Eyeless Fish that live In Hot Water.

A most singular discovery was recently made in the Savage mine. This is the finding of living fish in the water now flooding both the Savage and Hale and Norcross mines. The fish found were five in number, and were blasted up the incline in the large iron hoisting tank and dumped into the pump tank at the bottom of the vertical shaft. The fishes are only about three or four inches in length. They are blood red in color.

The temperature of the water in which they are found is 128 degrees Fahrenheit—almost scalding hot. When the fish were taken out of the hot water in which they were found, and placed in a bucket of cold water, for the purpose of being brought to the surface, they died almost instantly. The cold water at once chilled their life blood.

In appearance the subterranean members of the finney tribs somewhat resemble gold fish. They seem lively and sportive enough while in their native hot water, notwithstanding the fact that they have no eyes or even the rudiments of eyes. The water by which the mines are flooded broke in at a depth of 2,200 feet in a drift that was being pushed to the northward in the Savage. It rose in the mine—also in the Hale and Norcross the two mines being connected—to the height of 400 feet; that is, up to the $1,800 foot level. This would seem to prove that a great subterranean reservior or lake has been tapped, and from this lake doubtless came the fish hoisted from the mine.

Eyeless fishes are frequently found in the lakes of large caves, but we have never before heard of their existence in either surface or subterranean water the temperature of which was so high as in the water in these mines. The lower workings of the Savage mine are far below the bed of the Carson river, below the bottom of the Washoe lake—below any water running or standing anywhere within a distance of ten miles of the mine.—Territorial Enterprise.

INFLUENCE OF GREENBACKS.—He looked like a man who might have had fifteen cents last fall, but who had used the last of it weeks ago. When he sat down in the resturant the waiters paid no heed to him, and he rapped several times before a colored man slid that way.

"I want fried oysters," said the man as he looked over the bill of fare.

"Dey is just out, fried oysters is," replied the waiter.

"Bring me a chicken, then."

"Dere isn't a chicken in de place."

"Got any venision?" inquire the man.

"Not an inch sah."

"Any ham and egg?"

"No, sah."

"See here," said the man getting vexed, "I want a square meal. I've got the ducats right here, and I can pay for my dinner and buy your old cookshop besides."

He lifted a big roll of greenbacks out of his pocked, shook it at the darkey and continued:—

"Have you got a chicken?"

"Yes, sah, I guess so, I have de biggest kind o' belief dat since we commenced to talk a chicken has blown right into de kettle an' boots cooked. And now about that venison and dose fried oysters—dey has also arrived."

THE DEATH OF THE CAPTIVE GORILLA.—The only captive gorilla in existence recently died in the Zoological Gardens, in Dresden. The animal, a female, was long supposed to be a chimpanzee, and it was only lately that, to the surprise of all naturalists, her gorilla characteristics, were recognized. The story of the death scene of this almost human monkey is a remarkable one, since it goes to show that the animal was the possessor of feelings hitherto deemed absent among the brutes. Says a writer in the London Echo: "As director Schropf (the director of the gardens) leaned over his favorite, the ape drew him towards her, placed her arms around the neck of her kind friend, and looked at him for some time with clear and tranquil eyes; she then kissed him three times, with short intervals between each salute, motioned to be laid on her couch, gave her hand so Schopf!—as though bidding farewell to a companion of many happy years—and slept never to wake again.',

WORSE THAN KILLED.—A private in one of the Irish regiments engaged in the dreadful battle of Salamanca, cried out during the hottest part of the action.

'Oh, murdher, murdher! I'm kilt interely!'

'Are you wounded?' inquired an officer near him.

'Wounded, is it, your honor?' replied the gallant Emeralder, 'be jabbers' I'm worse than killed out and out; wasn't I waiting for the last quarter of an hour for a pull at Jem Murphy's pipe, and there now it's shot out of his mouth.'

A STRANGE INCIDENT.—The wife of Mr. Joseph Whisenhunt, of Burke county, N. C., Gave birth to twins the last night of the old year—one was born ten minutes before 12 o' clock and the other ten minutes after 12. So one was born on Friday and the other on Saturday, one in 1875 and the other in 1876. Their birthday is not in the same year, yet they are twins. We doubt if such a thing ever occurred before in the history of the world. Another noticeable circumstance is that one was a boy and the other a girl; the boy was born in the old year and the girl in this—leap year.
