TOBACCO CLASSED ESSENTIAL

War Industries Board Rules Weed Is War Necessity

The priorities division of the war industries board has recognized that tobacco is not a luxury but a real war necessity and has arranged to supply fuel and other necessities to plants connected with the industry and give it such preferential treatment as it needs.

Some time ago the war industries board declared the tobacco industry to be a nonessential. This would have deprived the industry of all preference regarding coal, labor and transportation and would have seriously crippled it.

Men prominent in the tobacco industry, and their friends in Congress, protested against this classification asserting that tobacco was a real war necessity with the army and navy and with the civil population also. They presented a strong argument for preferential treatment of the industry explaining the serious injury it would do people in the tobacco industry in the various States and the serious discontent it would arouse in the army and navy and throughout the civil population of the country, if tobacco was declared a nonessential.

IN MEMORIAM

THOMAS McGREGOR LEAVER was born in Concord, New Hampshire, October 30, 1875, and died at Concord on May 17, 1918. He graduated from the Concord High School in June, 1893, and immediately entered the employ of the Concord and Montreal Railroad. In July, 1895, the general offices of this railroad were consolidated with those of the Fitchburg and Maine, at Boston, where Mr. Leaver took a more responsible position. In 1897 he associated himself with Mr. Montgomery Rollins and aided materially in the compilation and publishing of the well-known Rollins Guide, which have been the standard throughout the world. On March 23, 1899, the banking firm of Montgomery Rollins & Co. was formed and located at 27 State street, Boston, and Mr. Leaver gave up the railroad business and entered the employ of this banking house. This firm was in a few years succeeded by Baker, Ayling & Co., on the opening of their Philadelphia office. Mr. Leaver was selected to establish the house in that city. He was successful in establishing this office, and it is today one of the largest branches of the banking house. About three years ago Mr. Leaver was selected by the officers of the branch in Chicago which was well established, and it is greatly to be regretted that he could not have lived to see a success similar to that which he brought about in Philadelphia. On June 1, 1916, the firm of Baker, Ayling & Young succeeded the old firm, and Mr. Leaver was taken in as the resident Chicago partner.

Every undertaking which he made was built upon a firm foundation, every friendship which he formed was a permanent one. From all over the country have there been sympathies extended to his personal and business families.

Rare it is to find a character which could, under the conditions of his illness, sustain the bravery and courage not only for himself, but for his associates, and which was so beautiful to the last. There are many soldiers who are not the armed men. Such a one was Mr. Leaver in the way he bore himself throughout the struggle. Never was there a whimper of discouragement, and all of this kindliness and thoughtfulness was in consideration of his family and friends.

He left, besides his mother, Mrs. William Leaver, of Concord, N. H., a sister, Mrs. Nathaniel W. Stubbs, of Concord, and a brother, Henry A. Leaver, of Tacoma, Washington.
