HART STILL TOTING HIS PHOTOPLAY GUN

Actor Once More a "Bad Man" in Capital Film; "The Scarlet Letter" Artistic

By the Photoplay Editor

ARCADIA—"The Gun Fighter," Kay-Bee-Triangle, with William S. Hart and Marjorie Wilson. Story by Monte M. Katterjohn. Directed by Mr. Hart. Photographed by Joe August.

Photoplaygoers who care for the sort of thing that Mr. Hart does better than any one else in the film world will like this picture immensely, for in it all his familiar tricks and mannerisms are featured with skill and certainty. Besides, the story is nicely planned and expertly tailored to the measurement of the star. The fact that we have often seen the Western player roll a cigarette with one hand, strike a match with his fingernail and ride a horse in dare-devil fashion won't detract from the pleasure of the whole. The actor is again a "bad man," quick on the trigger and with a long list of victims of his gun. His conscience is awakened through his dawning love for a girl; that doesn't sound very promising, but wait until you see the vivid impersonations, the remarkable "types," the beauty of the scenery and charming Miss Wilson and you will change your mind. Of a piece with the general excellence of the production is the beautiful photography of Joe August, and a word or two of approval must again be awarded the clever George Stone for his "kid stuff," as the brother of the heroine. The high light of the film is the burning of a desert-rim town, but there are other fine moments, not so theatrical, but just as interesting.

VICTORIA—"The Scarlet Letter," Fox, with Stuart Holmes and Mary Martin. Story adapted by Carl Harbaugh from Hawthorne's novel. Directed by Mr. Harbaugh. Photographed by Georges Benoit.

Here's a photoplay that reflects pictorial credit on the producer. The spirit of bleak Puritanism has been caught with admirable fidelity, and from the viewpoint of putting-in-motion (which Vachel Lindsay declares to be essential in the cinema), the feature well deserves prominence. Opening with views of the town square in the snowy New England village, its pillory standing out with cruel sharpness against the background, the story proceeds with unusual observance of the original tale through the tragic mazes of Hester's life and that of the sinning minister. The acting is hardly as fine as the settings and photography, but, while melodramatic, it is not offensively so. Mary Martin's Hester is a sincere piece of work, and Stuart Holmes, defying precedent, displays his better qualities as the Rev. Arthur Dimmesdale. Some of the trick effects are especially adroit, among them the symbolical change of the mother's tear, on her baby's cheek, to a pearl, from which jewel the child takes her name. All in all, a photoplay likely to appeal to a wide class of spectators.

Since some misconstruction has been placed on the remark in these columns that "The Barrier," which is coming to the Chestnut Street Opera House, is a Lubin production, the editor takes pleasure in quoting the management of the theatre to the effect that the film is controlled and presented by the Rex Beach Pictures Company, of which the author is the prime factor, and in which B. B. Hampton is also interested. The concern plans to make elaborate versions of all the Beach books that have not already been dramatized. "The Barrier" was made after the Lubin Company ceased work.

Freight Tie-up May Halt Industry

road representatives and Government agents.

United States military authorities here are making no effort to hide their anxiety over the situation. It is admitted that if the nation were plunged into war the freight congestion would not only hamper the movement of troops and supplies, but this traffic would serve to increase the crisis to the point of a complete tie-up of the larger transfer points.

FLOUR FAMINE IN EAST PREDICTED IN ST. PAUL

ST. PAUL, Minn., Feb. 16.—If present embargoes on wheat shipments and the pronounced car shortage continue much longer a flour famine in the East will be the inevitable result. That prediction was made by the Northwestern Miller.

The publication points out that last week's output of flour was 221,640 barrels, 2555 barrels below the previous week and 133,755 barrels less than the same week in 1916.

The car shortage has created in Minnesota a situation which shippers declare is "very serious, although not yet alarming." That statement was confirmed by Ira B. Mills, State railroad and warehouse commissioner.

Flour mills have not been running full capacity for several weeks and millers are protesting vigorously against the car shortage.

That 5000 empty cars were being held in Twin City yards, ostensibly "in bad order" but primarily to be put into service for transportation of coal in case of a shortage, was the assertion of G. G. Riegger, of the Gould Grain Company, of Minneapolis. Other mill officials joined in the same complaint. Traffic officials of the Omaha line admitted this, but declared that the situation justified it.

"Once a car is loaded and sent east it passes into the great sea of doubt. Perhaps you may never see it again—at least for months," one official said.

KANSAS CITY TO SHIP TO WEST COAST PORTS

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Feb. 16.—The Middle West is facing the worst freight tie-up and car shortage in its history. The five western stock markets received only two-thirds as many hogs in the last twenty-four hours as were received a week ago. The price was not materially affected.

"So far the freight congestion has made little difference in prices, either up or down," one commission man said today. "I doubt if there will be a material difference. We fear no serious results. The trouble in the West can easily be alleviated by Pacific coast shipments."

Wholesale embargoes are announced here by the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe, the Union Pacific and the St. Louis and San Francisco Railroads. The Texas and Pacific Railroad has placed an embargo against shipments east of the Illinois State line, while the Missouri, Kansas and Texas announced an embargo against export grain to Galveston. This latter step, it was explained, would stop almost the entire export grain trade from Gulf ports.

CAR SCHEME MAY EASE FOOD FAMINE IN EAST

NEW YORK, Feb. 16.—Relief from the danger of food shortage in New York was hoped for today in steps taken to rush cars west in order to carry supplies to New York. A serious shortage of flour and wheat in the East probably will be relieved by promises here to turn in an empty for every loaded car sent from the West.

Several railroads have agreed to begin immediately sending solid trains of empty cars west and south, these trains to have the right of way over all others, except passengers.

Embargoes will stand until munitions and other supplies are unloaded from cars in New Jersey and New York terminals for shipment to Europe.

FREIGHT FROM FAR WEST HALTED BY EMBARGOES

DENVER, Col., Feb. 16.—Further restrictions, amounting virtually to embargo on the acceptance of freight destined to points east, have been placed by the Burlington, Rock Island and Santa Fe Railroads at shipping points in this territory.

The three roads are capable of handling freight as far east as the Missouri River, so far as moving and terminal facilities are concerned, but have been compelled to put in restrictive orders because of the refusal of the lines east of the Missouri River to accept freight.

PITTSBURGH SUFFERING FOOD AND FUEL SHORTAGE

Prices Shooting Upward on Account of Freight Blockade, Due to Lack of Cars

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Feb. 16.—Shortage of foodstuffs, fuel and fodder was pinching Pittsburgh today.

Many cars of canned goods, fruits and live stock consigned to the city were on the railroads while prices continued to shoot skyward. Many of the cars have been en route for weeks, particularly those from the West.

The coal shortage has brought about a serious situation. Mayor Armstrong succeeded in getting four cars of coal through to keep North Side pumping station open, but the water is far below normal in all city reservoirs.

Only thirty-seven cars of hay and grain have been received in the last twenty-four hours, as against ordinary receipt of more than 180 cars in the same length of time. Nearly 300 cars of hay and grain for Pittsburgh buyers are en route.
