would be better if the leader had less work for the time being. This would mean, Mr. Judson explained, that ten concerts on the subscription series would be conducted by Thaddeus Rich, the concertmaster. If it is found that Mr. Stokowski only is desired as conductor for some further concerts, ten concerts will be abandoned.

Mr. Stokowski has been working more strenuously than ever of late, on account of the increased number of Philadelphia Orchestra concerts and the training of the several choruses which are to participate in the coming performance of Bach's Passion music at the end of the season.

The orchestra has yet to play about a dozen more of concerts remaining in the Friday afternoon and Saturday evening series, in the regular series of twenty-five programs, the extra Bach St. Matthew Passion concert with great chorus and soloists, several of the Lincoln School children's concerts, three of the Sunday free concerts at the Metropolitan Opera House and several out-of-town programs. Mr. Stokowski, it is understood, will conduct the children's concert in which he has taken a great personal interest. To Mr. Rich will fall outstanding and some other supplementary programs. Mr. Rich this season was advanced to the rank of assistant conductor. His work as such has won him a large following and some public favor with the orchestra's clientele outside Philadelphia.

ACCUSED OF STEALING, ENDS HIS LIFE IN CAR

Camden Man Commits Suicide After Uncle Upbraids Him—Wife Near Collapse

Charged with the alleged theft of money, according to the police, caused Charles Toner, of 215 Howell street, Camden, to commit suicide by shooting himself through the head with a revolver in a Frankford trolley car today. Toner fired while the car was in the barn at Frankford avenue and Bridge street. A notebook in his pocket identified him.

Toner lived with his uncle, Charles Toner. They quarreled yesterday, according to the police, over the disappearance of a sum of money, and Toner's uncle, it is said, accused him of taking it. Shortly after this quarrel Toner came to this city.

Toner's wife, who is on the verge of collapse as a result of her husband's death, denied his guilt.

BODY OF MAN FOUND ON CHESTER RIVER BANK

Police Believe He Was Robbed and Thrown Overboard by His Murderers

CHESTER, Pa., Jan. 10.—Buried in ice and mud, the body of a man was found this morning on the bank of Chester River near the Deshong Memorial Park. Mystery surrounds the case, on which the police are working. A severe gash on the forehead strengthens a theory that the man was a victim of robbery and then thrown overboard.

A Baldwin Locomotive Works check, bearing the numerals 272378 and an identification card, with the name Zack Elick, were found on the body. Nothing else of value was found in his clothing.

The body had evidently been in the water for several days. It is at the morgue of Deputy Coroner White, awaiting identification.

"Buffalo Bill," Noted Scout, Dies

express" rider, but soon after joined the Seventh Kansas Cavalry, in which he served through the Civil War until he was mustered out in 1865.

He earned his title of "Buffalo Bill" in 1867, when the Kansas Pacific Railroad was under construction by killing buffaloes to supply the workmen with food.

In 1872 he was elected to the Nebraska Legislature. When the Indian wars broke out in 1876 he offered his services to the Government as a scout. In the battle of Indian Creek, he rode out in front of the battle lines and met the Cheyenne chief, Yellow Hand, who, at the head of his braves, had taunted Cody to a duel with hunting knives. Cody killed the chief after a hand-to-hand combat which was not interfered with either by the Indians or Cody's followers.

GAINS RANK OF COLONEL

For his services during the Indian wars Cody was made chief of scouts, with the rank of colonel, and remained in the service of the Government until the Indian troubles were finally settled.

Following his discharge from the army he came East and was enticed on the stage by offers from various enterprising theatrical managers. His early ventures for the most part were failures, and he returned to Wyoming.

In 1883 he came East with the first Wild West Show ever seen in this country. His success was almost instantaneous, and his show grew in size yearly.

TRIUMPHANT WORLD TOUR

He made a tour of the world with his aggregation of rough riders and Indians, and was decorated by almost every monarch in Europe. While in Russia he conceived the idea of bringing back to America a band of Ural Cossacks, and the success of this venture induced him to add Arabs, Singalese, Japanese, South American gauchos and representatives of almost every nation in the world to his show.

In 1905 he formed a partnership with Major Gordon B. Lillie ("Pawnee Bill"), which proved the beginning of his financial downfall. In 1914 the show went into the hands of a receiver and Cody announced himself "dead broke."

Numerous friends came to his rescue, and late in the spring of 1914 H. H. Tammen, of Denver, who owned the controlling interest in the Sells-Floto Circus, put Cody at the head of that enterprise, and at the age of sixty-eight the venerable frontiersman again made his bow to crowded grandstands.

In 1916 the Miller Brothers, owners of the 101 Ranch, at Bliss, Okla., offered Cody an interest in their Wild West Show, and he finished out the circus season with them.

In November, 1916, he showed signs of fast failing health and returned to his home at Cody, Wyo., where, on December 18, he was reported seriously ill.

He was married in 1866 to Louisa Frederici and has no children living.

TERROR OF "BAD MEN"

Although Cody was an expert shot with all firearms, he was not one of the "bad man" type prevalent during the settlement of the West. He was never known to kill a white man in any sort of a "gun fight." His physical qualities made him feared among the riff-raff o the frontier. He was often known to take a gun away from a so-called "bad man" and administer to the offender a terrific beating.

The Indians made him a tribal member on many occasions, and he spoke many of the native dialects. He represented the redmen in many important Government deals and was considered one of the foremost champions of their rights.

MOTORISTS HELD AS THIEVES

Three Men Accused of Stealing Jewels in Germantown

Three men, said by the police to have driven automobiles and figured in several Germantown hold-ups and thefts, were held in $1000 bail each for court by Magistrate Hogue in the Third street and Fairmount avenue station.

The prisoners were George Grover, 1218 Luzerne street; Joseph Carty, 2439 West Lehigh avenue, and John Rudy, 3443 North Third street. They were arrested last Monday after the theft of the automobile of Eugene MacAleer, 374 Gowen avenue. The automobile was found outside a saloon.

Elmer Morrison, 482 East Penn street, and Walter Breuckner, of 1826 Sedgley avenue, according to the police, identified jewelry and wearing apparel worn by the prisoners as having been taken from them in recent hold-ups.

COAL BOOST PLANS MADE IN ADVANCE

Member of Retail Association Tells of Informal Discussions

NOT 'OFFICIALLY' ORDERED

U. S. Attorney Kane Invites Facts on Which to Base Prosecutions

The last rise in the price of coal was discussed informally beforehand by members of the Philadelphia Retail Coal Men's Association, according to William Nushickel, a coal dealer, at Twenty-fifth and Sedgley avenue, and a member of the association.

This admission was made today by Nushickel, but he denied that the association had taken any official action as a body to bring about the 25 cents per ton increase on coal, which was made by nearly all coal dealers, numbering between 200 and 300, in December of last year.

The admission of Mr. Nushickel came right on the heels of a statement issued by Francis Fisher Kane, United States District Attorney, that if any indication of conspiracy could be found among coal men to raise the price of coal, he would immediately take steps to subpena everybody who might be able to throw any light on the matter.

When questioned today as to whether coal men had got together to raise the price of coal, Mr. Nushickel said:

"At none of the meetings of the Philadelphia Coal Men's Association I attended was any official action taken to boost the price of coal.

"It is true, however, that we got together in little groups of five or six each and discussed the increased cost of conducting the coal business.

"Then," continued Mr. Nushickel, "some one would say, 'Well, I recommend that we advance the price to meet the cost,' and in this manner the matter of price increase became known among the association's membership. Of course, the association could not officially raise the price of coal because it would not have been legal."

"NEIGHBORLY" TALKS

"There are twenty-two coal dealers in the vicinity of Twenty-fifth street and Sedgley avenue, and we have gotten together as neighbors several times and talked over the situation. The consensus of opinion at these meetings has been that there should be an advance to meet the costs. At the present time we are paying forty cents a ton more for pea coal and twenty-five cents a ton for prepared sizes, including nut, stove and egg, and then, too, the drivers, who formerly got $10.50 a week, are now getting from $14 to $16 a week.

When asked if all the coal dealers had raised the price of coal at the same time, the coal dealer replied:

"All but a few who deal with the Reading Coal and Iron Company."

U. S. ATTORNEY AFTER FACTS

The invitation for independent dealers or other interested persons to submit evidence showing that there is a conspiracy to raise the price of coal was issued today by United States District Attorney Kane.

The Federal Grand Jury does not convene until next March, but Mr. Kane said he was prepared to call a special session of that body if he could obtain sufficient evidence to warrant such action.

"The District Attorney's office," said Mr. Kane, "is in a very receptive mood regarding the coal situation in Philadelphia. I am particularly interested in the latest increase in price by Philadelphia retail coal dealers. I invite independent dealers, dealers' associations and all others who may have any evidence bearing on the latest boost in price. I could call a special session of the Federal Grand Jury if the said evidence warranted such a move. The Government has had the coal situation under consideration for some time. While I am not at liberty to disclose the facts we have gleaned, I can say that a searching investigation is being made by the Department of Justice in this city. I myself have attended one conference in New York. We are interested in the interstate commerce features as well as in the advance in price in Philadelphia."
