DECIDE THIS WEEK ON PRICE OF WHEAT

Gore Figures 55 Cents Higher Than That of President

MUCH GRAIN IS HELD

Indications Point to Success of Supporters of the Administration

Washington, April 15.

The House of Representatives will decide this week whether the American people shall pay more for their bread in order to give the wheat growers of the nation a higher price than President Wilson believes fair and just.

The House conferees on the agricultural appropriation bill, which carried the Gore amendment providing a minimum price of $2.50 a bushel for No. 2 wheat at local markets, have disagreed to the amendment and Chairman Lever will bring the issue to a vote in the House tomorrow or Tuesday.

The Gore price is about fifty-five cents a bushel higher than the President's price of $2.20 for No. 1 wheat at Chicago, and the Administration is opposed unqualifiedly to the higher figures.

Although there were indications two weeks ago that the House would pass the Gore amendment, the manner in which the Administration leaders in the House have handled the problem indicates its defeat at this time.

Senator Gore and other supporters of the higher price contended that it was necessary to stimulate production this spring. Their argument cannot be applied in the House. Without a guarantee of a higher price the farmers of the nation have planted the largest acreage in spring wheat in history. About 95 per cent of this planting already has been done, so that the contention that a higher price would mean a record crop does not hold. In addition, the farmers' advisory commission, in its recent report to Secretary of Agriculture Houston, declared the President's price to be a fair one and voted against the Gore prices.

By delaying the vote in the House the Administration has accomplished its purposes far more effectively, it is held, than by a presidential veto of the measure two weeks ago. It is not doubted that the Gore amendment will receive a large vote, as there are numerous members who would vote for such a proposal in their interest in the farmer vote.

The chief effect of the agitation centering about the Gore amendment, it is pointed out, has been the withholding of wheat from the markets. The latest crop report of the Department of Agriculture showed that approximately 22,000,000 bushels of wheat were being held on the farms and in the country mills and elevators. The normal holdings for this period are about 40,000,000 bushels, based on larger winter wheat crops than were harvested this year.

DANGER ITALY MAY BE ANOTHER RUSSIA

U. S. Aviator Declares Prompt Aid Only Will Save That Country

Hartford, Conn., April 15.

Arthur A. Bruce, of 53 Chestnut street, has received from William Malcolm, a son of Thomas Malcolm, now in aviation in an Italian sector, a letter, in which Malcolm says Italy needs immediate aid to save that country from having the same experience as Russia. The letter shows no evidence of censoring. Parts of the letter follow:

"Have returned from a three-day visit to Rome and nearby historic spots. Have heard of the cold spell back there. * * * Here it is not bad, but not quite comfortable. In Rome it was grand. Up in the 'plane it is terribly cold.

"Am sorry you can't get in, but if you should happen to get your training in the United States. Here the training is slow. I should have finished two months ago and be a lieutenant now. But instead have yet to finish my second lesson. * * *

"Have been fortunate in getting quite a bit of mail, which does an awful lot toward breaking the monotony.

"The camp is good enough. We have a Y. M. C. A. and a moving-picture show. Must say that I am anxious to finish my training so that I may get a Hun. We are anxious to get every darn one of them. I'll do all I can to end the war in our favor.

"We've had three night raid warnings this week, but they have not touched us yet, although I'll not be surprised if they do soon. Two were killed Thursday night while up scouting in a fighter. That makes five in all now. * * * I hate to appear a pessimist, but some tall fighting must be done to end the war this year. Old Germany is plugging away and hammering holes everywhere but in the west, and of course will never get through there. This country here is going fast, and unless England and the United States step in here, it will soon be too late. This place is going to be like Russia.

"There is one advantage. The war will be fought on one front and that means concentration of all forces of both sides right in the west. From there it will be won, but not for a long while yet.

"But we all hope for the end very soon, for all are anxious to see home once more. If I ever go to another war I'll be able to go prepared, knowing a lot more of the game.

"Since I left home I've neither smoked, drank nor gambled. I have taken on thirty pounds and am feeling fine. Never felt better in my life. * * * Am anxious to get letters, so write whenever you can. My hand is so cold I can hardly hold the pen."

POTTSTOWN CATHOLICS DEDICATE SERVICE FLAG

Pottstown, Pa., April 15.—The presence of more than sixty enlisted men from the Philadelphia Navy Yard and a number from the ambulance corps at Allentown was a feature of a military high mass at St. Aloysius's Catholic Church Sunday. It was conducted by the Rev. William A. Wachter, the rector. The Rev. Henry C. Schuyler, vice rector of the Boys' Catholic High School, Philadelphia, a native of this town, delivered the sermon.

Preceding the military mass a service flag for forty-three members of the parish now in the service of their country was dedicated in St. Aloysius's parochial school hall. The address was made by Edward A. Kelly, a Philadelphia attorney.

Several hundred members of the order from various Schuylkill Valley towns attended the conferring of the third degree on 100 members of the Knights of Columbus. Among the prominent visitors were Supreme Knight James J. Flaherty, of Philadelphia; State Deputy J. J. McDonough, of Reading, and District Deputy J. J. Gorman, of Conshohocken.

ENIGMA OF LOSS OF THE CYCLOPS NOT YET SOLVED BY OFFICIALS

manganese from South America, and, although it had been well known in Washington that every available vessel was being used in the cargo service, the announcement regarding the Cyclops was the first official statement of the use of naval vessels as cargo carriers. The collier presumably picked up Consul General Gottschalk at Rio Janeiro, after taking on her cargo, and she was attempting to make an Atlantic port, after which she would have been sent for repairs to her engine. Mr. Gottschalk was returning to the United States from Brazil on leave of absence. The fact that he was long overdue led to several inquiries being made at the State Department within the last two weeks relative to the probable date of his arrival here.

It was thought here that announcement of the disappearance of the Cyclops was made by the Navy Department following a report made to Assistant Secretary of the Navy Roosevelt, the acting head of the Department in the absence of Secretary Daniels by Rear Admiral Mayo, commander of the Atlantic fleet. Admiral Mayo arrived in Washington Saturday, but officials of the department held there was no special significance in his visit at this time, as he reports at the department frequently.

The Cyclops was commanded by Lieutenant Commander G. W. Worley United States naval reserve force, whose next of kin was given by the Navy Department as Mrs. Selma W. Worley, of 523 Pennsylvania avenue, Norfolk, Va.

The collier was built at Philadelphia in the yards of William Cramp & Sons. Her keel was laid on June 2, 1909. She was launched on May 7, 1910, and commissioned November 7, 1910. The Cyclops cost $923,000. Her total displacement was 19,360 tons. Her other measurements were: Length over all, 542 feet; beam, 65 feet; mean draught, loaded, 27 feet 8 inches.

Officers of Cyclops

Officers attached to the Cyclops included the following:

Worley, G. W., lieutenant commander, Norfolk, Va.

Forbes, Harvey P., lieutenant, Port Huron, Mich.

Fingerton, Louis J., lieutenant, Portsmouth, N. H.

Schonsof, H., ensign, Baltimore, Md.

Cann, J. J., ensign, Fairview, Col.

Holmes, Charles J., boatswain, Baltimore, Md.

CALLED CYCLOPS WONDER

Germans Marveled at Big Ship on Maiden Voyage to Kiel

New York, April 15.—The Cyclops was one of the big coal-carrying naval auxiliaries, designed to feet first-line fighting vessels at sea, in fact, while both were under way, by the use of traveling booms from her armike booms. She accompanied battleships several times to European waters.

On a trip to Kiel a year after she was built she was voted a wonder by German naval critics.

She frequently has taken marines to Cuba and other places. During the American occupation of Vera Cruz, in April, 1914, Admiral Mayo placed 500 refugees aboard her and sent her to Galveston with them. In December of that year she acted as the Christmas ship for the American sailors in Mexican waters, carrying presents to them from Norfolk.

During a blow in Narragansett Bay, in May, 1915, while she was coaling the battleship Rhode Island, they drifted down on the battleship Virginia. Several plates were started in the Cyclops and for a time it was thought she might sink. One of her holds was partly filled with water, but her powerful pumps saved her.

FRIENDSHIP A LA GERMAN

How Teuton Soldier Returned Kindness of an Old Acquaintance

John Talntor Foote has a wonderful story in the American Magazine, called "Otto." Otto and the soldier who tells the story used to be friends. The American attacks a trench and finds Otto in it. The end of the story is:

"'Otto!' I says, an' all but dropped my rifle.

"He was half layin', half sittin' against the trench wall. Then his eyes of his was big an' round like a child that's seein' somethin' new an' strange. He blinked when I said his name, but never spoke.

"'"Otto," I says again, "don't you know me? I'm Bill Stigers! Don't you know me?"

"'"Ya," he says. "I know you."

"'"Listen," I says. "We got to have a talk. I'll see you later. We'll have a talk about old times—eh, Otto?"

"'"Ya," says Otto.

"'"Well, look-a-here!" I says. "They're trompin' on your sore leg where you're a-layin'. I'll lift you up on the fire step, here, out of the way, ah' you'll rest more easy."

"I laid down my rifle an' stooped over to get a-holt of him, an'——Here, I'll show you.'

"Bill turned to me and lifted the patch from his eye, or rather from his eye socket—for the eye and part of the lid were gone.

"I gave a shocked exclamation.

"Bill replaced the patch. 'Otto had got a-holt of a trench knife, somehow, an' I hadn't noticed it,' he said."

VAN SCIVER

This Store is the Home of the Finer Kind of Furniture

ALL over the United States the name "Van Sciver" is the recognized synonym for good furniture. It has always been our aim to preserve and constantly re-create only the traditionally good and beautiful in furniture and to accept only such modern interpretations as were justified by changing requirements and in accordance with the highest precepts of art-craftsmanship. With the easing up of the freight embargo our great furniture galleries are again filled to repletion with the most exquisite examples of modern workmanship and so enormous is our stock both in point of quantity and variety that we speak conservatively when we say that in no other store — perhaps in no other half-dozen stores combined—could you see its equal.

The new spring lines of drapery materials, curtains, portieres, etc., are now on exhibition, and we call your special attention to our very complete display of Cretonnes. These are in an unusually wide range of colorings and patterns suitable for curtains, draperies, slip-covers and couch cushions. Price per yard, beginning at 20c.

COUCH HAMMOCKS—With adjustable upholstered back, strong steel frames with galvanized fabric springs covered in gray or khaki and duck, with the new cravenette finish; including suspension chains, price $19.50. There are many more to select from with prices beginning at $9.75.

AWNINGS—We strongly urge you to place your orders for awnings now so as to avoid the possible delays occasioned by the mid-season rush.

Telephone or write for estimates, for you will find our prices unusually low considering the high grade fabrics we use.
