WOULD OSTRACIZE BRITISH SLACKERS

Many of Them Evaded Draft by Obtaining Work in Munition Plants

WILL BE TRACED DOWN

Small Percentage of King's Subjects Here Offered for Enlistment

Denouncing British subjects of military age who have taken refuge in munition plants to avoid the draft, Lieutenant J. D. Newsom and Lieutenant W. A. Ross, members of the British recruiting mission, Sixteenth and Chestnut streets, have started a vigorous campaign to have these persons, whom they say are not even ashamed to be called slackers, ostracized by their countrymen and fellow workmen.

There are 10,000 British subjects in Philadelphia alone, according to Lieutenant Newsom. Three thousand of them have applied for enlistment since the mission was established here last July, he said.

"The agreement of Great Britain and the United States to draft each other's subjects within their jurisdiction will help but little," Lieutenant Newsom said. "We figure a British subject who enlists or is drafted into the American army is a man lost, because he is just taking the place of some American who would be drafted to fill that place, whereas, if he were to enlist in the British or Canadian army, it would be one more man, because it would mean that another American would be needed to fill up a quota.

Men Without Shame

"It does no good to call these men slackers. They have long since reached that stage where they are not ashamed of that term. But the worst is yet to come for these fellows. They must certainly come in for bitter criticism when the war is over and the boys come back home and ask, 'Why weren't you there?'

"We are inaugurating a campaign to have persons come in and tell us where there is a British subject of military age who is hiding from the draft. These fellows who have taken refuge in American munition plants, despite the fact that they are unskilled, are the men we want to get. We want their names and addresses, and we will make it warm for them unless they answer the call of their country."

Lieutenant Newsom stated that circular letters have been sent to every known British subject of military age in this section, appealing to their patriotism, in hopes that it may influence them to enlist. A copy of the letter follows:

"Dear Sir—During the last few weeks, no doubt, you have read in your newspaper of the battle raging at present on the western front. You know that the armies of Great Britain, facing tremendous odds, are stemming the tide, are holding their own. Our volunteer army is fighting with the same dogged courage, the same spirit as our first expeditionary force did in the days of Mons and the Marne.

Need Is Urgent

"The need for men is urgent. If we are to fill the gaps, if we are to keep our promise to our Allies, we must keep our ranks at full strength. You are British; can you hold back at this time, when your fellow-countrymen, on the battlefields of France are looking for you as they have a right to do—to come over and help? What will they think of you here on the other side if, after the war, it is said that you preferred to live in comfort, making money, safe behind a living wall, rather than put your shoulder to the wheel in the fight for world freedom?

"The draft convention is being rewritten, being made more drastic. When it is signed you will be drafted into the army if you have not yet volunteered with the British or Canadian expeditionary forces.

"Now is your time. Give the matter your immediate consideration and report here without delay for medical examination and enlistment. If you live out of town, write to us and we will send you transportation to come to this office, where we will be only too glad to give any information you may require.

"Your mother country calls, she needs you.

"British and Canadian Recruiting Mission, W. D. Powell, captain."

HANCOCK OFFICERS HAVE RETURNED FROM SCHOOL

Keystone Division Has Its Full Quota of Colonels for Friday's Parade

Augusta, Ga., April 25.—The Keystone division again has its full quota of colonels. With the return yesterday of Colonels Hamilton D. Turner and William S. McKee, commanders of the 109th and 107th Field Artillery regiments respectively, the movement of Hancock officers from the western school was completed.

Colonel George E. Kemp, of the 110th; Colonel E. C. Shannon, of the 111th; Colonel George C. Rickards, of the 112th; Colonel Millard Brown, of the 109th; Colonel Asher Miner, of the 107th Field Artillery; Colonel Snyder, of the 103d Engineers, and Colonel Maurice E. Finnery, of the headquarters train and military police, have, in addition to the two colonels, just returned, passed the last three months at the school for officers at Fort Sam Houston and the artillery school of fire at Fort Sill, Okla.

In the Memorial Day parade here Friday afternoon the artillery brigade, headed by Brigadier General William G. Price will appear for the first time in many months with its full quota of officers. The artillery is now recruited up to war strength and it is expected to make the most impressive appearance of its kind ever witnessed here. The 108th Regiment will appear in the parade with complete motor equipment. The 107th and 108th Regiments are now being motorized with automobiles given the commanders by wealthy citizens of Pennsylvania.

WANTS FIRST WIFE BACK

Asks Court to Annul Marriage to Second After 35 Years

Wilkes-Barre, April 25.—Married thirty-five years to his second wife, Edward Parsons, seventy years old, of West Wyoming borough, has petitioned the court to annul the bond, giving as his reason the discovery that his first wife still lives. Parsons was married in 1879 to Sarah Gordon. Two years later she disappeared, it is alleged, and circumstances made it appear she was dead. The second ceremony was performed in 1883.

Before the court Parsons testified that his first wife has been found, and that in order to renew his bonds with her it is necessary that annulment of the second marriage be awarded.

River Bridge Contract Awarded

Chester, Pa., April 25.—William A. Just, of Gwynedd, was awarded the contract, at $8400, to build a bridge spanning Ridley River in Chester Park, by City Councils in special session here. The contract calls for completion in sixty days. Councilman T. Woodward Trainer opposed the letting of the contract at the present time, when the finances of the city are at a low ebb.

OLD MAN MINTON was bad-tempered this morning because some carving sets he had ordered came in. He began to unpack them immediately and check up the invoice. But Saturday's the big day in this store. Every little while he had to leave his job to wait on customers. Whenever he returned to the task of checking up the carving sets he got madder and madder. Finally he banged the back counter with his fist and said, "I've a good mind to say I'll never buy anything else from this concern. Ridiculous, sending in goods on Saturday. They should know it's our busy day!"

I said, "Why don't you leave them till Monday?"

"So, you're one of those bright young men who want to put off doing things, are you? Don't it easy to say, 'Do it tomorrow, do it Monday?' Never do it—never, that's what that means! Always unpack goods the day they come in and check them then. If there's anything wrong we can take it up with the makers right away. Don't give them a chance or * * * that reminds me, Mike, you signed for this last lot of goods, didn't you?"

"Yes, sir."

"Did you sign for them unexamined, as I told you?"

Mike's looks gave him away. He hadn't done so. He tried to lie, but believe me, if ever old man Minton or his wife ask you a question you can't get away with a lie. I never saw such a couple in my life. Really, I am positively scared of the old lady. I guess I can't stick to this job long but I'll hang on till I've paid back Philip what I owe him.

"How many times have I told you——" Every word was accompanied by a thump on the back counter. (That poor old back counter was pretty much battered and knocked about by many years' hard usage. Mike swears all the dents are caused by the old man banging on it so much.)

"How many times have I told you," he repeated, "always to sign for goods received as unexamined. Don't you know that if you merely sign the shipping receipt you are signing for them received in good condition? Remember that, Flint," he said turning to me.

"Yes, sir. I know," said Mike, "but——"

"Don't 'but' me!" snapped the old man. "If you knew and didn't do it, it wasn't ignorance, it was willfulness, and I won't have a willful boy working for me."

I was beginning to feel tired when 6 o'clock came and with it a rush of customers. Old Man and Mrs. Minton were both busy serving behind the counter. They seemed to know everybody by name and to hear them talk to these customers—why, the cooing of doves is rough stuff compared to it.

Mike was busy packing up goods and taking brief trips delivering packages. I was as busy as I could be serving customers and wrapping bundles.

At 10 o'clock we still had a few straggling customers coming. Old Man Minton turned to me and said, "I think you can go now."

"Thank you, sir."

"Er—er—, I want you to leave these two or three bundles on your way."

Those "two or three bundles" had to be delivered half over Wallingford.

I was just leaving the store with them when I heard the old man calling me again.

I stopped for a minute. "Your wages!"

Great scott! Think of forgetting your wages!

TODAY'S BUSINESS EPIGRAM

Plenty of work makes the clock go fast.

What does this mean to YOU?

Business Questions Answered

I am connected with the accounting department of a medium-sized dry goods store. We do a charge business and also a lot of C. O. D. business. Of late we have noticed a tendency for C. O. D. goods to be returned in much larger quantities than they used to be. We need to have only about 20 per cent rejected. Now we have over 35 per cent sent back. Perhaps you can tell where the trouble lies.—W. NORRIS.

One of the most frequent causes of C. O. D. returns is the undue persistence of sales people. You may have a too liberal P. M. system or a commission basis on increased sales, which causes the salesman to force goods on customers. Often when a salesman is too insistent customers will buy (?) because they do not like to appear small in the eyes of the store. This is foolish, but of course human. They order goods sent C. O. D. and as soon as they get home they tell their maids that if a parcel comes from so and so they don't want it. Another reason may be the careless packing and delivery of goods.

I want to ask your opinion, Mr. Whitehead of a business man who intrusts his telephone to a girl who when you call him up, says, "What name please? Your name, please?" Then she says, "What Jones?" "Jack Jones," you reply. "What do you want to see Mr. Brown for?" and you reply, "It's personal business," to which she answers, "Well, see, very busy, can you give me your message, and as soon as I get a chance I will send it to him over the phone. If I want him his office he would see me right away. Why can't he be just as a gentleman on the phone?"—PEPPER.

The reason is that he is a little fin god. He's a little two-by-four man with a little importance and a mighty big opinion of himself. The best cure for this kind of a man is a good old-fashioned spanking.

I take it as an axiom that the quicker I get a man on the phone the bigger caliber he is.

LOUISIANA "DRYS" PLAN COMPROMISE

Ratification Program May Displace All Other Proposed Liquor Legislation

New Orleans, April 25.

Members of the legislature and Dr. A. W. Turner, superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of Louisiana, are considering an agreement whereby opposition to ratification of the Federal prohibition amendment will be withdrawn and no other liquor legislation introduced at the coming session of the General Assembly, according to T. Semmes Jones, of Baton Rouge, chairman of the speakers' bureau of the State Council of Defense.

"Unless this plan receives serious consideration," Mr. Jones said, "we may have this State thrown into a bitter prohibition fight, which I, for one, do not want at this time."

"Only a man whose vision is blinded by brewery stock," he said, "or by internal brewery troubles can doubt that within the next six years the prohibitionists will carry enough legislatures to ratify the dry amendment to the Federal Constitution.

"There are twenty-six dry States in the United States now, and each of them will unquestionably ratify the amendment. That means that only ten wet States must be captured to make the amendment operative. In the first ninety days following the submission of the amendment five wet States ratified. The rest will come in fast, within two years, if not sooner."

FOREIGN COMMERCE OF PERU GROWING

Official Figures for 1916 Show United States Leading in Imports

Peru's foreign trade for the year 1916, according to official figures recently made public, amounted to $25,224,212 libras, of which 8,683,150 libras were imports and 16,541,062 libras exports.

The figures for the year 1915 were: Imports, 3,095,515 libras; exports, 14,122,671 libras; total, 17,218,616 libras. There was, therefore, an increase in imports for the year 1916 as compared with the preceding year of 5,587,635 libras, and in exports of 2,417,391 libras, or a total increase of 8,005,026 libras.

Estimating the value of the libra at $4.86, United States gold (the same as the British pound sterling), the value of the Peruvian foreign trade for the year 1916 was: Imports, $42,200,010; exports, $80,285,561; total, $122,589,571. On the same basis, the figures for 1915 were: Imports, $15,044,247; exports, $68,638,128; total, $83,682,475. This shows an increase in imports of $27,155,663, and in exports of $11,751,433, or a total increase in the foreign trade for 1916 of $38,907,096.

Imports in 1917 amounted to $24,882,847. Against this the 1916 record was $42,200,010. It is interesting to note that the United States, which in 1912 supplied about $5,700,000, rose to $8,539,525 in 1913, and then sank back to less than $8,000,000 in 1914 and 1915, leaped to $21,866,592 in 1916. This is rather more than three times the amount of British imports for 1916 and is about as large as the imports from all nations in 1912.

Some idea of what Peru wants from the rest of the world can be learned from the table of 1916 imports of major classifications, which indicates some of the main imports in the order of financial importance as follows: Metals and manufactures of metals, comestibles and condiments, cotton textiles and manufactures; tools, machinery and vehicles; stone, earth, coal, glass and chinaware; paints, gums, varnishes and dyes; linen, hemp, jute and other textile fibers and manufactures.
