Farm and Household.

Harvesting in Eastern and Middle States.

In New England, according to universal custom, the thrashing machinery is owned by professional thrashers, who itinerate from farm to farm, and thrash out the grain either for a specified sum per day or per bushel, or for a toll of the thrashed grain, ranging from a fifteenth to a tenth of the whole. The thrasher furnishes from two to four horses and two men; the farmer furnishes the other teams and labor. In several counties in northern New England the thrasher gets from $5 to $6 a day, besides board for man and horse. The machines used in such cases usually thrash 100 bushels wheat or 200 bushels of oats per day; hence, where the job is paid for by the bushel, wheat is charged at twice the price of oats; wheat costs from 5 to 12 cents per bushel, and oats from 4 to 8 cents. The highest cash rates noted in New England counties is in Sagadahoc, Maine, where the thrasher receives 7 cents per bushel for oats, 8 cents for barley, and 12 cents for wheat. In some cases the farmer hires the machine and runs it himself. Occasionally the two horse tread machine is used, but in general the apparatus employed embraces the latest improvements, and requires from eight to ten horses to drive it. No reports of steam machinery in this region. In many counties the grass crop and dairy farming have restricted grain raising to a very narrow area, rendering the thrashing operation so unimportant that the use of machinery would not be profitable. In Norfolk, Massachusetts, thrashing is done almost entirely with a flail.—In the three southern New England states, machinery, in both thrashing and harvesting, is used to only a limited extent, on account of the small amount of grain farming.

In the middle States steam-power is, in many places, superseding horse-power, a circumstance which necessarily modifies the arrangements for thrashing. In such cases the thrasher sends one or two hands, an engineer, and a machine-feeder, while the farmer finds coal and water and boards the men, besides furnishing labor sufficient to take the straw from the machine and arrange it in stacks. Steam-thrashing on such terms generally costs about 5 cents per bushel for wheat, 4 cents for barley, and 3 cents for oats, besides the extra labor hired by the farmer. In Camden, N. J., wheat is thrashed by steam at 10 cents, per bushel or by horse-power at 8 cents; in such cases, however, the thrasher furnishes a larger proportion of the labor. In Lancester steam-machinery thrashes 400 bushels per day, at 6 cents, while in Juniata the steam-separator delivers the grain ready for market at 5 cents per bushel. Steam-machinery is also used extensively in other counties in Pennsylvania, and in New Castle, Delaware. In a few counties the small two horse tread-machines are used. This is generally the case where farmers use their own machinery and employ wet or winter weather in thrashing grain in their own barns. Such farmers often thrash the grain of their neighbors, tolling every tenth or twelfth bushel for their services. Where men engage as professional thrashers, they find it more profitable to invest their capital in machines of greater power and capacity. These machines require from two to six horses for their transportation from farm to farm. The horse-power is utilized in driving the machinery, the farmer supplying horses enough to make a team of six to twelve animals. The thrasher either feeds the machine himself or hires a man for this service, and another to drive the team; the farmer hires men enough to make up a gang of twelve or fifteen. The efficiency of these machines is attested by the prices charged for their use, amounting, in some counties, to $10 per day, with board for two men and two horses. Machines of inferior capacity realize about $6 per day. In some cases these machines thrash wheat at 4 cents per bushel; barley, 3 cents; oats or buckwheat, 2 cents. Where the thrasher furnishes the entire horse-power the cost is greater, rising to 10 cents for wheat and 4 cents for oats. In some counties the thrasher tolls the thrashed grain, receiving from 4½ to 8 per cent. of wheat, and nearly double of oats. Occasionally the thrasher receives from 35 to 50 cents per hundred sheaves, wheat sheaves averaging about 6 bushels of thrashed grain per hundred. There is considerable variation in the minor details but the general usages are mostly the same. The tendency is toward the use of the latest improvements in labor-saving machinery.

Capabilities of an Acre.

J. M. Smith, a market gardener of Green Bay, furnishes some interesting statements of experiments in high culture. He has found the rule invariable, not a single exception to it, that the more he has spent in cultivation and manuring the greater have been the net profits per acre. Last season he cultivated fourteen acres, and began with a more thorough and expensive cultivation than ever before. The result was, that, although a "terrific drought," one of the dryest seasons ever known in that region prevailed, after spending $3,986, or $384 per acre, he had a better balance than for any previous year.

He appears to regard constant cultivation, especially through drought, in connection with copious manuring, as all-important.—Stable manure is the standard, with such use of superphosphates, plaster, lime, ashes, and other manures as experience and good sense point out.—"After you have learned how to spend money to the best advantage," he remarks a larger profit may be made by laying out $300 per acre than with less.—After the second year, if your land does not pay all its expenses, taxes, and ten per cent on $1,000 per acre, there is something wrong somewhere. I have some acres of land that did not pay expenses for two years but for a number of years past have not failed to pay 01 per cent on at least $2,000 per acre. I expect my whole garden to do more than that in a short time."

He adds that he is now aiming at 1,000 bushels of onions per acre, then a crop of carrots or turnips, or 500 bushels of early potatoes; or, if strawberries, 12,800 quarts or 400 bushels per acre. This amount of strawberries is not wholly impossible, as we have known, under our own observation, this rate on two-thirds of an acre.—Massachusetts Ploughman.

PEACH FRITTERS.—A batter of eight eggs, eight tablespoonfuls flour, and one quart of milk. Have ready in a frying pan some nice butter, hot. To every tablespoon of the butter add half a peach, and fry, draining each through a skimmer as you take it up. Serve with sugar.

FADGE.—1 pound brown wheat flour 1 pound butter, a little cold water; knead roll, cut in cakes 1 inch thick bake on an iron plate in the oven.

Sprigs of wintergreen or ground ivy will drive away red ants branches of wormwood will serve the same purpose for black ants.

How Pat was Hung.

In days of old, when men were hung
For misdemeanors small,
And crime was punished on the spot,
The same to one and all,
An Englishman, an Irishman,
A Scotsman, hopeless three,
To die were sentenced; so the Judge
Said each could choose a tree
From which to hang. The Englishman,
He chose the brave old oak;
The Scotsman thought the ash would do
For him to yield the ghost,
The Irishman, he had some doubts
As to the truth of this;
Said he, "Yer honor, do we swing
From any tree we wish?"
His Honor vouched for all he said,
And urged him to be quick.
"Arrah!" said Pat, "I'll choose the tree
Where gooseberries are picked."
"Ha! ha! ha!" roared out the Judge.
"Why, Patrick, that's too small!"
"Too small?" said Pat, "An' sure I'll wait Until it does grow tall."

A Detroit Man's Joke.

He did not look like a joker. One to sit and study his face would have said that his soul was so lost in melancholy that he didn't care two cents whether the sun set at noon or stayed up until seven o'clock. He entered the ladies sitting room at the Central depot, walked up to a woman whose husband had left the room about ten minutes previously, and calmly inquired:

"Madam, your husband went out to see see the river, didn't he."

"Yes—why?" she asked turning pale in an instant.

"He was a tall, slim man, wasn't he?"

"He was," she replied, rising up and turning still paler.

"Had he red hair?"

"He had—oh! What has happened?"

"Weighed about 180 pounds?"

"Yes—yes—where is he—where is my husband?" she exclaimed.

"Couldn't swim, could he?"

"He's drowned—my husband is drowned!" she wailed.

"Had silver watch-chain?" continued the stranger.

"Where is my husband—where is the body?" she gasped.

"Do not get excited, madam. Did your husband have on a gray suit?"

"Yes—oh! my Thomas! my Thomas!"

"And stoga boots?"

"Let me see him—let me see him!" she cried.

"Come this way, madam, but do not get excited. There, is that your husband across the street at that peanut stand?"

"Why, yes, that's him; that's my husband!" she exclaimed joyfully. "I thought you said that he was drowned."

"No, madam, I did not. I saw him buying peanuts and I believed it my duty to say to you that peanuts are not healthy at this season of the year!"

He slid softly out, and she stood there and chewed her parasol and stared after him as if he were a menagerie on wheels.

Met His Fate.

A New Orleans Judge, riding in the cars recently, from a single glance at the countenance of a lady by his side, imagined he knew her, and ventured to remark that the day was pleasant. She only answered:

"Yes."

"Why do you wear a veil?"

"Lest I attract attention."

"It is the province of gentlemen to admire," replied the gallant man of law.

"Not when they are married."

"But I am not."

"Indeed!"

"Oh, no; I am a bachelor."

The lady quietly removed her veil, disclosing to the astonished magistrate the face of his mother-in-law.

He has been a raving maniac ever since

How Pat Stopped the Train

The Quincy Herald tells how a conductor on the Toledo, Wabash and Western Railroad, on his way with a heavy frieght train, behind time, saw a man frantically waving a monstrous umbrella to stop the train. The brakes went down and with a mighty effort the heavy train was brought to a stop. The individual with the umbrella turned out to be Irish, and the following dialogue ensued:

"Can I see the conductor?"

"You can; that's me."

"Is your name Charles O'Neil?"

"It is."

"Are you from Ireland?"

"I am."

"And are you from the county of Kilkenny?"

"I am not."

"Well be gorra, Misther O'Niel, it is sorry indade I am to hear that last, for I had an own cousin named Charles O'Neil lave the Ould Dart and the Kilkenny, thirty-two years ago this coming December, and it's only a fortnight ago I heard there was one Charles O'Neil bossin this train, and how did I know but what ye might be the same cousin? God bless yer sowl?"

"And is that all you want?"

"Be gorra, isn't that enough? What more could an honest man want than to see a cousin that he didn't set eyes on for thirty-two years?"

A Deep Plot.—When the druggist asked what she wanted, she said she'd take ten grains of arsenic.

'For rats?' he asked.

'No, sir.'

'For cats?'

'No, sir.'

There was a pause, and then she said: 'I want to keep it in the house until my husband is elected alderman. He will very likely vote to pave some street with cobblestone, and then I want to poison him!'

The druggist gave her down weight to encourage her.

Disappointed.—A colored man, employed as a deck hand on a propeller, was rushing around town yesterday and inquiring where the polls were.

'Polls? Polls?' repeated a citizen, 'why there's no election going on now.'

'There hain't?'

'No, sir.'

The man stood for a moment looking greatly disappointed, and then turned for the river with a remark:

'And now the programme is to find dat sleek young man who said day was paying six dollars apiece for votes!'

What I Know About Vegetine.

SOUTH BOSTON, Feb. 9, 1871.

H. R. STEVENS, Esq.

Dear Sir—I have had considerable experience with the Vegetine. For dyspepsia, general debility and impure blood, the Vegetine is superior to anything which I have ever tried. I commenced taking Vegetine about the middle of last winter, and after using a few bottles it entirely cured me of dyspepsia, and my blood never was in so good order as at the present time. It will afford me pleasure to give any further particulars relative to what I know about this good medicine to any one who will call or address me at my residence, 336 Athens street.

Very respectfully,
MONROE PARKER,
336 Athens street.

DYSPEPSIA.

SYMPTOMS—Want of appetite, rising of food and wind from the stomach, acidity of the stomach, heartburn, dryness and whiteness of the tongue in the morning, sense of distension in the stomach and bowels, sometimes rumbling pain; costiveness, which is occasionally interrupted by diurnal paleness of the urine. The mouth is clammy, or has a sour or bitter taste. Other frequent symptoms are waterbrash, pulsation of the heart, headache, and disorders of the senses, as seeing double, etc. There is general debility languor and aversion to motion; dejection of the spirits, disturbed sleep, and frightful dreams.

Gained Fifteen Pounds of Flesh.

SOUTH BERWICK, ME., Jan. 17, 1872.

H. R. STEVENS, Esq.:

Dear Sir—I have had dyspepsia in its worst form for the last ten years, and have taken hundreds of dollars worth of medicine without obtaining any relief. In September last I commenced taking the Vegetine, since which time my health has steadily improved.

My food digests well, and I have gained fifteen pounds of flesh. There are several others in this place taking the Vegetine, all have obtained relief.

Yours, truly,
THOMAS E. MOORE,
Overseer of card room, Portsmouth Co.'s Mills.

ALL DISEASES OF THE BLOOD.

If Vegetine will relieve pain, cleanse, purify and cure such diseases, restoring the patient to perfect health after trying different physicians, many remedies, suffering for years, is it not conclusive proof, if you are sufferer you can be cured? Why is this medicine performing such great cures? It works in the blood in the circulating fluid. It can truly be called the Great Blood Purifier. The great source of disease originates in the blood; and no medicine that does not act directly upon it to purify and renovate has any just claim upon public attention.

GOOD EVIDENCE.

CINCINNATI, Nov. 26, 1872.

MR. H. R. STEVENS:

Dear Sir—The two bottles of Vegetine furnished me by your agent my wife has used with great benefit. For a long time she has been troubled with dizziness and costiveness; these troubles are now entirely removed by the use of Vegetine.

She was also troubled with dyspepsia and general debility, and has been greatly benefited.

THOMAS GILMORE,
225½ Walnut Street.

RELIABLE EVIDENCE.

H. R. STEVENS:

Dear Sir—I will most cheerfully add my testimony to the great number you have already received in favor of your great and good medicine, Vegetine, for I do not think enough can be said in its praise, for I was troubled over thirty years with that dreadful disease, Catarrh, and had such bad coughing spells that it would seem as though I could never breathe any more, and Vegetine has cured me; and I do feel to thank God all the time that there is so good a medicine as Vegetine, and I also think it one of the best medicines for coughs and weak sinking feelings at the stomach, and advise everybody to take the Vegetine, for I can assure them it is one of the best medicines that ever was.

APPRECIATION.

CHARLESTON, MASS., March 19 1869.

H. R. STEVENS:

This is to certify that I have used your "Blood Preparation" (Vegetine) in my family for several years, and think that, for scrofula or Cankerous Humorous or Rheumatic affections, it cannot be excelled; and as a blood purifier and spring medicine it is the best thing I ever used; and I have used almost everything. I can cheerfully recommend it to any one in need of such a medicine.

Yours respectfully,
MRS. A. A. DINSMORE,
