For the first time since the War Department began publication of casualty lists from overseas there appears today the name of a civilian on the official report.

Miss Adeline P. Gibson, 2001 Walnut street, is classified in the list as having died of disease. An account of her death in France of pneumonia was published in the EVENING PUBLIC LEDGER about two weeks ago. Miss Gibson was engaged in the Y. M. C. A. work abroad.

Three soldiers from this city are reported in today's death list. Tomeo Foeggler, 2652 West Somerset street, a cook, and Private Gustave S. Williams, 1826 North Twentieth street, died of disease. The one Philadelphia soldier killed in action is Private Sam Sanson, 946 Jackson street. He was previously reported missing.

Among the wounded from this vicinity today are Lieutenant Charles E. Hammel, 902 Farragut terrace, and Edgar Harley, 1776 Dicks avenue.

Severely gassed at the battle of Chateau-Thierry and wounded in another engagement September 5, Sergeant Hamel participated in both the first and last engagements in which American troops fought. Sergeant Hamel is listed in the official casualty list as a lieutenant, though according to letters written to relatives in this city he is not a "real" lieutenant.

"I am not a 'real' officer, for I have no commission, but I am acting lieutenant," he said in one letter.

Sergeant Hamel modestly explained that he had been obliged to rush forward and take the places of his officers who were all killed on one occasion, and that he had retained the place.

Sergeant Hamel is a member of the Machine Gun Company of the 109th Infantry. It was the machine-gun companies of the 109th and 315th infantries that with a gruelling machine-gun fire, aided by heavy artillery in the rear, routed the Germans from a hill where they had taken refuge and were shelling the American and Frtench troops in that sector mercilessly, by completely taking off the top of the hill at the battle of Sedan on the third day of the attack.

Sergeant Hamel enlisted immediately when war was declared and trained at Hancock until May last, when his unit embarked.

Though the wounds he received were of a serious nature he has recovered and is now enjoying the "sweets of victory" with the army of occupation in Germany.

Previous to entering the service Sergeant Hamel held a responsible position at the Frankford Arsenal.

The Philadelphians on the honor roll today are classified as follows: Died of disease, three; killed in action, one; wounded severely, five; wounded with degree undetermined, seventeen; wounded slightly, ten, and missing in action, one. There are only ten corrections included in today's report.

ON NATION'S HONOR ROLL

HERBERT A. DIXON, Gassed — MYER HOFFMAN, Wounded — HARMON BLUMBERG, Shell Shocked, Gassed

SKETCHES OF THE HEROES

Private Harmon Blumberg, 313 Bainbridge street, who sailed for overseas in May wrote a card home saying that he arrived safely and nothing else was heard from him until Christmas when he was reported missing.

Unheard of for Seven Months, Returns Wounded, Gassed and Shell-Shocked

A few days ago it was learned that he had arrived in this country with a contingent of wounded. He is in now in a base hospital in Indianapolis, Ind., suffering from shell shock and a shrapnel wound over the right eye. He was also gassed.

According to recent letters to relatives he is recovering rapidly and is expected home for a visit soon.

Private Blumberg enlisted in the National Guard of Pennsylvania early in 1917 and later at Hancock when the 109th was federalized became a member of Company G, 109th Infantry. He took part in several engagements before he was finally disabled.

Private Meyer Hoffman, 1355 South Seventh street, one of the first selected men to go to Camp Meade, was gassed October 15, recovered and returned to the firing line only to be again wounded. This time the wound struck in the foot by a piece of shrapnel, and wounded very severely, but according to recent letters from him to his brother, Max Hoffman, he is now recovering in a base hospital in France since last April.

Previous to entering the service he was employed as a coatmaker and made his home with his brother at the Seventh street address.

Private Paul N. Snell, 2363 North Orkney street, was wounded October 21, according to the War Department. He is a member of the 319th Machine Gun Battalion, and has been in the service since May last. Previous to becoming a soldier he was employed by the Pennsylvania R. R. Company and had made his home with a brother, Martin Snell at the Orkney street address.

Private Martin J. Fahey, 2233 West Somerset street is reported to have been wounded July 30. The extent of his wounds has not been learned. However, in a recent letter to relatives he said he had virtually recovered and was living in a dugout fitted up with modern conveniences near the spot where the former German Crown Prince had his headquarters.

He was drafted last April and after three weeks' training at Camp Meade was transferred to Camp Upton from where he was sent overseas in May. He is a steel worker and was formerly employed at the Midvale Works.

Private William S. McMaster, twenty-six years old, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward McMaster, of 101 Ripka street, was gassed and wounded in action, according to official notification. Private McMaster, who is a member of the 136th Machine-Gun Company, returned on the George Washington and is now at Camp Dix.

Private Charles L. Lipp, of Company K, 111th Infantry, was wounded in the Argonne Forest, October 2, according to notification received by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Lipp, 137 East Washington lane, Germantown. He was a member of the 56th Regiment of the Pennsylvania National Guard and trained at Camp Hancock before going overseas.

Jonas C. Hobson, twenty-three years old, of the 136th Machine-Gun Company, was gassed the last week of last September, according to notification received by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Hobson, of 1316 Terrace street, Manayunk. Before entering the service he was employed by the Midvale Steel Company.

Private James Doyle, twenty-four years old, of Company I, 315th Infantry, was wounded in action November 7, according to notification received by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Doyle, 430 West Hortter street.

CUBANS WANT U. S. AID

Liberals May Urge America to Supervise Next Election on Island

Havana, Cuba, Feb. 3.—(By A. P.)—Should conditions warrant action, the Liberal party will call upon the United States to supervise the next Cuban presidential election.

This was decided upon early today by the National Assembly of the party after a long debate. The petition will not be presented at once, but will be held by the executive committee until it is apparent that supervision is "a necessary guarantee of the purity of the suffrage," according to an announcement made by the assembly.
