PRIESTHOOD COURSE IS CUT

Drain of War Induces Pope to Permit Earlier Ordination

Students for the priesthood may make application for ordination upon completion of a three-year course in theology in the future, according to a notification from Rome received by Cardinal Gibbons, and transmitted to church officers here.

Urgent demand for priests because of the drain caused by many entering the army resulted in the archbishops of the United States requesting that the four-year course be shortened, and Pope Benedict, according to a cablegram received by Cardinal Gibbons from Cardinal Gasparri, readily gave his consent to the change.

The curriculum of the four-year course will be consolidated in such a way that nearly all the topics touched upon will be included in the three-year course.

All seminaries in the country are affected by the ruling.
